ALMOST A FATALITY.

Woman Narrowly Escapes Being Hit By Large Rock.

BLASTING ON THE NEW RAILROAD.

Stone Crashes Through Window, Landing On Bed Just Vacated By Mrs. Hattie Whitcomb.

An accident which might have resulted seriously, if not fatally, occurred Monday morning at Blanchardville, where work on the construction of the Southern New England railroad is now being carried on, and Mrs. Hattie A. Whitcomb, who lives on what is known as the Maggie O'Neil place, is thankful that she escaped unharmed.

The new railroad runs near the house occupied by the Whitcombs, and a steam shovel was being moved to a new position early Monday morning. A large stone impeded its progress, and this was blasted. A large fragment crashed through a window of the Whitcomb house.

Only a few moments before Mrs. Whitcomb left her bed to wait on her husband, who was ill, and by so doing undoubtedly escaped being killed, as the stone landed on the pillow where her head had been.

The damage to the house was not great, and the contractor hastened to make amends, arranging to repair all damage.

To Appear in Springfield.

Thorndike Boy To Take Leading Part at Court Square.

Thomas V. Morrison, a former Thorndike boy winning fame on the stage, will appear at the Court Square theatre in Springfield Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings of next week in the play "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine." Mr. Morrison appears in the play as Dave Tolliver, whose love for his beautiful cousin June causes much trouble during the progress of the play. Mr. Morrison spent the summer in Thorndike as guest of his sister, Mrs. Annie McCuska. Many of his friends are planning to attend the performance.

The Stafford Springs Fair.

The Stafford Springs fair is in a class by itself. The crowd that this fair always draws is one of the features. The student of human nature can find plenty of interest in the big mob of hustling, laughing, talking humanity. The fakirs who follow the crowds are out in force at Stafford, and the midway is a busy, noisy thoroughfare, with all kinds of inducements. Another feature of the Stafford fair is the big free platform show. The attractions this year include Dare Devil Volo in his thrilling loop-the-loop bicycle act; Tompkins and his herd of high school horses; the Grunathes Family of seven acrobats, fresh from an engagement of a year at the New York Hippodrome; the Ernesto trio, and a number of other star events. The horse races include two big stake races for purses of $600 each, and five other fast races for smaller purses.

Committee Organizes.

The executive committee of the Hitchcock Free Academy in Brimfield held a meeting Saturday evening and organized with the choice of Robert Streeter as chairman and Miss Alice Sawin as secretary. The other members of the committee as elected at the recent triennial meeting of the association are Edward B. Brown, M. Anna Tarbell, Margaret Dunsmore, together with the secretary and recording treasurer of the association, who are Miss Mary Warren and Munroe Tarbell.

Railway Office To Move.

Will Occupy Spacious Quarters In Holbrook's New Block.

Ever since the announcement was made that A. W. Holbrook was to build a new business block on Main street there has been much speculation as to what business the new structure would house. Rumors have been numerous that this or that business man was to change his location, but nothing definite could be learned. There has also been persistent reports that the street railway waiting room would be moved to the new block, but there has been no official confirmation up to this time.

It is now definitely known that the street railway will occupy the second store from the east end of the block. The front will be used for a waiting room, with the dispatcher's office in a small space in one front corner. At the rear, extending back of the store to the west, will be the room for motormen and conductors. One side of the waiting room will be devoted to a stand for the sale of confectionery, cigars, periodicals, and the usual line of articles found in such places.

While the names of the occupants of the other stores are not given out, Mr. Holbrook states that there is to be no change of local business men. All the stores are to be occupied by new business, such as is not now conducted here. Two of them — those on the corners — are already leased, and the small room next the waiting room has numerous applicants; the actual tenant is not yet decided upon.

BRIMFIELD.

Mr. and Mrs. George W. Brackett of Lynn have been recent visitors in town.

Monroe Tarbell, a junior in the Massachusetts Agricultural College, spent Sunday at his home in Brimfield.

Rev. J. T. Meehan will preach in the Advent chapel at 10.45 Sunday morning: subject, "Christian Department.

Mrs. Stoughton and Miss Stoughton have returned to their home in Mount Vernon, N. Y., after spending a month at the home of Mrs. Samuel W. Brown.

Principal and Mrs. George F. Kenney entertained over the week-end Mrs. Kenney's mother, Mrs. Newhall, and her uncle, Wilbur Newhall of East Saugus.

Lothrop Jennings, the elder son of Rev. and Mrs. William Jennings, entertained about 40 of his young friends at the parsonage Friday afternoon in honor of his ninth birthday.

Rally day was observed in the Congregational church Sunday with appropriate exercises. Special preparation had been made for the Sunday school by Mrs. F. Edgar Brown, superintendent of the primary department, and an interesting program was carried out by the pupils. In the evening the Christian Endeavor carried out a good program, with special music, including a vocal solo by Erford Corbin, vocal duet by Miss Alice Sawin and Mr. Corbin, and several selections by a male quartet consisting of Erford Corbin, Rev. William Jennings, Stanley Hicks and Fred Locke.

BELCHERTOWN.

Death of Alvertus Morse.

Alvertus Morse, 76, died at the home of his sister in Ludlow last Friday night. He sustained a shock the early part of the week from which he never recovered. Mr. Morse was a well-known resident of Belchertown, being a prominent farmer, veteran of the civil war, and for many years president of the Belchertown creamery. Mr. Morse had spent the winter for many years in Florida, and of late had made his home with his sister in Ludlow. A pathetic feature is the fact that his daughter Bessie, (Mrs. Perley Davis) of Granby, was buried last Saturday.

Mrs. Daisy Howard will move her family to Georgia the latter part of the month.

Myron H. West of Chicago, Ill., with his wife and son, have been visiting his parents in town.

The Missionary Society of the Methodist church has elected these officers: President, Mrs. Belle Morse; vice president, Mrs. Hubbard; recording secretary, Mrs. Cora Morse; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Clara French; treasurer, Miss Sara Lincoln; executive committee, Mrs. Plaintiff, Mrs. W. T. Hale.

Mrs. Bessie Morse Davis died Friday at the Sanderson sanitarium in Springfield. She was the daughter of the late Alvertus Morse of Ludlow, and was born and had always lived in Belchertown, where she had a large circle of friends. Besides her husband, Perley Davis of Granby, and two children, she leaves a sister, Mrs. E. E. Gay, and three brothers, Raymond Morse of Springfield, Alvertus of Northampton, and Ransom Morse of Worcester. Funeral services were held in Granby and burial was in the cemetery in South Belchertown.

Thorndike School Has Fine Record.

Nearly Perfect Attendance Record For Past Month. Reduction In Tardiness Still Continues. To Give Certificate of Merit.

The monthly report of attendance for the Palmer schools for the first month of the school year is an interesting one in several respects. In the first place, it shows an increased enrollment of 61 over the enrollment for the same month last year, an increase of 4 per cent. A glance at the enrollment of many of the rooms in the various buildings shows that the same rooms are over-crowded. Thirty-five pupils to a room is an ideal number with which to work; even forty pupils per room does not make an over-crowded condition; but every pupil above forty causes a bad condition for both teacher and pupil.

The percentage of attendance for this month is 97.65, an increase of one per cent over the same month last year; 95 per cent is generally considered to be an ideal one. It will be noted upon a careful examination that the percentage of attendance in each building in town is very high; the high school with 98.52 per cent, the Bondsville school with 98.28 per cent, and the Thorndike school with 99 per cent being particularly noteworthy. The good attendance of five rooms in particular is worthy of special notice; all of these rooms went through the month without a single tardy case. These rooms with their percentages of attendance follow: 7th grade, Palmer, 100 per cent; grades 6 and 7, Bondsville, 100 per cent; Palmer Center, 100 per cent; grade 9, Palmer, 99.8 percent; grades 8 and 9, Bondsville, 99.62 per cent.

The reduction in tardiness still continues; although the enrollment has increased 61, a reduction of 40 tardy marks has occurred. Thirty-four cases were recorded this month against seventy-four for the same month last year. The Bondsville school with 258 pupils is not charged with a single case, a remarkably fine showing. Last year 431 cases of tardiness were recorded against 916 for the previous year, a reduction of 53 per cent. It is the desire of the school authorities to reduce these 431 cases at least another 50 per cent. If the good work of the past month is continued there is no question that this desire will be gratified.

The school committee at a meeting on Monday night of this week voted to issue a nicely gotten-up certificate of merit to every pupil who is perfect in attendance for the present school year. This, undoubtedly, will prove an incentive to the pupils to continue their good attendance. The school authorities have many times expressed their appreciation to the Journal for printing the attendance statistics. They feel that, in a large measure, the Journal's co-operation has aided them in their efforts to secure better attendance. The Journal will be pleased to co-operate with the schools by continuing the publication of this statistical knowledge. The report:

Extinguish Blaze In Ware.

Crew of Palmer Car Do Good Work. Man Falls Asleep While Smoking.

The crew of a Palmer car did effective work in averting what might have been a serious blaze in Ware Saturday night.

Motorman Daniel Moran and Conductor George Sullivan went to the Hampshire House just before midnight to get running orders from the Palmer office. They discovered a blaze in a room occupied by Joseph Guertin, a baker employed by William Rohan. He had been smoking in bed and had fallen asleep. The railway men took the burning bedding and threw it into an alley in the rear, quickly extinguishing the blaze.

No damage was done aside from the burned bedding,

Death of Former Belchertown Resident.

He spent most of his life in Belchertown, and for many years conducted a wheelwright shop on Nortn Main street. He was a Civil W r veteran. For 25 years he was marshall of Vernon lodge of Masons. ## Strike At Wire Mill.

Three Rivers Poles Refuse to Walk to Front Entrance.

A strike of short duration and with no serious results occurred at the mill of the Wright Wire company this week.

About 100 Poles, who live at Three Rivers, walk down the tracks of the Central Vermont railway, entering the mill yard through a gate in the rear. A fence has been built around the mill property and Monday morning these employes found the gate locked and were obliged to go to the front gate, a distance of about 500 feet outside the fence. They resented this and refused to go to work.

Part of the number, however, desired to go to their work and started to enter the front gate, whereupon their companions jeered at them and finally began throwing stones, hitting some of them. After a time the dissatisfied ones marched away.

The following morning the gate which was the cause of the trouble was unlocked, and upon finding the usual passage open the men returned to their work. As there was no other grievance this ended the trouble.

William Arcotte has sold his interest in the Central street restaurant to his partner, J. A. Collette.

HAMPDEN.

Howard T. Ballard and family of Chicago have returned to their home after spending a three-weeks' vacation with his mother, Mrs. Delia M. Ballard.

Mr. and Mrs. Minor Wait of Essex, Ct., have moved into W. J. Mackay's house to run the farm and take the place of Mr. and Mrs. Cody, who recently moved to Connecticut.

Spencer H. Wood of New Britain, Ct., accompanied by his sons, Richard S. of New Britain and Fred B. Wood of Springfield, and three nephews, Elliot A. Bliss and Clinton W. Bliss of Springfield and Walter Bliss of Longmeadow, was in Hampden Sunday and attended the service in the Congregational church in the morning. Mr. Wood is a native of Hampden, but went away when he was 16. In spite of the rain the whole party visited the site of Mr. Wood's old home on the hill south of the village. This is known as the Hubbard Wood place.

FACING PROBLEM.

Must Find Additional Quarters For School Children.

PALMER GRAMMAR SCHOOL CROWDED

Lower Grade Rooms Average 51 to 54 Each. Plans Under Consideration By Superintendent.

The school committee is facing the problem of finding additional quarters for the pupils who wish to attend the Palmer grammar school. The situation is a serious one, and the solution not easy.

There are in the building at present 469 pupils in 11 rooms, an average of 42 to a room; but, because so many in the upper grades leave school to go to work the 7th, 8th and 9th grade rooms have only 25 to 35 pupils, while the 1st grade room, the 1st and 2d, the 2d and the 3d have 51 to 54 each. This is altogether too many to permit a teacher to do justice either to the pupils or herself, and some other place must be found for a portion of the attendance. A new room, for grades 1 and 2, was opened last November, and later a room for grades 4 and 5, and there is no more space in the building. Superintendent Hobson has several plans under consideration, and a decision will doubtless be reached in the near future.

WARE.

Sustains Painful Injuries.

Henry Lavigne was removed to the Ware hospital Friday by Dr. D. M. Ryan. Mr. Lavigne is a carpenter employed by the E. K. Watson company in the construction of the new power house for the George H. Gilbert Company at Gilbertville. He fell from a staging he was building to the ground, 25 feet below, and sustained a fracture of the right leg and minor bruises.

Ware council, Knights of Columbus, have moved into their new quarters in the Kaplan building. They will occupy the three rooms on the second floor on the North street side.

Alfred Lanier of Maple avenue, employed by Lewis N. Gilbert as a caretaker, ran into a plank on Mr. Gilbert's grounds while chasing a cow Saturday evening. It was found he had sustained a fractured collarbone.

The friends of Miss Blanche S. Dunbar of South street gave her a kitchen shower Monday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Potter of Mechanic street. The event was in honor of Miss Dunbar's approaching marriage to Harry Potter, which will occur this month.

When Liveryman P. E. Sweeney was driving two horses to fire headquarters to take the hook and ladder out for the parade Saturday they broke away from him and started to run through Water street. Much damage might have been done but for the bravery of a Polish man, who stood on the sidewalk. He sprang between the two and stopped them quickly.

WARREN.

Brousseau—Keith.

Miss Grace E. Brosseau and John Warren Keith were united in marriage Wednesday noon at the home of the bride's parents on Washington, street Rev. John L. Findlay performing the ceremony. The maid of honor was Miss Florence Brousseau of Springfield, a sister of the bride, and the best man was Charles O. Keith of Boston, brother of the groom. A wedding lunch was served after the ceremony, and Mr. and Mrs. Keith left in the afternoon for a trip in the groom's automobile. Upon their return they will live with the groom's mother on East Main street. Mr. Keith is proprietor of Keith's bakery and catering business.

Thomas Nevins has sold his carpenter shop on River street to Lowell S. Ellis.

Robert Nichols has been spending a few days at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Nichols.

Marriage intentions were filed Monday with Town Clerk Duncan as follows: Benjamin F. Tourtelotte of Warren and Miss Alice M. Martin of Nashua; Bronislaw Zadroga of Warren and Miss Wladeslana Olender of Brookfield; Albert B. Brodeuro of Warren and Miss Lena Vigneaux of West Warren.

Joseph Mason Jr. was painfully injured Monday while at work in the plant of the Warren steam pump company. He was operating a planer and caught his right hand so as to bend it back. The middle finger was dislocated and one of the bones in the back of the hand was injured. He was attended by Dr. C. A. Deland.

PERSUADING MARY PROVED BIG JOB

By JUNE GAHAN.

"Have you spoken to Mary, Agatha?" asked Mr. Dickson of his wife.

"You mean about Ford Layton?"

"Yes—I happened to meet young Disbrow coming out of the gate and it set me thinking. I hope Mary won't be dazzled by Disbrow's glitter and flash and overlook the pure gold of Ford's character."

Mrs. Dickson shook her head. "I'm afraid she will, James—girls are that way."

"You were not—eh?" Mr. Dickson pinched his wife's plump cheek as he passed on into his study.

"Oh, there never was anyone just like you, James. I think Ford Layton comes nearer than anybody else. I wish Mary could see it in the same light."

"She seems to like him, too."

"The child is charming to him—only I'm afraid she is rather dazzled by Billy Disbdow."

"Agatha, my dear, suppose you just drop a word of advice—if she doesn't take it well, send her to me," suggested Mr. Dickson, as he left the room.

A moment later Mary entered, starry-eyed, lovely, graceful, her sweet lips set in a tender smile.

"All alone, Momsy?" she asked, as she dropped a light kiss on her mother's white hair.

"Yes, dear. Sit down here a moment, Mary," and Mrs. Dickson, with a wistful look at the starry eyes and the tender lips, sighed at the idea of giving up this sweet daughter to any one of the young men who persistently wooed her.

"Well?" asked Mary, expectantly.

"Billy Disbrow called this afternoon, didn't he, dear?" asked Mrs. Dickson, hesitatingly.

"Yes."

"I'm sorry, dear, but you are sure you are not making a mistake?" Mrs. Dickson stumbled over the words.

"I'm quite sure, Momsy," said Mary quietly, and just then she was called away and Mrs. Dickson stepped to the study door and spoke to her husband.

"Mary says she is sure she is not making any mistake, James," she said gravely. "If she really wants to marry Billy Disbrow we must do all we can to make her happy. He is not bad—merely weak."

"The deuce!" exclaimed Mary's father, frowning.

When Mary came into the study to tell him that dinner would be ready in fifteen minutes and there was barely time for him to dress, Mr. Dickson pulled his only daughter down on his knee.

"I met Billy Disbrow coming out of the gate, Mary——I hope you won't be foolish." He hesitated.

Mary looked at him with troubled eyes. "I suppose he is what you would call a good match," she murmured, unwillingly.

"Of course, you don't have to think of that, my dear."

"He's nice, too, father. He has a lovely disposition."

"Well—daughter, think it over, and don't decide hastily. I haven't seen Ford around lately. I'm sorry, too."

"Oh, you won't be—later—when you know!" she said quickly.

"Know what?" he asked, curiously.

"Oh, I can't tell you just now, father! Not until tomorrow. Do you know what day it is?"

"It's the twenty-fifth anniversary of our wedding day."

"What I've got to say will be your wedding gift from me," whispered Mary, and then she ran away.

While dessert was being served Mary was called away from the table by a ring at the telephone.

When the three elders were alone, Great-Aunt Becky spoke up.

"I saw young Billy Disbrow going away from here this afternoon. I hope Mary is not leading him a dance. I believe I will speak to her."

They were leaving the room when Aunt Becky asked Mary to help her into the big chair in front of the drawing-room fire. Mary's parents discreetly withdrew to another room. It was possible that Aunt Becky might accomplish where they had failed. She was an old lady of keen insight into human nature and a wide experience.

"My dear," began Aunt Becky, abruptly, "why under the sun are you going to marry Billy Disbrow?"

Mary started at her great aunt.

"But I'm not going to marry him," she said at last.

"Whom are you going to marry, then?" demanded Aunt Becky, with very bright eyes.

"Ford Layton," confessed Mary, with crimsoning cheeks. "I've been trying to break the news to all of you, but you insist on urging me to marry Billy Disbrow——so I thought I'd wait until Ford—he's coming tomorrow—and I promised to tell before he came."

"My dear Mary, they were trying to warn you against young Disbrow!" exclaimed Aunt Becky, delighted beyond measure at this outcome. "You shall have my diamond chain for a wedding present!'

"Aunt Becky, you're a dear!" cried Mary, hugging her warmly. "I don't see how any one could dream of my caring for any one but Ford."

"What was young Disbrow doing here today?"

"I geuss—he was here to hear me say 'No' to him," admitted Mary.

"And why did he telephone you tonight?"

"I rather think he wanted to hear me say it again," she smiled, ruefully. "Shall we go and tell father and mother?"

Professor Mahaffy was once examining a man who had put himself down as an "agnostic" on entering college. He was having a hard time at Mahaffy's hands over some "crux" passages in a Greek book. "Well, then, thir," said the professor, "I can quite athure you that you are an agnothtic in Greek ath well."

Self-Supporting Animals.

The reindeer, like the camel, is particularly suited to the needs of nomadic people; easily satisfied in the matter of food, it is unnecessary to carry fodder for him; what cactus, thorns and other growths of the coarsest are to the camel, lichen or moss, always to be found by scraping away the snow, is to the reindeer; both are self-supporting travelers.—Bailey's Magazine.

IT'S A MISTAKE

Made By Many Palmer Residents.

Many people in a misguided effort to get rid of kidney backache, rely on plasters, liniments and other makeshifts. The right treatment is kidney treatment, and a remarkably recommended kidney medicine is Doan's Kidney Pills. Palmer is no exception.

The proof is at your very door. The following is an experience typical of the work of Doan's Kidney Pills in Palmer.

Mrs. William H. King, 406 Main St., Palmer, Mass., says: "I had kidney complaint for years and was steadily growing worse. I was rarely free from a dull, bearing-down pain in my back and the kidney secretions bothered me. My head also ached and I had dizzy spells. Finally my husband obtained a box of Doan's Kidney Pills for me at Lynde & Gould's Drug Store (now J. P. Lynde's Drug Store) and I began their use. They restored me to good health and at that time I gave a public statement, telling of my experience. It is a pleasure for me to confirm all I have previously said in praise of this remedy."

The Men We Send to Boston.

What They Think of Them in the Eastern Part Of the State.

The towns in Eastern Hampden county have been represented in the Legislature the past session by Representative Henry W. Holbrook of Palmer, serving his second year, and Senator William H. Wheeler of Hubbardston. Practical Politics, a Boston publication whose name indicates its character, in its annual review of the Legislature, its work and its members, has the following to say of the men named above:

Rep. Henry W. Holbrook of Palmer, because of the able and conscientious service he rendered on the committees on mercantile affairs and election laws last year, was re-appointed this year by Speaker Cushing to the latter committee and was also given a place on the committee on fisheries and game.

Rep. Holbrook comes from a farming district and naturally, he was chiefly interested in legislation affecting the agricultural and dairy industries. He was one of the strongest opponents of the so-called Ellis bill.

The record of Rep. Holbrook on general legislation is excellent from the standpoint of the progressive, despite the fact that he comes from a farming district. He voted for the Donahue resolutions in favor of the direct election of United States senators by the people and the federal income tax. Although a progressive, he was not a radical, however, and was not in sympathy with the initiative and referendum.

There were only two measures before the past session of local interest to Rep. Holbrook's district and he got both of them through. One was a resolve appropriating a sum not to exceed $12,000 for certain improvements at the Monson state hospital. The second was a bill authorizing the town of Monson to construct a system of sewerage.

Rep. Holbrook was born in Palmer, Feb. 18, 1875. He graduated from the public schools and Tufts college. He has been engaged in the wholesale and retail coal business for 14 years. He has served on the board of selectmen of the town of Palmer, where he resides, for four years, three as chairman.

A quiet man, but a keen observer of events, Sen. William H. Wheeler during his first year in the Senate for the session just closed, was content to make good work in committees count and to make his vote tell in accordance with his convictions rather than to essay any fights of oratory in debate. He came thus to be one of the most respected men in the upper chamber and one who always held its attention when he had anything to say. Sen. Wheeler is from Hubbardston and represents the Worcester-Hampden district. It is essentially a farming district and naturally Sen. Wheeler found place on the committee on agriculture, where he stood with the granges on the milk question as against the attempt to send out from Boston hordes of milk inspectors and to burden the farmer with over-inspection.

But the committee of all others in the work of which Sen. Wheeler put in his deepest interest was that of public charitable institutions, one of the most important committees of the Legislature for the reason that the appropriations for public charitable institutions of the state count up in the millions and a steady hand and well balanced judgment are required of the chairman of this committee.

Sen. Wheeler found time also to give some attention to the committee on towns of which he also was a member. He got through the bill to permit Princeton to appropriate from its funds for a town history. Sen. Wheeler has made friends with everybody with whom he has been thrown in contact.

COULD NOT SAY NO TO ADELAIDE

Major Atkinson, according to his wife's testimony, doesn't know how to say no to Adelaide, his niece. This assertion is borne out by the fact that when Adelaide asked him to appear in juvenile costume at what she called a "kid party," which she was to give at his summer home, he consented with an outward smile and an inward groan.

"I wish," he said to his wife in private, "that Adelaide hadn't insisted upon my taking part in this ridiculous affair of hers. In fact, I don't see why she wants to give such a nonsensical party."

"Why do you aid and abet her?" demanded his wife. "When I suggested that she think of something newer and more dignified, you immediately said, 'Let her have any kind of party she pleases.'"

"Well, one doesn't like to be always interfering with her pleasures. There's no particular harm in her having a child's party, is there? But I know I shall feel like a perfect idiot dressed in the little girl's early Victorian costume that Adelaide has picked out for me." He glanced into the mirror and sighed as he stroked his graying Vandyke beard.

The afternoon of the party Adelaide, after tying the strings of a quaint little sunbonnet under the major's beard, drew away and surveyed him from the top of the sunbonnet to the tips of his white stockinged and black slippered feet.

"Uncle, you're certainly the most excruciatingly funny sight I ever beheld," she declared. "I'm so glad I found those pantalettes in grandma's old trunk. They're perfectly killing. You'll make the hit of the evening."

"I suppose I'm what you'd call a screaming success," said the major, somewhat wryly. "You don't think I'm too complete, do you?"

"No, you're just—just lovely," Adelaide squeezed the large sun browned hand of her uncle, half of which was neatly incased in a white lace mitt. "But with that cigar in your mouth you're a sight to behold."

"Well, I must have a little smoke before your guests come, Adelaide. I'll just take my magazine and read and smoke on the lawn until the festivities begin."

A little later, as Mrs. Atkinson and Adelaide were putting the finishing touches on their own costumes, they saw a striking looking couple alight from a motor car and approach the major, who rose with his accustomed courtliness and greeted them.

"Good gracious, Adelaide! Your uncle appears to be absolutely unconscious of his absurd attire," exclaimed Mrs. Atkinson. "He is taking those people around the garden as unconcernedly as if he were dressed in a business suit. They must think he is crazy! Here, I'll slip on a long coat over my short skirt and run out and explain."

The major welcomed his wife with a smile. "I'm glad you joined us, my dear, for I wish you to meet Professor and Mrs. Lee of the university, who have heard flattering reports of our garden and have come way out from the city to see our rare roses. We are honored, I'm sure."

"I think," said Mrs. Atkinson to the visitors, after acknowledging the introduction, "that you are seeing something else quite as rare as our roses." She laughed and looked at her husband.

"By Jove, I'd forgotten this fool rig," exclaimed the major, with some temper. "I wonder what you can have thought of me."

"Well," laughed Professor Lee, "the friends who told us about your roses said that some of your neighbors considered you rather eccentric to devote so much of your time to flowers. When we introduced ourselves I thought you were perhaps a trifle unusual in your dress."

"Unusual! I should think so," exclaimed the major. Then, turning severely to his wife, he said: "I can't see, my dear, why you ever permitted Adelaide to ge up such an idiotic party. I fear you give that girl her head too much." He glanced down at his costume again. "This is really preposterous. Is that you calling, Adelaide? Yes, we'll be there at once. You see, Mrs. Lee, the party is beginning and I've promised my niece to be in the grand march. You'll join us, won't you?"—Chicago Daily News.

CUSHMAN—WARREN.

Beautiful October Wedding at Home of Bride's Parents.

A beautiful October wedding occurred yesterday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Rufus Cushman on Main street, when their younger daughter, Margaret, was united in marriage to Clifford P. Warren of Boston, the ceremony being performed in the living room by Rev. George A. Andrews of the Congregational church. The room was handsomely decorated with oak leaves and white chrysanthemums.

Miss Lucy Woodward of Hartford played the wedding march from Lohengrin, as the bridal procession descended the stairs, preceded by the ushers, Harold B. Tanner of Providence and Rufus P. Cushman Jr. Following them came the two young cousins of the bride, Misses Carolyn and Harriet Cushman, carrying bunches of pink roses. They were dressed in dainty white dresses with blue ribbons. Next came the maid of honor, who was the bride's sister, Miss Kate Cushman. She was dressed in blue crepe de chine and carried a large bunch of pink roses. The bride entered the room with her father, who also gave her away. The groom and his best man, Mr. William H. Best of Boston, entered the room from another direction and met the bride before a beautiful setting of the oak leaves, where the responses were made, the ring service being used. The bride was attired in a charming white gown of crepe meteor, trimmed with lace from her mother's wedding gown, and she wore a tulle veil. Her flowers were lilies-of-the-valley.

After the ceremony the guests were received by the bride and groom, assisted by the bride's father and mother, Mrs. Cushman's dress being of white crepe de chine trimmed with lace. The house was attractively decorated by William H. Pease, a scheme of oak leaves and chrysanthemums being prominent throughout. The ushers received pearl cuff links from the groom and he gave his best man a gold cigar cutter. His gift to the bride was a pendant of pearls and diamonds. The bride's gift to the maid of honor was a gold pendant and to the bridesmaids, gold circle pins with blue enamel. The gifts received by the bride were attractively arranged and filled the reception room; they consisted of choice silver, furniture, china, rugs, pictures, etc. The large side piazza leading from this room had been enclosed and with its decoration of oak leaves made an attractive room. Cook of Boston furnished the wedding lunch and the table in the dining room was much admired.

The guests included many college friends of both the bride and groom as well as friends from many places, among them being J. P. Clark and family, Mr. and Mrs. R. F. Warren, Judge and Mrs. Henry A. King, L. S. Stowe, W. H. Jordan, Miss King, Miss Dewey, Miss Grodley, all of Springfield; Mr. and Mrs. Stanley King, Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Porter, Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Prescott, Clinton Collistor, Geo. Coleman, R. C. Southworth, Lynn Loomis, of Boston; Miss Elizabeth Tyler, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Barton, Miss Bridgeman, of Amherst; Mrs. Lucy Flynt of Palmer; Mrs. Eva Holmes, Miss Esther Packard, of New York; Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Moore of Stafford Springs.

The bride has always lived in Monson and has been closely identified with the social life of the town. She graduated from Smith college in 1910 and after studying further accepted an important position with a business firm in Boston. Mr. Warren graduated from Amherst college in 1902 and from Harvard Law School 1906. For some time he has been attorney for the successful firm of W. H. McElwain & Co. of Boston.

While the guests were waiting for the departure of Mr. and Mrs. Warren, the singing by the college friends was much enjoyed. Mr. and Mrs. Warren will spend their wedding trip in New Hampshire and will be at home after Dec. 2 at 168 Winthrop Road, Brookline.

In connection with the wedding of Miss Margaret Cushman her aunt, Miss Hattie Cushman, gave a dinner in her honor on Wednesday evening at her home on Main street. Beside the bridal party, there were also present Miss Marion Butterworth of Branford Academy, Mr. and Mrs. John Marshall of New York, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Barton of Amherst, Miss Frances Richardson of Newtonville, Miss Boyce of Watertown, Miss Muriel Seeley of Brookline, Miss Eudocia Packard of Pasedena, California. The table was decorated with chrysanthemums and the place cards carried out the bridal idea effectively.

Crawford Ranges

The Single Damper is a simple and unassuming name for a wonderful invention; probably the most important improvement ever made in cooking stoves. It is operated by one movement of a knob upon the top at the back of the range. This knob has three plainly marked locations, "Kindle," "Bake" and "Check." Slide the knob to the proper point and the range does the rest. Simplicity itself and absolutely sure.

This Single Damper requires but one movement, yet that one movement regulates the fire and also the oven heat and does it better than can be done with two dampers; damper mistakes are impossible. ### Pet Funny Stories.

Authors are not above having a pet story to be told over and over again on occasion—and off, too.

Emerson Hough, who in his novels deals with extremely serious topics, has a keen sense of humor and never tires of telling about a guide he once had on a fishing trip in the Adirondacks. This guide had also been employed by Grover Cleveland and Dr. Henry van Dyke of Princeton university. Shortly after the birth of President Cleveland's little daughter the chief executive went on a fishing trip and was delighted to learn that his guide had also become a father.

"How much did your baby weigh at birth?" asked Mr. Cleveland.

"Twenty-two pounds, sir," answered the guide.

"Twenty-two pounds!" exclaimed the president, in amazement; "why, my baby weighed but seven."

He Was Enlightened.

We don't approve of the impertinence, but perhaps in the following case the grouchy street car passenger got no more than he deserved. He had asked a conductor if he knew when a certain train left the North station, and on being answered in the negative he exclaimed offensively: "Why is it that this road employs so many farmers?" "Just to look after the cattle that travel on the cars," was the conductor's quick retort.—Boston Transcript.

The Palmer Journal.

VOLUME LXIII. PALMER, MASS., FRIDAY EVENING, OCTOBER 11, 1912. NUMBER 28.

Penmanship in Public Schools.

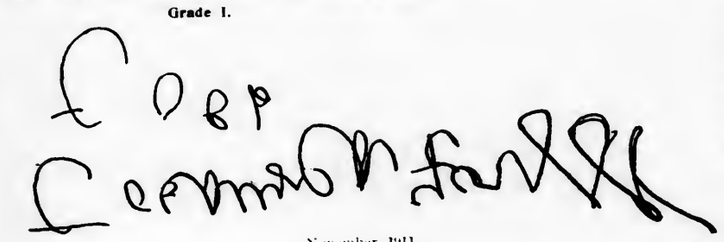
What is Being Done to Improve the Writing of The Pupils. Samples Showing Changes in Each Grade Within a Few Months.

The Journal is printing, in this issue, some samples of the penmanship in the Palmer schools. These samples represent the penmanship in the spring and fall of 1911 and in the spring of 1912. The idea of printing these speeimens is to show the marked improvement that has taken place in the pupils' writing during the past year.

At the exhibition of school work in the spring, samples of the penmanship of the various pupils were displayed in their respective rooms to show their writing before and after close attention had been given to the matter of penmanship. This display caused such wide comment that the Journal offered to print some of these specimens in order that its readers might get some definite idea of the work being done in this subject in our schools to-day. These samples were selected, one from each grade, with the idea of showing the most marked improvement that has taken place. The specimens of the writing done to-day are not by any means the best specimens that could be collected. In fact, specimens could have been collected from single rooms which would illustrate better than do these just how high a grade of handwriting is being secured. It is the intention of the Journal to show this improvement in every grade; consequently, a specimen from each grade has been selected.



In the spring of 1911, Mr. Harry Houston, supervisor of penmanship in the city of New Haven, was brought here to teach the teachers how to teach penmanship. Mr. Houston has made several visits, talking to the teachers at their meetings, watching them teach in the grades, and helping them in every possible way. The teachers have taken very kindly to his help, have worked with energy and zeal; and, as a consequence, marked improvement in penmanship is noticeable in every room in town. Mr. Houston, who is an expert, feels highly pleased with the results that the teachers have secured and he says that the success achieved is due largely to the willing co-operation and enthusiasm of the teaching corps. It is the belief of the school authorities that the credit for the good work is due to Mr. Houston and the teachers. It will afford anyone pleasure and satisfaction to visit any of the schoolrooms during the penmanship period. It would be very pleasing to them to see the spirit of willingness and instant compliance upon the part of the pupils to the directions of the teacher. The readiness, willingness, and faithfulness of the pupils in following out these directions are bound to create in them habits of obedience. It is the belief of the school authorities that, even though they forget or fail to carry out in after life what they have learned regarding writing, the habit of implicit and prompt obedience inculcated in them by means of the efficient teaching of penmanship will never leave them.

Superintendent Hobson has many similar specimens of penmanship, both before and after the change in the teaching of this subject which he will be glad to show to any who call at the office. The teachers also will be pleased to greet any visitors and will gladly show them the results obtained in penmanship and will illustrate by actual teaching how these results are obtained.

Last spring, an exchange of penmanship papers from all the grades was made with the model training school of the New Britain Normal school. New Britain has had a trained specialist teaching penmanship for many years; and, although penmanship has been taught here but one year, the papers sent from the Palmer schools were fully the equal in merit of the New Britain papers.

With this present method of instruction and equal zeal and enthusiasm upon the part of the teachers, there is no reason why the Palmer schools should not turn out pupils who write a fair business hand. The specimens follows. An example from each grade is given, showing both old and new style, with the dates each was written:

Grade I.

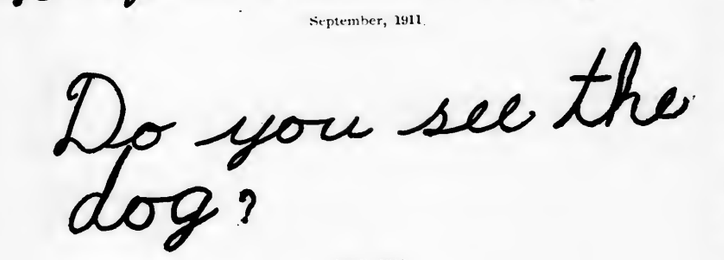
November, 1911.



May, 1912.

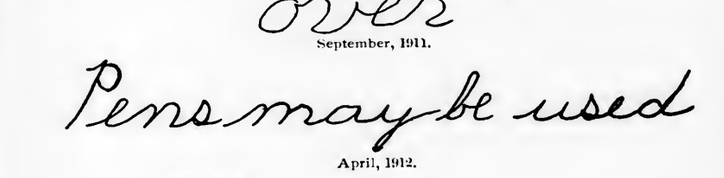
September, 1911.



April, 1912.

SPECIAL TOWN MEETING.

Several Departments Will Ask Additional Funds.

MORE MONEY NEEDED FOR HIGHWAYS

Also For Sewer Contract. New Sewer Asked For. Other Matters Needing Attention.

The selectmen have called a special town meeting for 2 o'clock of Saturday afternoon, the 19th, to act on several articles. The voters will be asked to accept a common sewer in Bondsville, running from the T. D. Potter lumber company's place of business to the Swift river, according to a plan filed by the selectmen with the town clerk. Approval will be asked for a loan of $21,000 from the Palmer Savings bank, the money to be used to pay a note made a little over a year ago which must be renewed; the preliminaries were arranged at the annual meeting, but the present form must be gone through with now. The selectmen will ask for funds with which to pay the bills incurred repairing the two bridges over the Quaboag river near West Brimfield, work which they found absolutely necessary but for which there was no appropriation. The voters will be asked again to authorize a sewer in Thorndike which they refused to sanction at the annual meeting. Highway Surveyor McKelligott asks for additional funds for the highways, and says he can use all the town will give him. Money will also be asked for the completion of the Bondsville sewer; owing to the large amount of rock found in the ground, necessitating almost continuous blasting, the funds have run out before the job is completed and it seems desirable to finish the work this year, now that it has been commenced.

Permanent Highway Contract.

Goes to the W. N. Flynt Granite Co. of Monson. To Begin Soon.

The permanent highway which the town, at its annual meeting last March voted to build and for which it appropriated $50,000, will be constructed by the William N. Flynt Granite company of Monson, the contract being awarded on Tuesday. The Massachusetts Highway Commission has had charge of the survey and specifications and the bids were opened at the office in Boston. The price for the entire road — about 7 1-2 miles — was about $44,000. A part of the road is to be of macadam with a blanket coat of bitumen, and part of oiled gravel. It is expected that the work will be begun Monday and it will be continued as long as the weather will permit; it will be resumed about April 1 and the entire contract is to be finished before October 1, 1913. The town, through its committee, will probably furnish the oil.

None of the stone roads will be put in this fall, on decision of the committee, and no oil surfacing will be done. The gravel roads will be built, as these are not harmed by the cold of winter, while macadam picks up if not covered with oil. The committee finds that bituminous oil surfaces never give good satisfaction if put on in cold weather, consequently will wait until next year before applying any oil.

Selectmen No Jurisdiction.

Highway Surveyor Alone Responsible for Condition of Roads.

The selectmen some time ago received a petition from citizens of Ware asking them to have repairs made on a section of road in the town of Palmer which connects Ware with West Warren and is used extensively by Ware people. They represented that its condition was about as bad as could be for travel, which was fully corroborated by Palmer citizens who had been over it.

The selectmen have concluded that they have no authority whatever in the matter. According to a vote of the town the highways are left in the care of a highway surveyor, who is elected at the annual town meeting. He is a law unto himself in highway matters and is responsible to no other town official. Therefore, if the petitioners expect results, they must take the matter up with the highway surveyor.

The protested strip is a short one, the highway on either side belonging to other towns, and is the only part of the road which is not kept in repair, it is claimed.

Supervising Deputy David F. Dillon paid an official visit to Equity council, Royal Arcanum, in Springfield Wednesday evening.

BURGLARS VISIT WALES.

Post Office and Store Ransacked Yesterday Morning.

LOSS AT EITHER PLACE NOT LARGE.

Windows Broken to Secure Entrance. Men Seen and Are Recognized. Will Be Caught Soon.

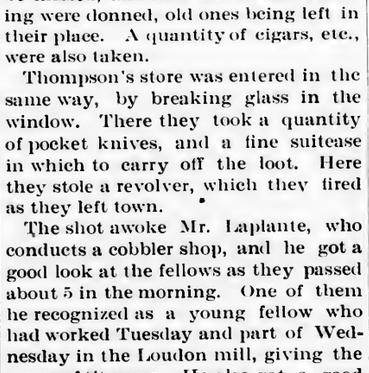
Burglars visited two places in Wales yesterday morning, — the post office and the store of L. H. Thompson, — but secured little booty at either place; though, at the post office they made a "mess" of things generally.

The office is presided over by Miss E. Lanphear, who in connection with it conducts a variety store. Entrance was gained by breaking the glass in a window, pushing up the sash and climbing in. The safe was left unlocked, with papers only inside. These the burglars scattered about the floor in every direction. They opened letters in the office boxes apparently in search of money, but neglected to take stamps which were in a drawer in plain view. If they secured any money it was only a few cents in change in the store till. The chance to secure new footwear was too good to be missed, and new shoes and stocking were donned, old ones being left in their place. A quantity of cigars, etc., were also taken.



Thompson's store was entered in the same way, by breaking glass in the window. There they took a quantity of pocket knives, and a fine suitease in which to carry off the loot. Here they stole a revolver, which they fired as they left town.

The shot awoke Mr. Laplante, who conducts a cobbler shop, and he got a good look at the fellows as they passed about 5 in the morning. One of them he recognized as a young fellow who had worked Tuesday and part of Wednesday in the Loudon mill, giving the name of Stevens. He also got a good description of the other. A dance ticket good at Crystal Lake, Connecticut, was dropped by the men, and this with Laplante's identification, proved sufficient to learn the identity of the men; both are known, and will undoubtedly be captured soon. The work of investigating the post office break was in the hands of Postmaster Walter L. Shaw of Palmer, who with Deputy Sheriff Bills travelled nearly a hundred miles by auto yesterday in the chase.

Honors For D. F. Dillon.

Nominated For Presidential Elector at Large.

David F. Dillon of Palmer was nominated by the Republicans last Saturday as one of the two presidential electors at large to which the state is entitled. Probably the most surprised man in the convention, when his name was read, was Mr. Dillon. He had gone to the convention as a delegate from Palmer, and as the slate was originally made up it contained the names of two eastern part of the state men for the positions. The reading of Mr. Dillon's name was a complete surprise to him, he having not the slightest inkling of the change in program which had been made by the committee.

Ware Man Shot in Back.

W. C. Rushmore of Ware had an unpleasant experience while autoing near Worcester Saturday afternoon. While riding a ong he felt something strike his back, but thought it was a stone. It gave him considerable pain and on arriving home he discovered that he had been shot. He visited Dr. M. W. Pearson, who extracted a 22-calibre bullet from the muscle under the right arm, where it was embedded two inches deep. Mr. Rushmore had heard no report when he was shot and is unable to explain how it happened.

Record Attendance At Palmer Fair.

Nearly 12,000 Paid Admissions Both Days. Show Unusually Good in Every Department. The Society Will Have Balance Over Expenses.

A record of nearly 12,000 paid admissions for both days testifies to the standing of the Palmer Fair among fair-going people. For that is the number who paid to see the attractions offered last Friday and Saturday. The weather was all that could be desired and attendance records were smashed on both days. Friday the number who paid for admission to the grounds was 3317; Saturday the number was 8146. In addition to the paid admissions on Friday there were 2259 school children who were admitted free.

Taken all in all it was the biggest and the best fair the Eastern Hampden society has ever held. Some who have followed the fair circuit have said that it was better than any in this section and fully equal to many held in much larger centers. Certain it was that there was plenty to see and do, and all of a high quality.

The society this year provided a large tent for the poultry, the vegetables and the children's exhibit required by the state if the additional money voted is drawn by the society. This provision proved a wise one, for the fruit occupied most of the space in the lower hall and the vegetables filled one side of the 100 feet of table in the tent. Across the aisle the exhibit of the children occupied a large space and required the work of two persons the entire afternoon to judge it. This was done by Prof. O. A. Morton of the agricultural college at Amherst, who stated that the Palmer exhibit was the best of the kind he had seen, and he has charge of this work throughout the state. He particularly commended the potato exhibit and the quality of the corn; the Bolles boy of Wilbraham, who exhibited a single ear, presented nearly as good a one as any farmer in the state has raised this year.

Friday was cattle day, as usual, and the quality of the animals shown was unusually high, although the numbers were somewhat smaller than last year. A large number of sheep were shown and proved no small attraction. While the judging of the cattle was in progress the drawing matches, which have grown in interest every year of late, were being run off in the enclosure devoted to them. They proved as exciting as usual and were watched by a large number of cattle enthusiasts as well as others.

In the hall the additional space allowed the fruit exhibit permitted the different varieties to be displayed to much better advantage than ever before in recent years, an improvement much appreciated. The display was large and the quality fine. At the rear of the lower floor was the usual exhibit of plants, flowers and ferns from the Monson state hospital, in personal charge and arranged by Mr. Johnson, the florist of the institution. It followed the rule everywhere on the grounds and was "bigger and better than ever before," which is saying a good deal. The usual display of fancy work was made up stairs, the quality being very high.

The speed classes were late in starting Friday, due to various causes. Three races were on the card, and they proved unusually exciting. Two were unfinished when darkness closed the day's program and were carried over to Saturday. At 2 in the afternoon came the high school relay race, which has been a feature for years. There were only four entries.

Out on the Midway there was a great abundance of attractions, this department being larger than ever. A merry-go-round, Ferris wheel and ocean wave were among the attractions, with hoop-las, dodgers, snake shows, fortune tellers and various other opportunities to spend money and be amused. Everybody did a good business and all appeared satisfied Saturday night. Two games were closed on Friday, but they were not being conducted according to the permits which had been issued to them. No privilege which lived up to the description given when it was granted permission to run was closed. The managers tried to keep the Midway clean and unobjectionable, and received numerous compliments on their success. One person who has visited numerous fairs in several states in a official capacity stated that it was the cleanest he had seen, a statement which was corroborated by the state police present.

The stage attractions, while not so numerous as at some times, were of an unusually high order of merit, and were sufficient to keep up the society's claim of "Something doing every minute."

Saturday was of course the big day. The crowds began to arrive early and kept at it until after three in the afternoon. Over 8000 paid admissions were recorded this day. This was horse day and the showing of colts was large and fine. It is remarked that more and more of these animals are exhibited at the Palmer fair every year. Some new classes were added to the premium list this year, and brought additional entries. Lovers of horses were given their fill, five races being run off, starting at noon: fourteen heats were necessary. The track events of the high school athletic meet were run between the heats of the races, the jumps being held inside the oval later. The cup was captured by Barre; the results are as follows:

100-yards dash—Won by Nichols of Barre; Knowlton of Spencer, 2d; White of Ware, 3d; time 10 3-5s.

220-yards dash—Won by Nichols of Barre; White of Ware, 2d; Rice of Barre, 3d; time, 23 4-5s.

440-yards dash—Won by Moran of Barre; Nichols of Barre, 2d; Skiffington of Ware, 3d; time, 56s.

Half-mile—Won by Moran of Barre; Dick of Barre, 2d; Dunbar of Ware, 3d; time, 2.15 3-5.

Mile run—Won by Moran of Barre; Trout of Barre, 2d; Morehouse of Spencer, 3d; time 5.23 1-5.

Pole vault—Won by Bemis of Spencer; Wylie of Hardwick, 2d; Anderson of Barre and Morehouse of Spencer tied for 3d; hight, 9ft 6in.

Running high jump—Won by Nichols of Barre. Lyman of Hardwick, 2d; Bemis of Spencer, 3d; hight, 5 ft.

Running broad jump—Won by Nichols of Barre; Delehanty of Southbridge, 2d; Knowlton of Spencer, 3d; distance, 9ft 4in.

Hop step and jump—Won by Delehanty of Southbridge; Dick of Barre, 2d; Harwood of Barre, 3d; distance, 39ft 3½in.

The teams secured their points as follows; Barre won the cup with 49 1-2 points; Spencer was second with 11 1-2; Southbridge third with 8; Ware and Hardwick tied for fourth with 6 each. Neither Palmer high nor Ludlow scored a point.

President Taft made the fair a short call about noon Saturday. It was found late Friday night that he was to pass through the town Saturday on his way to Dalton, and by dint of a good deal of telephoning it was arranged to have him stop on his way. He arrived unherald just before 12, and decided that as he was on a long trip he would simply drive around the grounds, taking in the sights he could on the way. This he did, being cheered by those who were on hand. Later in the afternoon Governor Foss arrived and spoke from the stage opposite the grand stand.

With all the crowds of people, there was the best of order and not the slightest accident. Everybody was out for a good time but all were good-natured. This feature was commented on by many. There was no boisterousness and no disorder. Out on the midway Saturday afternoon it was impossible to make rapid progress through the crowds, but all were in the best of humor.

The society will undoubtedly realize a handsome margin over expenses, and be able to wipe out the deficiency of last year, when rain spoiled the second day, and this will be extremely gratifying to those who have worked for the results attained.

KNOW IT WELL

Familiar Features Well Known to Hundreds of Palmer Citizens.

A familiar burden in many a home,
The burden of a "bad back."
A lame, a weak or an aching back
Often tells you of kidney ills.
Doan's Kidney Pills are for weak kidneys.

Here is good testimony to prove it.

W. E. Griffin, North Wilbraham, Mass., says: "I injured my back about two years ago and after that had considerable trouble from my kidneys. There was a dull pain in my back and it was often impossible for me to get about. The kidney secretions were too frequent in passage and caused me annoyance. My general health was affected and when I saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised so highly, I procured a box. This remedy gave me prompt relief and I continued its use until all symptoms of kidney trouble had disappeared."

Ancient King—No. Why?

Ancient Prince—I'd like to put on my hat before I go out on the street.

Hurt of Unkind Words.

Unkind words are sharper than swords. If you cut your finger there is but temporary pain. If your heart is hurt with sarcasm or brutal speech the suffering continues as long as your memory is working. Since we all know the agony of injured feelings it certainly behooves all of us to be sparing with stinging conversation. As one grows wiser and older one pays little heed to what others say. Unkind things then apparently don't have the power to hurt. The older, wiser ones just twirl their thumbs and smile. It is a great relief when one gets to that point of perfect tranquillity.

Don't Dig Deep.

Experts aver that there is little or no ground for the belief that valuable metals lie very deep below the earth's surface.

An Old Saying Made New.

More things would come to him who waits if they were not captured on the way by the man who won't wait.—Lippincott's Magazine.

TWO GIRLS

"If ten men should ask you to marry them, what would it be?"

"A tender."

"And if one should ask you, what would it be?"

"I don't know. What?"

"A wonder."

Ireland's Big Cavern.

A Frenchman made the first complete exploration of one of the largest caverns in the world, that at Mitchelstown, Ireland. The explorer was Martel, who is also famous for his discoverles in the caverns of France. The Mitchelstown cavern is formed in limestone, and is remarkable for the number and extent of its connected passages, which, when plotted on a chart resemble the streets of a city. The length of the cave is about a mile and a quarter, and it contains some animal inhabitants, including a species of spider, which are peculiar to it and have their entire existence within its recesses.—The Sunday Magazine.

Easy to Get a Start.

PALMER NEWS.

New Business Coming.

Holbrook Block Will House Branch of Stafford Springs Concern.

Announcement is made that the east store in the new monitor block of A. W. Holbrook on Main street has been leased to Napoleon Pero of Stafford Springs, Ct., who will open there a big stoek of confectionery, five, ten and twenty-five eent goods of all deseriptions. The Peros have been very sueeessful in business. Starting in a small way 11 years ago they now own several stores and buy in carload lots, selling on narrow margins. Besides their store in Stafford the firm is interested in a prosperous woolen concern in Philadelphia, which is managed by the eldest son. In the mercantile braneh is the father, Napoleon Pero, and two sons, Napoleon Jr. and William. The Palmer store will probably be under the direction of the latter, who will divide his time between that and others to be started.

New Machinery En Route.

Electric Generator Shipped From Pittsburg Monday. Due Now.

The new 1300-horse power turbo electric generator for the station of the Central Massachusetts Electric company was shipped from the factory in Pittsburg Monday, accompanied by a man who will travel all the way with his charge, and should arrive here in a day or two. As soon as it arrives installation will be rushed, as it will also be on the new water wheels which are being shipped from Worcester this week. With the new apparatus in place the company will be in a position to give the sort of service it has so long been preparing for with the many expensive improvements at the station and throughout the distributing system. The booth maintained by the company at the fair was a decided success. Many people visited it and found much of interest there.

Street Railway's Good Service.

Handled Crowds on Fair Days In Very Satisfactory Manner.

The Springfield Street Railway company, contrary to expectation, handled the immense volume of traffic on the Palmer Fair days—last Friday and Saturday—in a very pleasing manner. There was very little delay except for a few moments Saturday about 1 o'clock, and the visitors were brought to and taken from the fair with little to complain of. Manager Atkins ran 15-minute time all of both days to Springfield, with half hour time on all other lines. In addition, he double-headed numerous trips on the Ware and Monson lines, and in the late afternoon did the same on the Springfield line to take the people home. It was a much better service than the managers of the fair had expected.

The Coming Foresters' Ball.

Arrangements are being completed for the twelfth annual concert and ball of Court Palmer, Foresters of America, which is to be held in the opera house on the evening of the 25th. The music will be by Flanagan's singing orchestra of Marlboro, which has been here several times and always given the best of satisfaction. The general floor directors will be Leo. Goodreau, Peter Brouillette and Daniel Ahearn; committee of arrangements, J. P. O'Connor, T. A. Roche, A. J. LaBelle, F. A. Capen, Albert Ayres and W. G. St. John; reception committee, C. H. Burns, E. H. Nelson, P. J. Rollett, J. Maloney, D. M. Micott and P. J. Sullivan.

First Meeting of Woman's Club.

The first meeting of the Palmer Woman's Club for the season of 1912-13 will be held next Friday afternoon with Mrs. T. J. Tipper on the Monson road. Miss Louise Manning Hodgkins, a former teacher of English in Wellesley college, will speak on "On the Nile." Miss Hodgkins recently spent four months in Cario and made many trips on the river. Miss Hodgkins is an extremely interesting speaker, and it is only by rare good fortune that the Palmer club has been able to secure her. Afternoon tea will be served by the hostess.

Trucking Company Change.

F. M. Ralton Disposes of His Interest to F. S. Hunnewell.

Frederiek M. Ralton has disposed of his interest in the Palmer Trucking and Ice company to Frank S. Hunnewell. Mr. Hunnewell was for several years superintendent of the Springfield and Eastern Street Railway, and with Mr. Ralton purchased the trucking business of S. H. Brown several years ago and enlarged it to its present proportions. Two years ago Mr. Hunnewell went to Attleboro as superintendent of a street railway, and will remain there for the present. The Palmer manager will be Edward Bigelow, and C. E. Fish will be treasurer. Mr. Ralton has not been in the best of health for some time, and will take an extended rest.

Derrick Car Tips Over.

Boston and Albany Track Blocked Several Hours. No One Hurt.

An accident on the Boston and Albany railroad at Blanehardville blocked one track for several hours Tuesday afternoon. A derrick car was in use placing new girders on the bridge over the highway just east of the electric power plant, and while swinging one of the heavy steel beams, weighing about 40 tons, into place, the derrick tipped over and slid to the ground. The men on the structure jumped and were unhurt. The accident was caused by the banking under the side of the car giving way under the strain of the additional load put on it.

Now Up to Railroad Commissioners.

The selectmen have passed up to the railroad commissioners the matter of trolley service in the town of Palmer. Complaint was made some time ago and the selectmen were asked to investigate the conditions. They held a public hearing and have since been reeeiving reports from individuals privately. Having secured all the evidence which seemed likely to be forthcoming they have reported the matter to the railroad commissioners. What they will do remains to be determined.

Will Hnve New Lunch Cart.

P. E. Bard, who has managed a lunch cart on Main street for a number of years has placed an order for a new cart, of much larger size than the present one. It will be placed slightly west of the present location, on a concrete foundation, and will be only one step up from the sidewalk. It will be modern in every way, and will be equipped with gas, running water and sewer connection.

BRIMFIELD.

Death of D. Winslow Foskett.

D. Winslow Foskett, 64, died yesterday of paralysis at the hospital for the insane at Northampton, where he had been for the past six years. Mr. Foskett had been an important business man in this section until his health began to fail from brain paralysis. He was the proprietor of Foskett's mills, situated on Elbow brook in the west part of Brimfield about four miles from Palmer. Mr. Foskett was genial and hearty in his disposition, and had all the patronage needed to build up the big business which he successfully carried on for many years. Mr. Foskett succeeded to an old and historic plant. There was first a saw-mill on the site, built about 100 years ago by Darius Nichols, who married Rhoda Foskett. The first grist-mill was built by William Tucker and sold by him to Daniel Wight, Mr. Foskett's uncle. Thus a continuous business has been conducted by members of Mr. Foskett's family for a century, while the last ownership has shared the great changes from industries that met local needs to importation from the West.

Mr. Foskett was born in Brimfield April 1, 1848, in the house where the latter part of his life was spent. He was the son of Rufus and Hancy (Wight) Foskett. He was educated in the town sehools and the Hitchcock free academy. For some years he was in the grain and feed business with Charles Holbrook of Palmer, under the firm name of Foskett & Holbrook, and lived in Palmer, after whieh he took up the Brimfield business and enlarged it, erecting new buildings. Mr. Foskett was married to Miss Myra Moore October 5, 1897. He is survived by his widow and by a son by a former wife, Harrison W. Foskett of Springfield. The funeral will be held at the home in Brimfield to-morrow afternoon at 1.30 o'clock.

Has Offered Prizes.

Charles A. Burleigh, a graduate of the Hitchcock Free Aeademy in the class of 1911, and now reporter for the Worcester Telegram in Athol, has offered prizes for essays to be presented by members of the senior and senior middle classes of the academy on the politieal situation, to be presented before Oetober 23. To any member of either of these classes who writes the best paper setting forth why any one of the three leading candidates for the presidency should be elected, Mr. Burleigh offers a prize of $4. For the second best paper he offers $2.50, and for the third $1.50. In telling the reasons for his offer, Mr. Burleigh speaks of the benefit he derived from the weekly exercise of "Current Events" when in the aeademy, and of the present subject for that exereise as being, naturally, the political situation. He feels that girls will soon have the privilege of voting, and that it is highly important that they as well as the boys be fitted to meet the demands of citizenship by beeoming aequainted with politieal matters. Mr. Burleigh feels that the alumni of the academy should show a practical interest in its welfare aecording to the sentiment expressed at the last triennial reunion. Although he is one of the younger alumni, he has made a very desirable offer and one that promises much benefit to the pupils. The interest in politieal matters has been much stimulated as is shown by the "Current Events" exercises. Last Monday the exercise was in the form of a debate in each of the two upper classes, and there were spirited discussions.

Dr. and Mrs. Pearsall have returned from a trip to Boston.

Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Booth spent the week with reiatives in Union, Ct.

Miss Lizzie Bidwell of Becket has been visiting her nephew at the hotel this week.

Miss Julia Newton of Springfield spent Sunday at the home of Charles S. Tarbell.

Miss Emma Brown, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Brown, has entered the Newton hospital training class for nurses.

Mrs. Lizzie Wyles Converse has closed her Brimfield house for the winter and taken an apartment in Springfield with her three sons.

Dr. Walter S. Everett of the department of philosophy in Brown university, who has been appointed acting president of the university during the absence of President Faunce on his tour, is a graduate of Brimfield Academy in the class of 1881.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward B. Brown left Tuesday for month's trip to New York state and Michigan. In Michigan they will visit cousins of Mr. Brown, especially in Richland in that state. This place has peculiar interest for Mr. Brown, as his father and mother, Dea. and Mrs. Dauphin Brown, and his grandfather and grandmother, Dea. and Mrs. Samuel Brown, were pioneer settlers there. They left Brimfield in an emigrant wagon September 19, 1831, and the journey was the wedding trip of the younger couple, as they were married at the Brimfield parsonage by Rev. Dr. Vaill on the day previous to that of their departure. They lived in Richland for about 10 years.

Conant Brook Dam Bursts.

Gave Way Yesterday Morning. Loss Will be Material.

The dam which the water commissioners recently constructed on the Conant brook in order to give the town an additional supply of water in times of drought, gave way early yesterday morning. The loss will be several hundred dollars. The construction was completed and the pond allowed to fill about two weeks ago. The construction was of stone and gravel and a few small leaks developed, but it was thought they would soon close. The pond was full, and when the break came the water rushed down the course of the brook in a large volume, but on account of the distance between the village and the pond, and the deep valley of the brook bed, no damage was done.

The matron of honor wore embroidered net over white messaline and carried a bouquet of pink chrysanthemums. Following the ceremony a reception was held. Mr. and Mrs. Arnold were assisted in receiving by the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. T. Moulton of this town and also by the bridegroom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arnold of Southwick. After the ceremony a buffet lunch was served. The bride's gift to the matron of honor was a gold headed hat pin. The groom's gifts to the best man and ushers were gold stick pins. The bride's traveling suit was of fawn colored chiffon broadcloth. After a short wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Arnold will reside in Southwick in their newly constructed and furnished residence, where Mr. Arnold is engaged in tobacco agriculture. The bride is a native of Monson and was educated in the public schools of the town and a graduate of Monson Academy in the class of 1907. Besides a widow, he leaves six children, James of Palmer, who is employed as motorman by the street railway, Arthur J., Daniel, Catherine, Helen and Raymond of this place, and one grandchild, Miss Doris Gloster of Palmer; he also leaves an aunt, Mrs. Patrick Bowler of South Belchertown, two nieces, Mrs. George Jackson of Belchertown and Miss Nellie Shea of Bondsville, and three nephews, Peter Shea of Bondsville and Michael and William Shea of Springfield.

Old Resident Leaves Town.

John O'Connor, who for 61 years has been a resident of Bondsville, has sold his place on Griffin street, and, with his wife, will in a short time go to Barre to make his future home. Mr. O'Connor has seen many changes take place in this village during his residence here. He was one of the first to build on the street on which he lives, and gave part of the land when the town laid out the street. He has been employed by the Boston Duck company for the past 55 years, and until last winter never lost a day from his work on account of sickness. Last winter while returning from work, he slipped on the ice and fell, injuring his right arm so badly that he has been unable to work since, although he has partly recovered the use of the arm. Of the 12 children born to Mr. and Mrs. O'Connor, six are living, a son, Morris O'Connor, and two daughters, Mrs. James Sullivan and Miss Annie O'Connor, living in Bondsville, a son, Charles O'Connor, living in Millers Falls, and another son, John Jr., and a daughter, Mrs. Carberry, living in Barre. The couple have the best wishes of the community, in which they are highly respected.

If Your Voice Gets In, You Win

A Palmer (Mass.) subscriber told this story:

"I got word of a possible big contract in Western New York. packed my grip, and started on the night train. All next day I waited around that city, trying to see the head of the firm. He was busy—busy. I couldn't get at him. When night came I went home disgusted.

"As my eyes rested on the telephone in my office next morning, I said to myself: 'Wonder if you couldn't get me into that office—get my voice where I can't go myself?'

"It could and did. Within a half hour from the time I put in the call, I was awarded the contract."

GAS LIGHTS GO OUT.

Pressure in the Mains Goes Off During Monday Night.

BUT IT COMES BACK AGAIN LATER.

Meanwhile Stores Fill With Gas. Condition is Discovered in Time to Prevent Accident.

A gas condition which might have resulted in serious consequences to life and property was discovered early Tuesday morning by Night Officer Timothy J. Crimmins, and by prompt action on his part the danger was averted.

About 2 o'clock he discovered that the gas lights in stores where they are burned all night were out, and on investigating found that the pressure had gone from the mains, letting the lights out, but had returned later and the gas was flowing from the open burners. He notified the proprietors of the stores where the open jets were located, and the proprietors made an early morning call and remedied the trouble. Stores were found filled with gas, and it was fortunate that there were no fires in any of them, or serious explosions might have resulted. It was fortunate also that none of the open jets were so located that the escaping gas reached occupied sleeping rooms.

Congressman Wilder in Monson.

Gave Talk on "America" to Men's Club Monday Evening.

Hon. William H. Wilder of Gardner, candidate for re-election to Congress in the third Massachusetts district, spoke before the Men's club of the Congregational church of Monson Monday night on "America." Mr. Wilder drove from Gardner by auto, accompanied by his private secretary and his political representative. He was entertained in the early evening at the home of Rufus Cushman. Mr. Wilder did not touch on politics, devoting his remarks to what characterizes the true American citizen. He referred to the American eagle and what it typifies—the American flag, Bartholdi's statue in New York and Uncle Sam. Mr. Wilder was given a splendid ovation by the 50 men present. He passed the night in Palmer and left for Gardner early Tuesday. Mr. Wilder's representatives are at work through the district and find a most favorable sentiment for the Gardner man.

Congressman Wilder heard of the attempted assassination of Colonel Roosvelt late Monday night, before he retired. He said: "I regret very much that an attempt was made to kill Colonel Roosevelt and trust he will soon recover." Mr. Wilder became acquainted with Colonel Roosevelt in 1907, and two years ago visited him at Oyster Bay soon after the latter's return from Africa.

For Contempt of Court.

Wilbraham Man Neglects Order to Pay Wife Separate Support.

Judge Charles L. Long gave a hearing Friday on the petition of Ida J. Evans of Wilbraham, asking that Edward Evans, also of Wilbraham, should be adjudged in contempt of court. In September, 1909, Mrs. Evans entered a petition for separate support which was granted by the court. The decree of the court granted a certain amount of money to be paid to the petitioner for her support and required that the husband should impose no restraint on her personal liberty. Mrs. Evans has been living in a farmhouse owned by the defendant and recently he came to the house at about 4 o'clock in the morning and forcibly ejected her. Mrs. Evans contended that this was in violation of that clause of the decree forbidding her husband from interfering with her personal liberty and asked the court to find him in contempt. Judge Charles L. Long heard the petition case yesterday and imposed a fine of $50 on Evans for contempt of court. The fine was quickly paid.

UNIVERSALISTS MEET.

District Convention Was Held in Palmer Yesterday.

LARGE AUDIENCES; MUCH INTEREST.

Numerous Towns Represented. Helpful Address on the Labor Movement and Religion.

The Universalists of Palmer, Granville, Westfield, Springfield, Monson, Hardwick and Warren held a district conference yesterday in St. Paul's church, Palmer, with sessions forenoon and afternoon. There was a generous attendance.

The morning session was at 10 o'clock and was presided over by Rev. O. I. Darling of Warren, district superintendent. Prayer and singing were followed by words of welcome from Rev. O. S. Raspe of St. Paul's church and Rev. F. S. Brewer of the Congregational church, The first address was by Rev. C. C. Conner of Springfield, whose subject was "The labor movement and religion." The speaker held that the labor movement is on a business basis, although there are principles in it which may not be directly of business, The inclusion of men makes it of chief interest to the ministers. The sympathies of any clergyman are largely, I believe, with the laboring men, so-called; their number is largest. But some of us have learned that rich men—men who employ men—have hearts, and many of them good hearts, and we are interested in them as men. What is domestic in men is not foreign to the minister. The labor movement we think of briefly as within the ranks of employed labor to improve the status of life among those who foil at a daily or weekly wage. The desire for improvement is justified, since labor gives or imparts value to about everything used by the public, and the value of labor itself depends upon the person, the character and the competency of the laborer, and whatever adds to his life or lot shall magnify the good of him to himself and to the world.

I question if we do not move more toward money, towards comforts, than toward work or the abundant life. The rich man has something which the poor man would like to get. The rich man has something which he would like to add unto—get more, that is! Any effort to get more can be justified only in an after capacity to be a larger life and to do a nobler deed. Too many of us are not thinking of that. If some are thinking of it and are trying to realize it they may not be understood by others who are trying "to get."

The world should not be divided into the rich and poor. If it were thought of to-day or made to-day into those who serve their kind with money, or with whatsoever they have, and those who serve with their talents which are living and may be fine, and if all were faithful, there should be in fact no poor and all should be rich, rich together, in the possibly near future.

We are standing in a Christian judgment. It is because of the truth and the love of Christ. The standard is, above all, in love. By that with our feet on the earth there is service, as Christ in His love served. If we do not serve we come short; if we do not live to serve, the right motive of life is absent, and we are failing in the Christian judgment. Religion enters here as a corrective influence, pointing to "the way, and the truth, and the life." It holds the shining explanation of how men shall reach what is so devoutly to be wished in their relations to each other and in the realization of good.

Brethren, the Christian church is engaged in a great business; the Christian church is itself a great factory for making men. The materials are imperfect men; the tools, the agencies are growing men; the product better men. Men of aspiration! Men of service! Men of worth! How shall we enlist them, use them, reward and honor them? The days and years ahead may declare results of our business to which we should bring every day and week fresh interest and unfailing devotion.

A discussion followed, after which Dr. Conklin, state superintendent, gave an address on the state of the churches.

The afternoon session opened at 1.45, and after devotional exercises Rev. J. H. Palmer of the Palmer Baptist church gave an address on "The church's relation to unchurched men." After a solo—"The Lord is my shepherd"—by Miss Doris Paine, Rev. Dr. V. E. Tomlinson of Worcester gave the sermon of the conference. His text was Corinthians xi: 16, "I am not ashamed of the Gospel of Christ for it is the power of God unto salvation." This closed the day's program.

FOR MUTUAL FIRE AID.

Palmer and Three Rivers Alarm Systems Couple Up.

LATTER'S BOXES IN WORKING ORDER

Every Alarm Sounded in Both Places. Each Will Go to Other's Help On Second Round.

The fire alarm system in Three Rivers, which the newly-formed fire district in that village has procured as a part of its fire protection, has been installed and was tested out Tuesday afternoon, working perfectly.

To save expense, as well as to afford a greater degree of protection, by arrangement with Chief Summers of the Palmer fire department the Three Rivers system is connected with that in Palmer, both being operated by the new storage system installed this summer in the Palmer engine house, which is charged from the wires of the Central Massachusetts Electric company. An alarm pulled in either village will be sounded in both places at the same time. The Three Rivers boxes are all numbered above 100, and those in Palmer below 100, so there need be no confusion as to location. On a second alarm the department in the other district will go to the assistance of the one where the fire is.

The Three Rivers district is protected by hydrants connected with powerful pumps in the engine room of the Palmer Mill, and almost any desired pressure can be obtained. That district has no steamer or auto truck, and does not need them ordinarily, but under the arrangement noted above can have them at short notice when necessity demands.

West Warren Man Bumped by Engine.

Horace Parker of West Warren was taken to the Springfield hospital Saturday, with a badly battered head. He encountered a switch engine in the railroad yards near the Boston and Albany bridge in Springfield Saturday evening, with rather painful, if not serious, results and the ambulance was summoned. He went to Springfield on an evening train and wandered into the yards west of the depot. He saw a switch train approaching and stepped out of its way only to be hit by an engine which came along the opposite side of the train. He was not seriously injured, but was obliged to spend a few days at the hospital.

WARE.

Horses Bitten by Dog.

A bulldog bit five horses Saturday morning on Main street and was later killed by Chief Buckley. The first horse attacked was owned by Frank Bohmiller, who complained to the chief. Upon investigation it was found that horses owned by Joseph Hibbard of New Braintree, Patrick Shea and T. P. Strong of Ware, and another man whose name could not be learned, had been similarly attacked. The chief saw the dog on the street, but was unable to catch it. So procuring a shot-gun from the hardware store of J. B. Sibley, he shot the animal.

Boys Taken From Freight.

Two boys from Holyoke were taken from a Springfield freight train in Ware about 4 o'clock Saturday morning. Another Holyoke boy who started with them left the train before its arrival in Ware. The boys stated they were en route for Boston to attend the world's series, but were discovered by the conductor who turned them over to Chief Buckley. The police in Holyoke were notified, but as they had nothing against the boys, they were allowed to go home, with the advice to keep off of freight trains in the future.

Elizabeth, the year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Campbell of Springfield, was painfully burned Saturday when she placed her hands on a hot stove at the home of her grandfather in Northampton.

At a meeting of the selectmen the following were drawn for the traverse jury to sit at Northampton beginning the 21st: Arthur Smith of Park street, A. J. Downey of Pleasant street and A. B. Howard of Church street.

A horse owned by A. T. Marcel of West Main street indulged in a lively runaway Tuesday. The animal, which was hitched to a heavy meat wagon, was left standing in front of T. J. Lester's house on Highland street, when it suddenly took fright and rang down Church street to High. The wagon struck a tree, overturning and scattering meat and vegetables in the street. The horse broke loose and continued to North street, then turning toward Main, where it was stopped by Odilon Berthiaume. The top of the wagon was broken, the springs snapped off and the front of the body badly smashed. The horse was unhurt.

Democrats Hold Rally.

Gov. Foss and Others Speak to Small Audiences Wednesday Night.

The Democrats of Palmer held a slimly-attended rally in the opera house Wednesday evening. But little was known of it until that morning, which perhaps accounts for the small attendance. John P. O'Connor, chairman of the Palmer town committee, presided.

The first speaker was M. Fred O'Connell of Fitchburg, candidate for congressman in the third district. He invited an investigation of his record in public office as a means of determining his fitness for the position he seeks. The record of Congressman Wilder, the present incumbent, was criticised, particularly in reference to his votes on the Panama canal bill, the indirect contempt bill and the white phosphorous match bill. He declared that he is not in favor of free trade, but a moderate protectionist, and a believer in the downward revision of the tariff.

Gov. Foss started in by scoring Senator Lodge's Holyoke speech regarding the sending of Democratic senators and representatives to Congress. Business was never more prosperous than to-day, he said, in spite of an assured Democratic success. He said the Democratic party does not stand for free trade, and that many who do believe in it realize that the business of the country has been built up under protection. The Democratic party proposes to at once revise the tariff in the interests of all the people. Articles of food should be put on the free list, and he advocated the reduction or removal of the duty on sugar. Concerning state issues, he referred to the many progressive measures enacted in the last two years under a Democratic administration, particularly the night-hour law for municipal laborers and the 54-hour law for women and children in textile establishments. Transportation and prison reform are the two great issues of to-day. He advocated the appointment of a public utilities board, and defended his veto of the Western Massachusets trolley merger as against public interests. He would have the state build railroads and compel companies to operate them. In prison reform he would separate first offenders from hardened criminals, and pay each prisoner a daily wage, to be sent to their families.

Other speakers were Richard S. Hughes of Monson, candidate for representative in the First Hampden district; Alexis Boyer of Southbridge, candidate for senator in the Worcester-Hampden district; former Senator John F. Malley of Springfield, and David I. Walsh, candidate for lieutenant-governor.

New Representative Candidate.

John F. Hebard of Holland Enters Campaign as Progressive.

A new political candidate has appeared in the representative field, John F. Hebard of Holland, who is the candidate of the Progressive or Bull Moose party. Mr. Hebard was born in Brookfield in 1859; he secured his education in the schools of that town and Brimfield Academy. At the age of 18 he entered the employ of the Snell Manufacturing company, and worked his way through every department to general manager in 1890, which position he held until July, 1910, when he resigned and retired to his farm in Holland. Mr. Hebard has held numerous public offices and positions of trust, all of which he has filled acceptably and with credit.

Must Not Pound Wife.

She Is Also Entitled to Money Which She Has Worked to Earn.

A lesson in citizenship was taught Michael Marterlez in the district court yesterday morning, when he was given 60 days for assaulting his wife. He took an appeal and went up for lack of funds. Michael had been boozing it for some time, and being short of funds secured them by beating up his wife and taking from her $59 which she and the children had earned by hard labor. She complained to the authorities and Michael was apprehended after he had disposed of $15; the rest was returned to the wife.

WILBRAHAM.

Mrs. James C. Crowley has been taken to the Hampden hospital in Springfield for treatment.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Clark and children of Sunderland spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Goodrich.

Prof. John C. Graham of the Massachusetts Agricultural College will give a lecture on poultry keeping Wednesday evening in Grange hall, under the auspices of the Grange. It will be an open meeting and the public will be welcome.

MAN KILLED BY FALL.

Drops 30 Feet From Railroad Bridge to Rocks.

ALIVE WHEN FOUND, BUT DIED LATER

Not Known Whether Fall Was Accident or Design. Man's Identity Not Certain.

A man supposed to be John Beady, probably of Lowell, fell or jumped from the electric railroad bridge over the Quaboag river at Blanchardville Saturday evening, receiving injuries from which he died later.

As the electric car due in Palmer from Worcester at 8.15, running 15 minutes late, approached the bridge, Motorman Pelham saw the man on the bridge, but before he reached the spot the man had disappeared. The car was stopped and a search made for the man, but he could not be found. Officer T. J. Crimmins was notified and assisted by others a search was made. The man was found on the bank of the river about ten feet from the water; he had apparently been in the river but had crawled to the spot where he was found. He was unconscious, and was carried to the electric power house and attended by Dr. H. C. Cheney; later he was removed to the detention room in the lockup, where he died without regaining consciousness.

The man is supposed to be John Deady or Beady, this much being obtained from pay envelopes in his pocket and letters from friends in Lowell and other places. A postal addressed to Miss Bessie Daniels, Tilton, N. H., had been written but not mailed. The man was about 5 feet 10 inches tall, with blue eyes and iron-gray hair. He wore a black coat and black trousers, and gray sweater trimmed with green. The body was viewed by Medical Examiner Jacob P. Schneider, and given in charge of Undertaker S. M. Phillips.

Probate Court Business.

At a session of the probate court Wednesday, the following local business was among that transacted:

Wills proved in the estate of—Bridget Larkin Crimmins, late of Palmer, Daniel P. Crimmins of Pawtucket, R. I., executor.

Administrations granted in the estates of—Mary S. Brown, late of Palmer, Francis D. Barton executor; Daniel W. Foskett, late of Brimfield, Harrison W. Foskett of Springfield administrator; Charles McCarthy, late of Palmer, Mary C. McCarthy administratrix.

WARREN.

Arthur Story is at the city hospital in Worcester, suffering with appendicitis.

Two cases of diphtheria were reported to the board of health Monday. The victims are Francis Burt, the six-years-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Burt of Otis street, and Albert Mitchell, the three-years-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Mitchell of Nelson street. Both houses were quarantined by W. T. Haley, agent of the board of health.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year at the annual meeting of King Solomon chapter, Royal Arch Masons: High Priest, Joseph G. Hastings; king, Alfred C. White; scribe, Herbert R. Burroughs; treasurer, Henry S. Howe; secretary, Charles D. Perkins; captain of host, William Robertson; principal sojourner, Dr. Edgar J. Buck; Royal Arch captain, A. D. Kennedy.

WALES.

Mill Office Broken Into.

The office of the Germania company was entered Saturday night and about $30 in cash was taken from Mr. Steinberg's desk.

Mrs. H. P. Smith has returned from a visit to her home in Ohio.

Mr. Ingraham of Monson has been spending two weeks at his cottage at the lake.

William Walls started hunting Tuesday morning and soon after entering the woods just back of Goodell's poolroom he found several articles that were taken from Miss Lanphear's store last week and also several things belonging to the burglars themselves, which they doubtless decided to leave behind in order to make their luggage less heavy and bulky.

Humphrey Found His Heart

By VIRGINIA BLAIR

(Copyright, 1912, by Associated Literary Press.)

Humphrey Dodd was a plain man. He had been the eldest son and had assumed heavy responsibilities when his father died. Now that the younger children were wage earners, and his mother had married again, Humphrey was free for the first time in his life.

He intended to get married! His choice lay between two village beauties. As yet he had not paid marked attention to either of them, but as he rammed his hat down on his head one gusty September night and started for a walk, he knew that he must make his decision.

He did not ask himself whether he loved Rose or Mary. They were good girls, and would make good wives. His mother had married his father in her young years of romance, and the marriage had turned out badly. She had impressed it on Humphrey that love was an unstable thing, and that he would be happier without it.

Yet something stirred in Humphrey as he left the village street and came out upon a long stretch of road, which showed white for a little way and was then hidden by the blackness of the grove beyond. Overhead the moon raced through the ragged clouds.

Humphrey brought his mind back sternly to the subject in hand. Which should it be, Rose or Mary? The fair one or the dark, the short one or the tall?

The wind blew strongly, and as Humphrey entered the shadows of the wood a thousand voices seemed to mock him, but above all the tumult came a human note, a little cry, "Oh, please—help!"

Humphrey stopped. "Who is it?" he asked sharply.

A white shape seemed to detach itself from the sable background. "I—I have—lost my way—" quivered a woman's voice, "and—and I am afraid."

Humphrey struck a match. A face appeared within the circle of light—a child's face, except for the maturity of the troubled brow.

Humphrey struck another match. "You are wet," he said, abruptly. "Were you in the storm this afternoon?"

"Yes." The match had gone out and they were again in darkness. "Yes." I walked from the car. I am from the city. I heard they needed girls up here to pick grapes and so—I came."

He could read extreme fatigue in the dragging voice.

"Come," he said, suddenly, "you must go to the village. You need something to eat—a hot drink."

"I can't walk another step." She was crying softly. "I've hurt my foot."

"Are you afraid to stay here?" Humphrey asked. "I'll go back and get my horse."

"I hate to hear the owls," she sobbed, "when they hoot—and the frogs."

In the darkness Humphrey smiled. What a child she was—with a woman's eyes. "They can't hurt you," he said, good naturedly. "I'll be back in a minute."

When he returned to the girl he found her curled up against a fallen log. "I've brought a robe," he said. "Wrap yourself in it."

When she was safe in the seat he began to think where he should take her. There was no hotel and the squalid boarding house where the grape-hands boarded was no place for this little slender thing.. His own home was presided over by his married sister, a grim young woman who would look askance at the city stray. As they reached the crossroads, he turned his horse's head away from his own house. "I am going to take you," he said, "to my great aunt's. She's seventy and she lives by herself, and she's as good—as gold."

"But can't I go on to the farm where they want help?" she questioned.

"You can rest at my aunt's tonight," he said, evasively.

When a few minutes later he had made his explanations to Aunt Betsey, and had ushered his little stray into her presence, he was silent for a moment before the revelation of the girl's beauty.

By the light of the match he had seen only her face. But now all the grace and charm of her delicate frame were revealed.

"I've got some cold baked beans,' said Aunt Betsey, bustling, "and I'll warm them up, and you shall have a cup of tea."

Humphrey blushed as she spoke of baked beans. He could not have defined his feelings, but this divinity was worthy of—ambrosia.

But as she ate the good food set down before her, daintily but with appetite, she seemed somehow to glorify the act.

Humphrey said "Good night" presently and went home. All along the way that tender face appealed to him and the trembling lips said, "I am afraid."

The next morning he went at once to Aunt Betsey's. The girl was asleep.

"I'm going to take a tray up to her,' said Aunt Betsey. "She's worn out.'

Humphrey's stiff lips framed a question. "What do you think of her?"

"She's a dear little thing. Her name is Daphne. Her father was an artist and died a year ago. Her mother died when Daphne was two years old. Since the father's death, Daphne has been trying to work in a department store. But the confinement brought on an illness, and now she has struggled out toward the country to see what the air will do for her! And she ain't fit to work," finished Aunt Betsey, "no mor'n a kitten."

"Can't you keep her here?" Humphrey asked eagerly, "to help you?"

"Gracious—I don't need any help," said Aunt Betsey. "I ain't as feeble as that. But I'd like to have her make me a visit."

Humphrey felt that Aunt Betsey was an angel. "If you will," he promised, "I'll see that you have plenty of things from my farm to make it up to you."

That afternoon he came again. Daphne was on the porch. Humphrey held her hand for a long time, but her eyes met his without self-consciousness. "I'm rested now," she said, "and I want you to take me over to the grape farm."

Humphrey looked at Aunt Betsey. Aunt Betsey shook her head.

"She wants to go to work. She says she can't visit—she feels it wouldn't be right."

"You aren't strong enough to work over there," Humphrey said; "you'd break down."

Her lips quivered. "But—oh, I can't live on—charity," she sobbed.

"You see?" said Aunt Betsey.

Humphrey felt raging within him a strange sense of determination. Never in his life had he done anything impulsively. He had weighed the charms of Rose and Mary for months, yet here he was ready to reveal the secrets of his heart to a girl he had known less than twenty-four hours.

"I want you to stay," he said tensely, "when I saw you in the woods last night—it seemed as if—I had been sent—to take care of you—and you must let Aunt Betsey do it—for my sake."

In her eyes dawned a wonder. "You want—to take care of me?"

"I want to marry you," said Humphrey, bluntly; "you're the only woman I have ever really wanted to marry. But it's too soon to tell you this—because you haven't had time to learn to care—and maybe you couldn't, anyhow—I'm so sort of rough—and different. I wish you'd try. And maybe if you don't learn to care, you'll be stronger by the time you've found out, and then Aunt Betsey and I will get you some work somewhere—but I hope you won't ever have to work—I hope you'll let me do it." It was a long speech, uttered with many breaks.

Daphne stood very still. "Oh," she whispered, "how good you are—would it make you very happy—if I should?"

To Humphrey it seemed that her words brought a vision of a new heaven and a new earth. "I can't tell you," he said, brokenly, "how happy I should be."

She laid both of her little hands in his. "I'll stay," she said, simply, "with Aunt Betsey—and she must let me help her—and—and do you know what my heart said to me last night when the match first showed me your face? It said, here is a man that a woman might trust—that a woman might trust forever."

IS WOMAN THE WEAKER SEX

Demonstrations Have Given Abundant Proof That Her Tenacity of Life Is Greater Than Man's.

From the earliest recorded time, says the Washington Herald, women have been spoken of as the weaker sex. As frail, delicate creatures. Eminent writers have asserted that aside from their natural constitutional frailty women were invalids one-fifth of the time. Yet the dawn of the twentieth century finds us with abundant proof of woman's physical superiority over man when tested by length of years, the power to endure suffering and resist disease.

In 1890 the United States census showed that there were at that time 3,981 centenarians in the country, of whom 2,583 were women. Out of 89 centenarians who died in England during the year 1883, 79 were women and ten were men, while out of 21 centenarians who died in Scotland in 1895, 16 were women and five were men.

The mystery of this tenacity of life in woman still remains a secret.

At birth boys are slightly larger, both in height and weight; and continue in the lead until twelve; then the girls pass them, both in height and weight for about two years, when the boys again take the lead and complete their growth at about twenty-three or twenty-four, while girls complete their growth at nineteen or twenty. With this brief exception, males excel in height and weight throughout life.

Wines and Pastels Jarred.

The residents of the Rue du Faubourg St. Honore in Paris—among them are the president of the republic, the British ambassador and the minister of the interior—are complaining. A succession of unwieldy autobuses pass up and down this aristocratic street and disturb the comfort of the residents.

Baron Henri de Rothschild is one of the greatest sufferers as he has two collections to which he attaches the utmost importance, his wine and his pastels. The vibration caused by the autobuses is disintegrating his valuable pictures and shaking up and disturbing his ancient wines.

The baron is petitioning that the autobus route shall be changed in consideration for his picture gallery and his wine cellar, or at least that the speed shall be reduced in passing his house.

Mandy's Memorandum

By Rose Seelye-Miller

(Copyright, 1912, by Associated Literary Press.)

Mandy Harrison carefully padded the bottom of the egg crate with papers, slipped the proper square of pasteboard over the padding, put the egg filler in place, and mechanically dropped the great creamy-shelled eggs into their compartments, carefully discarding those not clean, imperfect in shell shape, and those that were small.

"Two dozen unavailable!" she sighed as she dropped the last perfect egg in place. "Two dozen not fit to send, and sixteen, seventeen dozen and eleven that are." She paused thoughtfully. "It'll take two or three days to get enough to finish filling the case. Hens aren't laying so good now, all want to set or have chickens, and I'm owing installments on 'most everything!" Mandy caught up a scrap of bent cardboard, which had slipped from amongst the papers, discovered that it was a picture of herself, which had succumbed to the attack of some infant visitor. She began to scribble.

Installments, I've got to pay:

|---|---|
| Father's coffin | $1.00 |
| Doctor's bill | 1.00 |
| Ditto on shoes for Sammy | 1.00 |
| Ditto on wine for ma | 1.00 |
| Shingles for leak | 1.00 |
| Putting same on | 1.00 |
| | $6.00 |

"Dear, dear!" she sighed. "The eggs will only net enough to pay those things, not a cent over, even if I get twenty cents for them, and likely's not they won't fetch more than eighteen cents a dozen." Mandy stared at the list before her, but the items remained fixed, not one vanished under her severe scrutiny. "Well, take it, take it all—you old figures you!" then turning the card she began writing on the other end of it. Things I want:

I want a new dimity dress with pink rose buds in it.

I want a big ribbon for my hair.

I want a pair of stockings, absolutely whole.

A pair of pumps with high heels.

A piece of chiffon to fix my old hat.

I want Jim Patterson to come back.

She wrote furiously, punctuating each item with a decisive period at the end, indulging herself just once in her bare life the luxury of mute expression. She paused after re-reading, flushed to the heavy waves of her dark hair, gave the carboard a vicious twist which rent it in two and flung it aside, crushed the remaining egg fillers into the unfilled space of the crate, gathered up her baskets, and rushed down cellar. She came up with a pan of potatoes, which she proceeded to make ready for dinner. So busy was she with her thoughts of the last item on her list, that she forgot everything else; lost in the remembrance of her simple happy life, before her father had died and Jim Patterson had gone away. Jim had come to see her as naturally as the morning sun shone into the kitchen window, but—well, Jim had gone to the city to advance his fortunes. Jim had written, but his letters were not a bit like Jim, and finally she had stopped answering them, not because she had ceased to care, but because she cared too much and felt too proud to continue what seemed to her to be a one-sided correspondence. Mandy's face flushed, an she peeled the potatoes fiercely, flung them into their rinsing with a splash that splattered the water over her face and on to the clean floor beside her.

"Well, for the mercy's sake, Mandy Harrison!" chided a voice from the doorway. "What spite you got against those potatoes? The way you're punishing them, one would think you'd a mortal grudge against them!" Good, fat Mrs. Morris rolled into the kitchen, drew a chair near the egg crate, sat down and lifted her basket to her ample lap.

"I've just got a fit of the tantrum grumps," Mandy explained lucidly.

"You've been crying," Mrs. Morris accused aghast, for she had never seen the brave, high-spirited Mandy cry. "You've never made a fuss about anything."

"I'm not crying—it's just the water splashed into my face," Mandy retorted, plunging the potatoes into the kettle of boiling water with a dash.

Mrs. Morris, noting the surging color in the girl's cheeks, shifted her gaze to the basket she held, saying gently, "I'm wondering, Mandy, if it isn't about time you'll be shipping a crate of eggs. I've a few here I don't know what to do with, 'nless you'll let me tuck them into your box here. You can help me with my new dress, Mandy."

"I'll help you with your dress," Mandy responded warmly, "but you just trade your eggs out for groceries. I ship mine because I just have to have the money to pay my installments. If I ever do get things paid, I'll never get anything more that way—though it has been awful good of the trades people to let me pay by littles; but there's never a cent ahead—never!"

"There will be," Mrs. Morris assured comfortably. "Now I'm too penurious to pay for cutting my dress, so I'll just slip these eggs into the crate. You're just born to cut and fit."

She stooped heavily, as she cautiously slid the eggs into the fillers, and after the last space was filled, she caught up the torn photograph, upon the back of which Mandy had made her memorandum, and tucked it well down in the crate to tighten a slight looseness, which might tend to an undue shaking of the eggs. "There—that's as tight as Deacon Pettybutum's purse strings. Now you nail it up and I'll have Hiram take it along to town this afternoon."

"You're an angel," Mandy declared rapturously as she caught the ample figure in her young arms and squeezed it vigorously. "I'll cut your dress this very day while mother takes her nap."

"Huggings like that can't be called real hygienic," Mrs. Morris gasped, "but they're mighty warming to the heart."

On the following Saturday Mandy received an astounding check for her eggs, and a brief letter of explanation:

"Dear Madam—

"Your eggs are of such fancy quality I have closed them out to special customers, and have contracted for all you can send in future. Guarantee a price as fancy as the eggs themselves, etc."

Mandy gazed at the check. Twelve dollars! Why, that's forty cents a dozen! I'll be able to buy everything for mother and Sammy!" According to her custom she began making swift figures on a scrap of paper. She crossed out items and replaced them with others, until she had a list, the amount of which tallied with the face of the amazing check.

"See, mother!" Mandy cried, racing into the room where her mother lay propped in a big chair with many pillows. "See! My check, my letter and my list!"

Mrs. Harrison smiled at the girl's bright chatter, took the check limply, raised herself a little, read the letter and sat upright, then she caught the memorandum Mandy had prepared:

"But daughter!" she protested, wiping her eyes, "there isn't single thing for yourself—you've just got to get some things for yourself!"

"I will," replied Mandy promptly, "next time. I'm going to buy up the neighborhood eggs, and sell them fancy; I'll be a bloated bondholder before long, and you'll see the ribbons and things I'll buy myself, but you're going to have a hammock and a few things you need before I begin to luxuriate." Mandy kissed her mother ecstatically. "It'll be just heaven to have you around again."

Mandy drove into town that afternoon, spending her money happily, though she did shed tears when the doctor refused further payment for his services.

"Everybody is so good," she murmured, as she started down the main street towards home. She was halted by the railroad tracks, the evening passenger train having rolled in. Mandy always liked to watch the train and the people who traveled upon it. She was frankly interested in the drift of people who went past her on the sidewalk just beyond the road where her horse was halted. Suddenly across her vision rose the figure of a man, like, yet unlike the one of whom she had long dreamed. The man caught her look, paused, stepped forward, then hurried to the buggy where the girl sat dazedly looking at him.

"This is surely my lucky day!" cried Jim Patterson's well-known, well-loved voice. "I'm going home with you if you'll let me, Mandy." Jim dropped a bundle into the buggy, thrust his suit case under the seat, and located a big box in front.

"Why, Jim!" Mandy gasped, as he masterfully caught the lines from her limp hand, giving that hand a warm pressure as he did so. He chirruped to the horse until that willing creature took a pace beyond anything within his recent experience.

Not until the vacant country road was reached did Jim permit the slackening of the horse's pace. "Now, Mandy," said Jim, winding the lines over the dashboard, allowing the horse to drive himself, "I want to know why you stopped writing to me I thought you'd forgotten me."

"I didn't forget—" Mandy stammered, "but I thought—"

"You didn't have any reason to think. You know I'm no writer. I'm just dumb before a sheet of paper, but I'm not tongue-tied. Say, I've got a present for you, and I hope you'll like it for 'twas bought to your own order." Jim foraged for the great bundle. "Look here!" He unrolled before Mandy's astonished gaze, a piece of shimmering white silk, scattered and bordered with the most delicate design in pink rose buds. "And here's a pair of pumps."

"They're white!" cried Mandy," as she touched the dainty things tenderly.

"This box of stuff a saleslady I know packed up for me. I told her wanted the sort of things a real lad would want for her wedding outfit," Jim laughed happily. "Say, Mandy!"

"How did you ever know, Jim?"

Jim's face became grave as he drew from his pocket a bit of torn card board, piecing it together carefully "Do you remember when that picture was taken?"

"Yes," she quavered, "but I don't know how you ever got hold of it." Then a revealing flash came to her. "Oh! 'twas Mrs. Morris! She stuffed that in to tighten the fillers in the egg crate."

"'Twas Providence," said Jim. "I've done just great, and though I don't very often unpack the eggs, I did chance on that crate, thank heaven!"

Old friends are best.

PALMER NEWS.

Hugged Coon to Death.

Palmer Fireman Has New and Novel Method of Securing Game.

It has remained for a member of the Palmer fire department to evolve a new method of capturing wild game, particularly coons. At the forest fire near West Warren yesterday evening three coons were driven from home by the flames and found refuge in a tree. The fire finally drove them from that retreat and they started to come down. Close enough to observe them was E. J. Duncan, a willing worker in the fire department and a most enthusiastic 'coon hunter. The sight was too much for Ed and he at once abandoned his fire fighting in an endeavor to secure a 'coon. He had no weapon of any kind, but that didn't feaze him a bit; as the first 'coon slid down the tree Ed rushed up and wrapped his hunting coat about it and began the process of squeezing the life out of the animal. Naturally the 'coon objected and made good use of its teeth, but a few little things like that didn't matter in the interests of sport, and after a time it was rendered incapable of resistance and dispatched. Number 2 was ignominiously knocked over with a shovel in the hands of another member of the fire-fighting party, but the third got away; and that almost broke Ed's heart.

Candidate Bird Here.

Delayed on the Way, and Does not Make Expected Address.

Charles Sumner Bird of Walpole, candidate for governor on the Progressive ticket, was scheduled to speak on Main street at 11 yesterday forenoon. A couple of tire blowouts on his auto between Springfield and here delayed the party however and they did not reach Palmer until later in the day, half an hour before they were scheduled in Ware. A short stop was made for refreshments and consultation with friends here, but there was no speechmaking. From Palmer a part of the party went to Three Rivers and part to Monson, Mr. Bird going to Ware.

There will be a dance at the Swedish club house at North Monson to-morrow evening.

The Dorcas society of St. Paul's church held a meeting in the church parlors Wednesday afternoon.

The Palmer Trucking company is building a large garage on its land on South Main street for the storage of its big auto truck.

The first social of the season at the Congregational church will be held next Wednesday evening. Supper will be served at 6.30, and all are invited.

The schools of the town will close next Friday to give the teachers an opportunity to attend the Hampden county teachers' convention in Springfield.

The Bay State Drug Store announces in the advertising columns an anniversary sale for to-morrow, which will include some attractive one-cent bargains.

A surprise party and linen shower was given Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sanderson of South Main street Monday evening by the young people of the Baptist church.

Quaboag council, Royal Arcanum, had a good attendance at its dance in Memorial Hall last evening, and will send a neat sum to the hospital relief fund in consequence.

The Boston Festival Orchestral club of nine artists is scheduled to appear in the opera house on the evening of the 30th under the auspices of the Association for District Nursing.

About 100 attended a husking at the Wells farm on the Brimfield road Wednesday evening. A large quantity of corn was husked, after which a bountiful and appetizing lunch was served.

H. H. Hall, who has for several years conducted a cash market on Centra street, is to move to the Eager block, recently bought and being refitted by C. W. Robinson, as soon as it is ready for occupancy.

Forest Lake School Closed.

Palmer Eighth Grade May be Moved to High School Building.

The Forest Lake school has been closed because of the small number of pupils attending, only seven being enrolled. These can be transported to Thorndike for $2 per week, while the cost of running the school is several times greater.

A leave of absence for one year has been granted Miss Cora Clark of the 3d grade at Bondsville, and Miss Genevieve Riley has been transferred there from Forest Lake. Miss Bertha Pulsifer of the Three Rivers 1st grade has resigned to accept a position in Springfidld, and Miss Clara O'Connor has been transferred there from the Wire Mill school.

The committee is contemplating the removal of the Palmer grammar school to the high school building because of the crowded condition of the grammar structure.

Hear Reports of Fair.

The directors of the Eastern Hampden Agricultural Society held a meeting at the Converse House Tuesday afternoon and heard reports from the managers of the fair. The records showed that the attendance was the largest in the history of the society, as were also the gate receipts. The fair of this year should show a profit of between $2500 and $3000. The bills are being paid as fast as they can be audited, and Treasurer Ellithorpe is also sending out premium checks; these are so numerous that it will be some little time before they are all paid, but he is making them out as fast as possible. In this matter also the fair is making a record, premiums never having been paid so early before.

A special town meeting to provide funds for several of the town's departments and to consider the construction of a sewer in Bondsville, will be held to-morrow afternoon at 2 o'clock in the town house.

In the district court Tuesday morning three men giving their names as Nelson, Bostley and Kane, were found guilty of evading car fare on the Boston and Albany railroad. They were arrested Monday night for riding on the blind baggage of a train Monday night. They were fined $6 each and being unable to pay, were committed.

Monday morning four men were convicted in the district court of stealing apples from an orchard in Wilbraham. They were Stephen Bordo, Henry H. Bordo, Albert B. Bordo and Adolphus Fontaine. They paid fines of $10 each. These cases make a total of seven in which fines have recently been imposed in the district court for apple stealing on Wilbraham mountain this fall.

The annual ball of Court Palmer, Foresters of America, will be held in the opera house next Friday evening. The music will be Flanagan's singing orchestra, which will give an hour's concert preceding the ball; dancing will begin at 9. These occasions have been very enjoyable in the past, and there is every prospect of that next week fully justifying the court's past reputation in these events.

The first meeting of the season of the Palmer Woman's club was held this afternoon with Mrs. J. T. Tipper on the Monson road. A special electric car at 2.30 took the members to the place of meeting. The speaker was Miss Louise Manning Hodgskins, a former teacher in Wellesley, who recently spent four months in Cairo and made many trips on the river Nile, her subject being "On the Nile." Miss Hodgkins proved a most entertaining speaker, all the more delightful because the experiences related were her own. Tea was served by the entertainment committee.

On Acting.

Acting is not a trade which tends to stability and dignity of character, but encourages sensibility and flashes of warm instinct. Extreme alertness to praise and blame, harmoniously combined with vanity and absorption in one topic, are almost a necessity of the occupation; but this existence, however narrow and distorted, has the primal virtues of vividness and vitality. It not only depicts human passions, but it also requires in its servants a varied and constantly ready fund of emotions and instincts. Lacking the free air of independence and impartial thought, it has to the full the warm breath of crude but passionate humanity. In feeling, however blind, in life, however fragmentary, the onlooker finds more to love in the players' world than in all the dead decorum of a Philistine prosperity.—Norman Hapgood.

THREE RIVERS.

Has Been Married Since July.

The following, from the Daily Home News of New Brunswick, N. J., will be of interest to many in this village:

Announcement was made to-day of the marriage of Miss Mabel Bishop, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Bishop of Redmond street, and Ralph L. Willis of Three Rivers, Mass., which was solemnized on July 6th last.

The marriage is the culmination of a romance which began when Mr. Willis came to this city to take a position as chemist at the New Jersey Experiment station.

The bride until Saturday was connected with the firm of Johnson & Johnson as stenographer, when she gave up her position, it being understood that she was to marry in the near future. No one outside her family knew of the nuptials and it came as a big surprise to her many friends.

Friday afternoon her fellow employes at the Johnson plant gave her a kitchen shower in honor of the approaching wedding, but the bride did not let the secret out. She is a very charming young woman, a graduate of the New Brunswick high school. She has been one of the most popular and highly esteemed young women at the Johnson & Johnson plant and her resignation was accepted with sincere regret.

Mr. Willis is a graduate of Tuft's College, Boston, Mass., and was graduated in 1911. He is a member of the Zeta Psi. He is very clever in his profession. Since coming to this city Mr. Willis has made many friends and to day he was busy receiving congratulations.

FOUND DEAD IN BED.

Henry E. Bugbee, a Respected Resident, Passes Away Suddenly.

Henry E. Bugbee, 70, died suddenly at his home on Green street early Sunday morning, death being due to heart disease. Mr. Bugbee had been in poor health for several months, but retired Saturday night in his usual condition. When he did not arise at the usual hour Sunday morning his wife went to his room and found him dead in bed. It was thought at first that he passed away while asleep; Associate Medical Examiner C. W. Jackson was called and decided that death was due to heart trouble.

Mr. Bugbee was born in Stafford, Ct., January 17, 1842, and lived in that town until he was 19 years of age. At that time he enlisted in Co. 1, 16th regiment, Connecticut volunteers, but soon after he was seriously wounded in the battle of Amsterdam and was honorably discharged. A little later he joined the regular army and served three years. He came to Monson to live in 1867 and had since resided here. On January 22, 1879, he was married to Miss A. Amelia Winter, who survives him. Mr. Bugbee was for many years employed by the Merrick and Fay Hat Company and also held the position of boss dyer in the branch woolen mill at South Monson.

In the death of Mr. Bugbee, Monson loses one of its oldest and most respected citizen. He was a devoted member of the Methodist Episcopal church and a member of the appeal board. He is survived by a widow and one son, Harry Winter Bugbee, and one sister, Mrs. C. O. Chapin, all of Monson. The funeral was held Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, Rev. H. A. Kilmer of the Methodist church officiating; burial was in the No. 1 cemetery.

Locke—Moran.

One of the prettiest weddings held in Monson for some time took place in St. Patrick's church Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock, when Miss Grace Cecelia Locke, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Locke of Elm street, and James J. Moran of Bridge street were united in marriage by Rev. Thomas O'Keefe, pastor of the church. Miss Sadie C. Lyons, cousin of the bride, was bridesmaid and Luke F. Moran, brother of the bridegroom, was best man. The interior of the church was prettily decorated, yellow and white predominating. The nuptial mass was said by Rev. Thomas O'Keefe. The bride's gown was of white crepe de meteor and she wore a white picture hat and carried a bouquet of white roses. The bridesmaid's gown was of white silk, with trimmings of yellow messaline. She wore a white picture hat and carried a bouquet of yellow chrysanthemums. Immediately after the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride, after which a wedding breakfast was served to about 50 relatives and friends of the young couple. The bride's gift to the bridesmaid was a gold bracelet, and the bridegroom's gift to the best man was gold cuff links. There were many beautiful presents, including $100 in gold, silverware, cut glass, china, linen and furniture. Both the bride and groom are well known and very popular among the younger people of the town. They will soon reside at their newly-furnished home on High street.

Death of Joseph Locke.

Joseph Locke, 74, died at his home on Elm street yesterday morning at 9.15 o'clock, after a prolonged illness, of a general breaking down due to old age. Mr. Locke was born in Leeds, Eng., February 5, 1838, and came to this country when but a boy, and settled in Woonsocket, R. I. He was married Oct. 29, 1868, in Palmer to Miss Ellen Driscoll of Boston, and soon after came to Monson to live and has since resided here. He was for many years employed in A. D. Ellis & Co.'s No. 1 mill. He is survived by a widow, three sons, Thomas F. of Vancouver, B. C., and Joseph A. and Edward J. of Monson, and three daughters, Mrs. Nellie E. Charles, Mrs. J. V. Colleton and Mrs. J. J. Moran, all of Monson; also one brother, Frank Locke of Brimfield. The funeral will be held in St. Patrick's church to-morrow morning, with a requiem mass at 9.30 o'clock. For months Journal readers have seen the constant expression of praise for Doan's Kidney Pills and read about the good work they have done in this locality. What other remedy ever produced such convincing proof of merit?

Mrs. Osborn, 38 Converse St., Palmer, Mass., says: "I still recommend Doan's Kidney Pills highly and confirm all I said in their praise when I publicly recommended them in 1908. My head and back ached and it was plain to be seen that my kidneys were disordered. I always felt tired and I knew that something must be done. Seeing Doan's Kidney Pills advertised, I obtained a supply at Lynde & Gould's Drug Store (now J. P. Lynde's Drug Store). They soon gave me relief and after takin them I enjoyed good health."

Busy Chinese Hens.

It would appear that the hens of China find life more real and earnest than enjoyable, for, it is said, when not hatching out broods of their own kind, the additional and novel task of hatching fish eggs is thrust upon them. Chinese owners of hens collect fish spawn, introduce it into empty eggshells, hermetically seal them and place them under the deceived and conscientious hen. In due time the shells are removed and the spawn now warmed into life, is emptied into a shallow pool. Here the fish which appear are nursed and guarded until strong enough to be turned into a lake or stream, and subsequently add to the edible resources of the people.

Women

From Forty-Five to Fifty Are Much Benefited by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

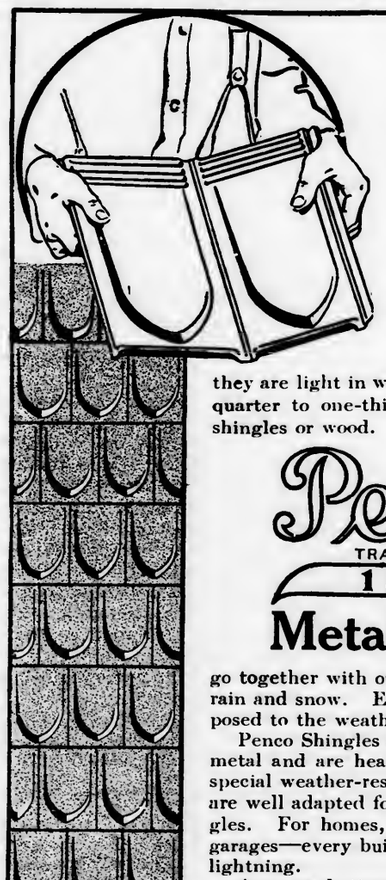
The "change of life" is a most critical period in a woman's existence, and the anxiety felt by women as it draws near is not without reason.

When her system is in a deranged condition, she may be predisposed to apoplexy, or congestion of some organ. At this time, also, cancers and tumors are more liable to form and begin their destructive work.

Such warning symptoms as sense of suffocation, hot flashes, headaches, backaches, dread of impending evil, timidity, sounds in the ears, palpitation of the heart, sparks before the eyes, irregularities, constipation, variable appetite, weakness and inquietude, and dizziness, are promptly heeded by intelligent women who are approaching the period in life when woman's great change may be expected.

These symptoms are calls from nature for help. The nerves are crying out for assistance and the cry should be heeded in time.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is prepared to meet the needs of women's system at this trying period of her life. It invigorates and strengthens the female organism and builds up the weakened nervous system. It has carried many women safely through this crisis.



Mrs. Estella Gillispie

ONE CASE OUT OF MANY TO PROVE OUR CLAIMS.

St. Anne, Ill.—"I was passing through the change of life and I was a perfect wreck from female troubles. I had a displacement and bearing down pains, weak fainting spells, dizziness, then numb and cold feelings. Sometimes my feet and limbs were swollen. I was irregular and had so much backache and headache, was nervous, irritable and was despondent. Sometimes my appetite was good but more often it was not. My kidneys troubled me at times and I could walk only a short distance.

"I saw your advertisement in a paper and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I was helped from the first. At the end of two months the swelling had gone down, I was relieved of pain, and could walk with ease. I continued with the medicine and now I do almost all my housework. I know your medicine has saved me from the grave and I am willing for you to publish anything I write to you, for the good of others."—Mrs. Estella Gillispie, R.F.D. ## DEATH OF G. M. ATKINS.

Was One of Palmer's Prominent Business Men.

WAS IN ILL HEALTH FOR SOME TIME.

Had Been Engaged In Many Important Business Enterprises. Also Held Various Town Officers.

Death has removed another of Palmer's prominent men, George M. Atkins, 59, having died at his home on Thorndike street, Sunday evening at 8.25 o'clock. Although it was known that Mr. Atkins was ill, his death was a decided shock to the community, few having realized that a fatal termination of his illness was likely. He has been in poor health for a long time and confined to the house about two weeks, but most of his friends have expected he would be about again.

The death of Mr. Atkins will be regretted not only by his relatives and close friends, but by the community at large. The esteem in which he was held has been indicated repeatedly, over a period of many years, by election to public office and appointment on many important committees. His ability as a business man was highly regarded and his interest in town affairs and strict probity were so well known as to give him unusual standing about town.

Mr. Atkins was a son of Henry and Almira Atkins and was born in Broome county, New York, Nov. 2, 1853. His father was a contractor who handled some large contracts in various parts of the country. The family moved to Chicopee when Mr. Atkins was a small boy and later came to Palmer. After completing his education Mr. Atkins became associated with his father as a contractor and after the death of the latter, carried on the business himself. He was active in it for some years, having built an important section of the Springfield sewers and much of the best stone work on the Boston and Albany railroad. He also had many other important contracts, chiefly excavation or stone work.

In January, 1895, in partnership with S. H. Hellyar, Mr. Atkins bought the Ridge's Food business and property in Palmer. The firm later incorporated and some time later, Mr. Atkins sold his interest. Since that time he has taken an occasional contract and has been interested in other business enterprises. He was the founder of the Newark Lunch Co., which operates a chain of lunch rooms, and at the time of his death was president of the corporation. He was engaged in the automobile business for a time and has had important interests in several other commercial and manufacturing enterprises.

He has served the town as selectman several terms and has also been a member of the prudential committee of the fire district. He has been a valued member of several building committees that have had charge of construction of various kinds for the town. His influence in town affairs was great and always exercised for the good of the community in his judgment. Even those who have from time to time differed with him, have given him credit for absolute sincerity at all times. He has always been a Republican in politics, but has had a strong following in both parties.

In 1876 he married Miss Margaret J. Wakefield of Needham, who survives him. There are also five children, Charles H., Allen W., Harold L., Edna and Patrice; also a sister, Mrs. J. H. Woods of Cambridge, and a brother, Charles H. Atkins of Springfield.

The funeral was held in the Universalist church Wednesday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock. There were services at the house for the family before the church services. The latter was attended by many friends and business associates. There was a beautiful display of floral offerings. The services were conducted by Rev. O. S. Raspe. Mrs. S. R. Carsley presided at the organ and Miss C. J. Fish sang several selections. The honorary bearers were Judge T. W. Kenefick, M. F. Moore, S. H. Hellyar and T. J. Moran; the active bearers were Charles H. Atkins, Charles H. Atkins second, Harold L. Atkins and J. H. Woods. Burial was in Oak Knoll cemetery.

Good Cheer Rebekah lodge held a thimble party yesterday afternoon in the lodge rooms, with a supper for members at 6.30. Following the supper the regular meeting was held, when there was balloting and initiation. Plans are being made to celebrate the lodge's 25th anniversary at the next regular meeting, November 14th.

Progressives Organize.

Meeting Held Monday Night and Plans Made. To Hold Rally Soon.

Palmer voters who desire the success of the Progressive party have an opportunity to lend such aid as they may desire, through an organization perfected Monday evening for that purpose. There had been a temporary organization of Progressives at an earlier time and a public meeting was held in the district court room Monday evening, to effect a permanent organization. The attendance was small and those at the head of the movement said they expected it would be. They have no doubt that a substantial number of Palmer voters intend voting the Progressive ticket, but they realize how loth many men are to take any public position in politics.

The meeting was called to order by H. C. Ellithorpe, who was elected temporary chairman at the earlier organization. The purpose of the gathering was explained and it was voted to organize a Roosevelt Progressive club. The avowed object of the new organization is to forward the interests of the Progressive party and to elect an entire ticket, if possible. It was voted that the officers shall consist of a president, secretary, treasurer, an executive committee of five and a financial comittee of three. Officers were elected as follows: President, H. C. Ellithorpe; secretary, Rev. O. S. Raspe; treasurer, W. W. Converse; executive committee, H. C. Ellithorpe, Rev. O. S. Raspe, G. A. Branford, H. F. Tucker, W. A. Clark; finance committee, F. S. Bearse, L. E. Royce, D. L. Bodfish.

John F. Hebard of Holland, Progressive candidate for representative, was introduced to the meeting. He spoke very briefly and left early to take the electric car home. After his departure it was voted to endorse his candidacy.

Later the executive committee was authorized to arrange for a rally and arrangements have since been made for such a gathering in the opera house on the evening of November 1. The local committee has been promised able speakers, but is not yet prepared to say who they will be.

Narrowly Escapes Death.

Man Employed in Warren Was Nearly Electrocuted Sunday.

David Wagner, an employe of the Lucius Engineering Company, at work in Warren, had a narrow escape from being electrocuted Sunday morning.

He was engaged in unloading some iron girders to be used in supporting bridge No. 83 A, just west of the passenger station. The boom of the derrick became entangled in some electric light wires, and Wagner, without knowing the nature of the wires, went up on the boom to release them. He had no more than touched the wire, carrying 1500 volts, than he was enveloped in blue flame, and the spectators expected to see him burned to death. He was unable to release himself, and he did not fall to the street, which was 50 feet below. Two men went up the boom and brought him down. He was able to walk to Hotel Ramsdell, where he boarded, and soon after began to feel the ill effects.

Dr. C. A. DeLand, who was called, discovered that his nervous system was suffering from the terrible shock, and from a spot on his right side, where he was burned, his legs were suffering from toxic paralysis. He was removed to the Worcester city hospital Tuesday morning.

Breaks Through Bridge.

Auto Truck Meets With Accident In Brimfield. Slight Damage.

The large auto truck of the Palmer Trucking Company broke through a small bridge at Brimfield Monday. The truck was uninjured and was extricated after being unloaded.

This is the second time this machine has gone through a bridge, and if it is kept in operation it will eventually be the means of causing the bridges to be put in condition for the traffic they are now called upon to bear. The law provides that towns are liable for any damage caused by the collapse of a bridge, provided the vehicle and load do not exceed six tons. It is thought the truck and its load did not exceed that limit Monday. The load was furniture and there were no heavy articles. It was being moved from Southbridge to Lake Pleasant. Many of the large touring cars traveling on country roads weigh enough to put an unusual strain on many of the small wooden bridges that have been strong enough heretofore to carry the traffic, and it is predicted that unless towns make provisions in the near future for heavier vehicles that there will be accidents not only involving property loss but loss of life.

Was the Discoverer Of Chloroform

Dr. Samuel Guthrie Jr. Was a Native of Brimfield. A Prominent Physician, Who Later Became Interested in Chemical Experiments.

It seems a little singular that so worthy a family as the Guthries of Brimfield should not have been accorded an honored niche in its town history, especially as one of its members had achieved international fame years before the book was published.

A short time since, the writer, in conversation with Mr. G. M. Hitchcock of Brimfield, was informed that some years ago a descendant of Dr. Samuel Guthrie, a native of Brimfield, visited there, and claimed that his ancestor was the discoverer of chloroform. The writer was asked if he knew the facts in the case, and the following sketch is the result of his search:

The Guthries date far back in Scottish annals. Crawford says in his lines of the officers of state, "That the Guthries held the Barony of Guthrie by charter from King David II (in the 14th century) and that they were men of rank and property long prior to the reign of James II." The castle of Guthrie is still extant. The honor with which the Guthries were held in Scotland is evinced by the fact that no less than five families of the name were honored by the bestowment of coats-of-arms. John 1 Guthrie left Scotland on account of religious persecution and settled in Boston, and later removed to Litchfield, Ct., where he died about 1730.

John 2 Guthrie, (John 1), settled in Woodbury, Ct., about 1686, where he became an honored and wealthy citizen. He died 1756.

James 3 Guthrie, (John 2), born in Stratford, Ct., April, 1732, settled in Woodbury, Ct., and removed thence to Lenox, Mass., in 1770. He served in the War of the Revolution. He died in Sherburne, N. Y., April 22, 1804.

Dr. Samuel 4 Guthrie, (James 3), was born in Woodbury, Ct., May 23, 1756. He removed with his parents to Lenox in 1770, and there enlisted for service in the War of the Revolution. He later studied medicine and settled in Brimfield, Mass., about 1780, when he became noted for his skill as a physician and surgeon. He early became a member of the Masonic fraternity and was one of 12 Masons of Brimfield and Monson who petitioned the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts for the establishment of a lodge in Monson, which was granted and carried into effect in 1796, and Dr. Guthrie was chosen its first Master, which office he filled till 1802 with credit to himself and to the lodge.

The Guthrie homestead was pleasantly located in the outskirts of Brimfield village, nearly opposite the ancient cemetery on the banks of the Quinnebaug river, which is spanned near by with a bridge long known as Guthrie's bridge. This ancient house long remained in good repair until about 15 years ago, when it was destroyed by fire, when owned by William Lombard. When recently visited by the writer, a cellar-hole was the only evidence of a former residence there.

Dr. Samuel Guthrie married (1) Sarah ——; he married (2) Anna ——, who survived her husband. He died in Brimfield August 23, 1808. His gravestone is still to be seen there, and near by is an unmarked mound, probably the grave of his first wife. Children born in Brimfield by first marriage:

I. Samuel, born 1783, (see below)

II. James, born 1784. He studied theology and became widely known for religious zeal and his efforts to prevent litigation. He removed from Brimfield to Dayton, Ohio, where he died.

Children by second marriage:

III. Rufus. He studied medicine with his father and practised his profession for a time in Brimfield.

IV. Alfred G. He also studied medicine and practised his profession, but his further record has not been ascertained.

Dr. Samuel 5 Guthrie Jr. was born in Brimfield, 1782, and married 1804, Sybel Sexton. He died Oct. 19, 1848, at Sacketts Harbor, N. Y. He studied medicine with his father and soon was honored with the title of M. D. He removed from Brimfield to Sherburne, Chenango county, N. Y., where he began the practice of his profession. In the war of 1812 he received the appointment of examining surgeon in the army. In 1817 he located at Sacketts Harbor, N. Y., where he soon became a pioneer in the United States in the field of practical chemistry. The first results of his experiments were the invention of percussion pills and the lock to explode them, which soon superceded the old-time flint lock in firearms. In 1830 he also invented a process for the quick conversion of potato starch into molasses, which he published in Silliman's American Journal of Science. During his various experiments his life was often endangered by the explosive combinations of chemical agents, yet undaunted he continued to labor in his chosen field of scientific research until he gained international renown by the discovery of chloroform, antedating by a few weeks the same independent discovery by Suberon in France and Lieberg in Germany, whose several experiments were carried on unknown to each other. Dr. Guthrie's chloroform was distributed and his process reported and verified by the elder Silliman at Yale College in 1831, while the publication of the Suberon and Liebeg discoveries were made in January and March, 1832, respectively.

Dr. Guthrie's process was by distilling together alcohol and bleaching powder and afterward purifying the distillate, thus obtaining pure chloroform. The actual nature of this substance termed by Guthrie "Spiritous Solution of Chloric Ether" remained unknown till 1834, when Dumas published the result of his investigation and named it Chloroform. A committee of the Medico Chirurgical Society of Edinburgh awarded to Dr. Guthrie the merit of having published an account of its therapeutic effect as a diffusible stimulant in 1832, thus putting the seal of authority on Dr. Guthrie's claim as the original discoverer of chloroform, an agent which has proved a blessing to afflicted humanity.

Dr. Guthrie had a son Alfred, born in 1805, who studied medicine with his father, who became eminent as a civil engineer. Another son, Edwin, born in 1806, studied medicine and served in the Mexican war and died there from a wound received in battle. Guthrie county, Iowa, was named in his honor.

NOTE. The main facts for the foregoing sketch have been gleaned from Appleton's Encyclopedia of American Biography, the Encyclopedia Britannica, the Guthrie Genealogy, the U. S. Dispensator, Silliman's American Journal of Science and the Centennial Memorial of Thomas Lodge, published 1896.

Wales Store Broken Into.

Burglars Visit Lanphear's Store For the Second Time in Two Weeks.

The store of E. & E. Lanphear in the Shaw block at Wales was entered again last Friday night by burglars. Some clothing, shoes, tobacco and candy were stolen. No attempt was made, however, to take anything from the post office, which is located in the rear of the store. Suspicion is directed toward local parties.

This is the second time during the past two weeks that this store has been broken into. The loss this time, however, is slight compared to the previous one, when the stock in the store was turned upside down and much damage was occasioned in this manner.

John A. Coburn and suite of Barre, district deputy grand master of the 19th district, paid an official visit to Thomas lodge of Masons Monday evening. Following the working of the second degree, a collation was served in the dining room.

Taft Republican Committee.

Organizes Last Evening and Makes Plans For the Coming Election.

Republican activity broke out in a new spot last night. A party of men, who desire to further the interests of the Republican candidates in the coming election, met in the office of David F. Dillon and organized the Taft Republican Committee. The following officers were elected: Chairman, John C. Sullivan of Palmer; secretary, Louis Smart of Three Rivers; treasurer, Henry W. Holbrook of Palmer. The committee proposes to supplement the work of the Republican town committee by every means in its power and to attend to such other campaign work as its members from time to time regard as likely to be effective. There will be another meeting in Mr. Dillon's office next Monday evening. At that time all Republican voters of the town of Palmer who are interested in the coming campaign will be welcome. Sub-committees have been appointed in each precinct, who will make a special effort to get out the vote on election day and through whom other campaign work will be done.

Good Books To Read.

An Interesting List Compiled. Efforts to Unite Library and Schools.

Books are being constantly added to the Palmer library, and an honest effort is being made to supply the best of modern fiction in order to afford the reading public an opportunity to secure the recent books as soon as they are published. The trustees have plans under way for extension centers. These centers will be established in each of the villages and in each of the village and district schools. A distinct effort is being made to unite the work of the library with that of the public schools. These are two of the agencies that are the most potent in educating the future citizens of Palmer. The trustees of the library feel that they can work together much more efficiently than either can work by itself.

Through the efforts of the English department of the high school, a list of books has been compiled suited to the tastes and abilities of the various classes in the high school. This list is now being typewritten by the commercial department of the high school, and a copy of it will be placed in the hands of every pupil. It is believed that this will prove an ineentive and an impetus to the cultivating of the habit of reading good books by high school pupils.

In order to furnish the reading public with a list of good novels, the Journal is printing below a list of 100 of the best novels. This list was compiled by one who is familiar with these novels. This list does not pretend to include the hundred best novels. Some sixty of the books are acknowledged classics, while the remaining 40 include some of the more noteworthy of the recent novels. Some have been added to give variety and insure that no one consulting the list would fail to find titles of at least a few books that he had read and enjoyed. Nearly all of these authors have written other excellent novels and many of the same will be found in the library. Good editions of all of these books, or nearly all, will be found in the Palmer library. The librarian is always glad to give advice about, and aid you in the selection of books. "Novels are sweets;" and with these sweets some more solid reading such as history, science, biography, and travel are recommended. The Palmer library has a fairly good supply of these.

SPECIAL TOWN MEETING.

Appropriations Aggregating More Than $3000 Made.

MORE MONEY NEEDED FOR HIGHWAYS

Sewer in Bondsville To Be Completed And Repairs To Be Made On Two Bridges.

The special town meeting at the town house, Four Corners, last Saturday afternoon, was attended by very few voters. Appropriations aggregating $3221.85 were made and the treasurer was authorized to borrow that amount. The appropriations were: Highways, $1500; sewer in Bondsville, $1500; and repairs on bridges near West Brimfield, $221.85

The appropriation for highways was made because of the request of the highway surveyor for that amount of money. He answered the few questions asked him, stating that all the highway appropriation has been expended. There are other repairs that are imperative. There was no choice but to grant the appropriation. Had it been refused, some of the highways must have remained in an unsafe condition, with the possibility of damage and perhaps loss of life.

The refunding of the $21,000 loan from the Palmer Savings Bank, made to pay for the stone arch bridge in Three Rivers, was completed. It was voted to issue bonds to that amount. They are to be in denominations of $1000 each and three are to be retired each year, beginning next year. The rate of interest will be four and one-quarter per cent. This disposes of a matter that should have been attended to two years ago, but was neglected..

It was voted to accept a common sewer in Bondsville, near the premises of T. D. Potter, and the appropriation of $1500 for sewers was to complete it. This is a good stroke of business on the part of the town, in the opinion of the selectmen, and was demanded by the residents of Bondsville.

The appropriation for repairing bridges was to cover the town's share of the cost of repairing two bridges near West Brimfield, the joint property of the towns of Palmer and Brimfield. It will be remembered that a truck owned by the Palmer Trucking Company went through one of these bridges a few months ago, necessitating immediate repairs. It was found that the other bridge was unsafe also and it was properly repaired at the same time.

Now that more money has been appropriated for repairs of highways, it will be generally expected that the strip lying between the villages of Warren and Ware, which has been so bitterly complained of by Ware people, will be properly repaired. There is no doubt that the strip is in outrageous condition and there can be no excuse for neglecting it further.

Fox Hunt In Belchertown.

Most Successful Meet in Years. Large Attendance of Members.

The New England Fox Hunters' Club is holding its eighth annual meet in Belchertown this week, and that it has been an unusually successful one is evidenced by the fact that 15 pelts have been secured up to to-day.

The hunt opened Monday morning, with about 40 members of the club in attendance. R. L. Barnes of Maynard secured the first brush at 6.08 o'clock. A. D. Kier of Thorndike secured the second about an hour later, while John S. Shine of Amherst got the third soon after 10 o'clock. E. L. Walling of Woonsocket, R. I., secured the fourth one some time later.

Tuesday morning 78 hunters and 70 dogs took to the field, and the day's work was rewarded by securing five brushes. The weather conditions were ideal and a good day's sport was enjoyed. A banquet was given in the Park View hotel in the evening, followed by the election of officers. J. W. Jackson of Belchertown was re-elected vice president.

In spite of the heavy downpour of rain which lasted nearly all day, 75 hunters and 70 dogs responded to the call of the hunters' horn Wednesday morning. Four pelts were secured. In the evening the annual ball of the club was held in Park View hotel with a large attendance.

Notwithstanding the wet weather, one of the biggest crowds of that has yet gathered took the field yesterday when 100 set out at 5 o'clock in the morning. Divided into small parties they beat the bush in all directions valiantly. The only lucky man for the day was Elmer Fletcher of Middleton, who shot a fox at 9.30. The hunt will continue through to-morrow.

Sunlight on Her Shoes

By CLARISSA MACKIE

(Copyright, 1912, by Associated Literary Press.)

From her perch in the old apple tree Lila Moore looked down the orchard's dappled vistas. It was very quiet and sleepy there in the summer afternoon and the lids drooped over her dark blue eyes and the book half slipped from her fingers. Her bright hair against the sober brown of the tree trunk made a flash of golden color.

When she opened her eyes again it was to gaze incredulously and then with growing indignation at a hatless young man sitting before an easel and undoubtedly painting her picture.

Lila coughed.

The painter looked up and slightly frowned. "If you could hold that position another instant!" he pleaded.

"You have no right to paint me without permission," protested Lila indignantly.

"I could not ask permission without awaking you," he said mildly.

"I was not really asleep.

"But it would have spoiled the picture if you had stirred—the light on those leaves is perfect." He gazed at the heavy branch beyond her where the sunlight struck warmly through the pale green leaves.

Miss Moore's instinct was to descend from the tree at once, but on second thought she decided not to spoil a perfectly good picture by changing her attitude.

She wished that she knew more about art so that she could talk to the painter, who was strangely absorbed in his work. He was a slenderly built youth with a dark, keen face and bright black eyes. Lila was not surprised that his clothes were shabby, and she had no doubt that he was poor. Perhaps this picture would bring him fame and fortune.

"I wonder what he will call it," she soliloquized. "Perhaps—'Girl in the Apple Tree' or something like that."

"It's very good of you to favor me in this manner," said the artist at last as he gathered his pencils and clattered them into the box beside him. "The instant I saw the sunlight on your shoes I said to myself: 'Here's what you're looking for, Wilbur.'"

"The sunlight on my shoes!" shrieked Lilla.

He nodded.

"Would you like to see the thing?"

"Of course," said Lila rather crisply, "one cannot help but feel a little curiosity concerning one's own picture."

The youth looked rather disconcerted at this remark, but he stepped forward to give the fair model a helping hand. But Lila needed no assistance. She sprang lightly to the turf and hastened to the easel.

She swept one glance at the strong pencil drawing and stared for one incredulous instant at the artist, then with haughtily lifted nose she flashed about and disappeared among the trees.

The artist gazed ruefully at his drawing of the apple trees, with the girl sitting in an attitude of careless repose. He had produced a wonderful effect of light and shadow with his pencil, and the little buckled shoes braced against the tree trunk seemed fairly to scintillate with brilliancy.

But he had left Lila's lovely face out of the picture! Her hair was there and her softly curved throat and everything save her features.

While he stood there she came back again, her white linen skirt swishing the long grass as she hurried toward him. Her cheeks were bright with color and her blue eyes sparkled dangerously.

"Pardon my curiosity, but will you be good enough to tell me why you left my face out of the picture?"

"It's for an advertisement, you see," he said, coloring, "and I could not take the liberty of having your face scattered broadcast over the country."

"Oh! And what will you do for a face?" asked Lila, in an absurdly relieved tone.

"I shall find a professional model to sit for that in town. The whole attitude was so charming—it would have made a great picture in oils," he said, with enthusiasm.

"Why didn't you paint it in oils, then?" she asked.

His face clouded. "Can't afford to spend the time now. I'm in the advertising line and I've got to stick to it for a while. Some day, when I've got enough saved up, I'm going to cut this stuff!" He nodded savagely at the drawing.

"It's splendid—as it is," said Lila. "Do tell me what it is going to advertise?"

Again he colored with embarrassment. "Closefit Shoes," he said, grimly.

"And that was why you was so particular about my shoes?"

"Yes. You see, it will make a stunning advertisement for the shoes on a vacation trip—understand?"

Lila nodded. "I thing this is splendid—just think of all the people who will see that picture and how many shoes it will sell—eh!"

He shot a gratefully admiring glance at her. "Most people wag their heads and tell me I have no temperament to waste my time over this stuff; they babble about 'art for art's sake' and all that, but one can't eat paint and drink turpentine—not for long, anyway!"

"I should say not! Anyway, I'd rather be a successful advertisement artist than a failure as a portrait painter, or as landscape artist," cried Lila a little breathlessly.

"It's mighty nice of you to say that!"

"I mean it—I don't believe Velasquez or any of those old masters could produce a good advertisement," went on Lila recklessly.

He laughed outright at her last remark and was about to put the drawing away, when she held out a restraining hand.

"Please don't think me conceited, but—if you could use me as a model now, perhaps you could finish the drawing at once and not wait until you returned to the city." She was blushingly warmly when she ended.

"Ah, that's more than kind of you," he cried, "but I would rather not—if you please."

"Not even with my permission," she asked a little coldly.

"No—some time I may be able to tell you," he said gently. "I can never express to you how grateful I am for your generous offer; you have already been more than kind to a complete stranger."

They shook hands and the artist wetn his way, looking back once or twice at the picture Lila made, for she had resumed her seat in the apple tree.

The sun slanted lower until long, level rays pierced the branches, and still she had not moved. From the big summer boarding house where she was stopping came the warning note of the supper bell.

At the table Lila found herself acknowledging an introduction to the artist of the orchard. His name was Wilbur—Barnes Wilbur. He seemed glad to meet her again.

The next morning they met in the front piazza. "I'm going to hunt for a motif for another sordid advertisement," he laughed. "Will you come with me?"

"I'd love to!" cried Lila Moore. "What is the advertisement to be?"

"Tryem's Baked Beans!"

"Good. Let us go to the kitchen garden and put the growing bean vines into the picture. Shall I borrow a sunbonnet and pick some in a basket?"

Whatever Lila Moore did she attacked with enthusiasm and accomplished with complete success. Never had Barnes Wilbur's drawings been so good or in such demand. It became a matter of course that Lila should accompany the young artist on his tramps around the countryside, and what one pair of eyes did not discern another did.

At last the summer drew to a close. Barnes Wilbur prepared to return to New York. Lila Moore's aunt announced that they, too, must return to town.

"Dear," said Barnes to Lila on the last evening as they stood beneath their apple tree, "would you trust your future happiness to me—would you dare marry such a poor beggar as I am? I shall never be great—but I love you."

"If you were great you'd be in love with yourself or your art," laughed Lila, "please tell me why you would never use my face in your drawings?"

"I've wanted it for myself from the first," he whispered. "Will you trust yourself to me, dearest?"

"Yes," she whispered, and later:

"And we can take the wedding trip on Budlong's Matchless Griddle, Barnes, can't we?"

"Yes, and furnish our house on the Farmer's Breakfast Oats and Purity Soap checks, darling," he added seriously.

Gorging Oneself With Sight-Seeing.

A blunt old doctor told a patient who was starting out on a long foreign tour: "Madam, take it easy."

Would you eat up everything on your table just because it might be wasted? It is just as gluttonous to gorge yourself with sight-seeing.

Many things cause this injudicious traveling. Women love to get the most for their money. If they are traveling with a conducted tour they feel as if they should have a rebate if they miss one item on the itinerary.

The ordinary tourist is so anxious to improve her mind that she feels bound to take in every notable sight she may have heard mentioned in an extensive reading. It takes courage to be a discriminating traveler, but it is really the only way to travel—but the dread of missing something has caused many a nervous breakdown and an unsatisfactory vacation.

It could so easily have been avoided by common sense and a less greedy mind. As only a certain amount of impressions can be retained, why not pick and choose.

Submarines to Fight Porpoises.

A new use has been found for the submarine by the French ministry of marine. The artificial porpoises are to fight and kill the natural porpoises. It has been found that hungry porpoises on the French coast have almost ruined the sardine industry, which mints millions for the people of the coast towns and the Channel isles. To remedy this state of affairs torpedo boats and the submarines are being sent under "sealed" orders to search the waters of the Channel and make things so hot under water for the blunt-nosed acrobats of the waves that those who survive will take either to the Irish Sea, the North Sea or the Bay of Biscay.

Feminine Triumph in England.

A cable just received from England says: "The greatest success ever achieved at an English election by women was at Birmingham, March 18, where of twelve women nominated for members of the Board of Poor Law Guardians, eleven were elected."

Success and Failure.

Lack of success comes merely from the wrong appreciation of failure.

PLAGUE SPREAD BY CAMEL

Carcass of Dead Beast Left Exposed Caused Slight Outbreak in Russia.

The Paris Medical publishes some observations which throw an important light on the cases of plague which occurred in Russia some time ago. As far back as 1907 Dr. Kiodnitzlhy noticed in the Cazarel Island, in the Caspian Sea, a, slight outbreak of plague. Three women were attacked, and he was able to establish, after inquiry, that they had all three been engaged in handling the carcass of a camel which had died from some unknown cause. Later, in April, 1911, plague appeared in a little place in the district of Kamysch-Samara. Six persons were attacked with plague, and all had eaten of a camel that had died.

At the end of September, in the same year, another camel in the district died, and then an autopsy was made. There were no clear indications of any injuries to account for death, but in the viscera the doctor found a bacillus identical with that of Yersin, the cultures of which reproduced plague in animals which were inoculated. Toward the end of the same month other human beings were attacked, and the outbreak coincided with the death of a camel, and tests with the blood produced a typical plague bacillus. Dr. Klodnitzlhy has no doubt that the cases of plague in the human beings owed their origin to eating the flesh of plague-stricken camels, and he suggests that the camels in question had been eating herbage which had become infected by camels suffering from the disease.

Work Was Remedial.

The following report from the records of a probation officer is significant: "M. Z., of German descent, graduated from grammar school. Parents neat, respectable, and thrifty. Germans. Girl wanted to go to work. Parents would not allow this, as they did not need her wages and thought she should stay at home and help about the house. Girl became unmanageable, and stayed out several nights, whereupon her parents brought her into court as incorrigible. The probation officer urged that the girl be allowed to go to work. The parents agreed, the girl was placed on probation, and found work for herself in a department store. From that time she gave no trouble."

Learning to Sing

"Do you know," mused the girl at the piano, "that singing isn't an art, nor a talent? It's just a record of so many dollars and cents. And the more dollars and cents you've spent on your voice the better your voice is.

"That doesn't mean, either," she went on, "that it's all a matter of training. If I should take a hundred lessons at $1 a lesson I'd be considered just about one-third as advanced and proficient in vocalizing as I should be if I'd take a hundred lessons at $3 a lesson."

"Why this pessimistic mood?" inquired the man who was sitting near.

"I'm not pessimistic," replied the girl, calmly. "I've just discovered another truth. You try it and you'll see. With the piano or the violin it's different. While I grant that with them dollars and cents count a lot, still, if you can play the keys and the notes the same, people will listen to you, and, perhaps, enjoy the playing—but with vocal music everything depends on the money cost. There seems to be a quality in the tone, or something that tells people just who your teacher is and what you pay for your lessons—and you get complimented accordingly."

"Yes?" The man's voice invited further explanation.

"Well," the girl proceeded, "even if one practices alone on the piano one can accomplish something, can't one? But when a poor soul tries to practice singing alone the neighbors shut the windows and the members of her own family beg for mercy, and even the children make fun of her. But let that same person announce that her vocal lessons are figuring in the high numbers—that Professor Somebody devotes a whole precious half hour to her voice every once in a while—and the neighbors sit out on their porches evenings to listen to her scales. Her family is impressed.

"Now, I've been singing off and on, for my own pleasure, since I was a baby. I've always had a modest degree of respect for my own voice—but I have generally seemed to be alone in my opinion. If I sang it was usually an accompaniment—and when I was younger it used to hurt my feelings."

"Why, I've always told you that I like your voice." The man took on a tone of reproach, but it didn't seem to work well.

"You!" she laughed. "Why, of course you—but I mean people who count, in music!"

"That seems to dispose of me effectively," conceded the man.

"But as I was saying," proceeded the girl, "it's absolutely no earthly use to have a nice voice. You may sing like a bird, but if your voice has been trained outside of a first-class studio you simply can't sing, no matter how well you sing. That's all there is to it! Why, if Melba herself hadn't had first-class voice teachers no one would have ever realized what a voice she had. People would still be telling her to sing something instead of forever practicing scales, whereas they gladly pay $5 or so for a seat to hear those very scales put into some handy song!"

"From all of which," commented the man, summing the matter up, "it appears that you are sick of it all and are going to leave the vocal field to the moneyed classes and stick to the piano. I really think you are wise, myself. Singing isn't such a great stunt after all, unless one has a fine selection of songs—and even then the same things can't please every one. On the other hand, if you play, you can play to please the whole bunch—and——"

"You are entirely mistaken," interrupted the girl, deeply offended. "If you think that after all this work I'm going to give up just because my teacher didn't give me a decent solo in that recital, so that my voice would show off well beside the others, you're badly deceived.

"I'm going to spend some real money on a good teacher, that's what I'm going to do! I'll show them that they were all good and mistaken!" Then she pounded the piano keys.

The Oldest Ship.

The oldest ship in the world was recently broken up at Teneriffe, Canary Islands. It was the Italian ship Anita, built in Genoa in 1548, and almost an exact duplicate of the Santa Maria, the famous galleon in which Columbus made his voyage of discovery. The Anita was built for strength rather than grace or speed, broad-beamed and clumsy, but had weathered hurricanes and typhoons in all parts of the globe, and escaped unharmed from the perils of the deep from Cape Horn to Hudson bay. She had a world's record as the slowest ship afloat, averaging 205 days between Baltimore, Md., and Rio de Janeiro. As her lack of speed was losing money to her owner, and she seemed destined to defy the elements and enrich Lloyds' indefinitely as long as she remained afloat, it was decided to sell her for what she would bring piecemeal, and use the money she brought toward constructing a new vessel.

Reach for the Ideal.

"Your circumstances may be uncongenial, but they shall not long remain so if you but perceive an Ideal and strive to reach it. You cannot travel within and stand still without."—James Allen

Getting Matters Adjusted

"Aren't you a trifle late?" asked the girl when she met the young man at the door.

"I believe I am a little," replied the young man. "A wagon load of coal was wrecked on the track and that delayed my car for a few minutes. But I'll go home a few minutes earlier tonight to make up for it. Is that a new gown—and that rose in your hair! You're certainly a dream! I have got to have another kiss. Whom do I hear in the parlor?"

"That's Mr. and Mrs. Cawsworthy and a niece of theirs and old Mrs. Dwine. I want you to meet them Come in."

"Hold on a minute!"

"What's the matter?"

"It was a week ago tonight that I proposed to you and was accepted, wasn't it?"

"Yes, silly. Why?"

"And the next evening you had a family reunion when I called."

"Yes. Of course, I wanted you to meet all my relatives."

"Of course. And the next night when I called I found a bunch of your old school friends holding down the furniture. And I had to go home with a girl who lived out, as it seemed, a little way beyond the place where the sun sets."

"Well, I wanted you to meet my old friends. I don't see—"

"And the next night the minister of your church was here with his family. I explained to him in the course of the evening that I do not drink and do not gamble and that smoking is not really a habit with me, because I can quit any time I feel inclined."

"Well, of course, you understand, he, being a minister—"

"The following night I found some old friends f your mother's in the parlor and—"

"I don't see why you take that tone. I guess—"

"Wait. The next night it was the members of a club you used to belong to when—"

"Well, they were all nice young people."

"And last night it was Mr. and Mrs. Caraway and their son, who thinks he is a natural born comedian. And tonight it is Mr. and Mrs. Cawsworthy and a niece and old Mrs. Dwine."

"I think you are perfectly horrid tonight! What do—"

"I just wanted to ask you if I might bring father over to see you tomorrow night?"

"Of course you may! I just know I shall love him."

"And may I bring mother over the next night?"

"Why, certainly you may. The idea: I hope—"

"And my little brother the next night?"

"Of course, but—"

"And the members of our glee club the next night?"

"Ye-es, I suppose so. But what they've got to do with—"

"And a few old friends of our family the next night?"

"Certainly."

"And the nurse, who used to take care of me when I was a baby, the next night?"

"I shall not be at home that night, Mr. Templeman."

"How about the next night?"

"Nor that night, either."

"Then suppose we give a grand ball somewhere and invite all your acquaintances to look at me and all my acquaintances to look at you—"

"I shall do nothing of the kind. If you feel like that about meeting my friends I—perhaps we—you have made a mistake. I—you—are you coming into the parlor or not?"

"No."

"Very well, I—"

"I don't think I have time. I have got tickets to the theater. And I have got to coax a girl to go with me, and I am afraid I shall be late if I don't hurry."

"You should have telephoned to your friend this afternoon."

"I tried to, but the telephone was busy."

"Well, I will excuse you. I hope you will have a pleasant time."

"She is a little girl about your height and she has on a stunning gown and there is a rose in her hair. Oh, go in and make our excuses and come on. Be a good fellow! I haven't had an evening with you since we were engaged, you know I haven't."

"You silly! Of course I'll go. But you've got to go in and entertain them while I get ready."

"How'll I entertain them?"

"Just put a rug over you and growl like a bear; that's the way you've been entertaining me."

"No, but honest—"

"Billy, if any callers ever happen to drop in here on your nights after this I shall give them slices of bread and butter and tell them to run home to their mothers. Stop! They'll hear you and you're spoiling my rose!"

To Find Source of River.

One of the world's unsolved geographical problems concerns the sources of the Brahmaputra river, in Tibet. In a recent attempt to explore this region two European travelers were killed by the natives. A punitive expedition has been organized by the British government, and it is expected that the scientists who are to accompany it will at last solve the puzzle.

ROMAN ROADS IN ENGLAND

Project of Putting Old Highways in Useful Condition Is Being Revived.

British motorists are showing some interest in a project which is being revived of reopening and putting in usable condition the old Roman roads that led out from London to the surrounding cities and that connected up the outlying places. The ancient highways, built by the Roman generals for military purposes, were well constructed and their routes were exceedingly straight, but they have apparently in many instance been practically abandoned.

Few except students of the subject are aware of the great network of highways which were driven across England, Wales and Scotland by the Roman generals. The straightness of these roads probably is explained by the fact that the cities and towns they linked up were founded subsequent to the road making. The roads were constructed for military purposes—the subjugation and control of the turbulent Britons—and had no set objective. Camps grew into cities and towns founded at points of military vantage. These naturally lost their importance in many instances when the conquerors withdrew, and their very sites are forgotten.—Feld.

Money in Butterfly Farm.

An Englishman operating a butterfly farm is said to sell to museum and collectors upward of 50,000 specimens yearly. He obtains as high as $50 for exceptionally fine ones, and his net income is said to be fully $2,500.

Sought to Swallow Will.

A curious scene occurred recently in a lawyer's office at Castanet, near Toulouse, France. The lawyer was reading the will of a landowner who recently died, in the presence of the relatives of the deceased. The deceased left practically his whole estate to his widow, and this fact so infuriated a cousin that he suddenly jumped up, snatched the will from the lawyer's hands, tore it into fragments and, cramming them into his mouth, endeavored to swallow them. He was seized by the throat and finally forced to disgorge the bits of paper, which were afterwards gummed together.

He and Another Man.

A woman who owns a little brown rowboat, which when not in use is tied in a sheltered Cape Ann cove, responded to a knock at her cottage door the other day to find a very diminutive boy standing on the threshold. "Please, ma'am," lisped he, "can me an' another man have the loan of the brown skiff to go a-cod fishin'?"

Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Course of Entertainments.

Committee Has Secured Some Fine Attractions So Far.

Plans are under way for the final completion of arrangements for the course of entertainments planned for Palmer this winter. A committee consisting of Dr. G. A. Moore, Dr. H. C. Cheney, Rev. O. S. Raspe and C. H. Hobson has the course in charge. The idea of the committee is to put on four first-class entertainments. They have no object in view other than furnishing the people of Palmer with a high grade class of entertainments. The course, as arranged, will be interesting and enlightning. If the present expectations of the committee are realized, the course will open Friday evening, December 20th, with Katherine Ridgeway. Miss Ridgeway is a reader of national wide reputation. She has no peer at the present time. Miss Ridgeway is a very expensive entertainer, and the only reason that the committee is enabled to secure her is Palmer's propinquity to Boston. Some members of the committee have heard Miss Ridgeway read and know from experience that her ability to entertain is beyond question.

On Monday, January 6th, Thomas Brooks Fletcher is scheduled to lecture. Mr. Fletcher is an entertaining speaker and "makes a hit" whereever he speaks. On Friday, February 21st, Ex-Senator Frank J. Cannon will speak. Mr. Cannon is regarded as one of the best orators on the American platform today. He not only is delightful to hear, but is also a very persuasive and convincing speaker. Wherever he speaks, he leaves firm convictions. He is a great orator, has a fine presence, knows what he is speaking about, and also how to impart such information to the audience. He is justly rated as a high class attraction. The fourth and last entertainment has not been definitely decided upon, but it will be one that will round up this excellent course in a fitting manner.

The price of tickets for the entire course will be $1. A certain number of reserved seats will be offered at $1.50 for the entire course. This will allow those who hold a reserved seat to come to the opera house whenever they wish and find their seat waiting for them. It is doubtful whether or not Palmer has ever been offered a better opportunity to hear such entertaining and high grade artists. It is the hope of the committee that this course will meet with aready response; if so, similar entertainments will be put on the years following. More definite announcements will be made later.

Death of Miss Abbie F. Holbrook.

Miss Abbie Fox Holbrook, 74, died at her home on North Main street Monday afternoon about 4.30 as the result of apoplexy. She suffered a shock last week Wednesday, from which she did not rally. Miss Holbrook was born in Ware October 10, 1838. She had lived in this town about 50 years, making her home with her brother, C. D. Holbrook, until his death. She was a member of the Congregational church. She is survived by a niece, Miss Linda Holbrook, with whom she had lived, and two nephews, Arthur W. Holbrook and Henry W. Holbrook. The funeral was held at her late home yesterday afternoon at 2.30, Rev. F. S. Brewer officiating. Interment was in the family lot in Oak Knoll cemetery. The bearers were A. W. Holbrook, H. W. Holbrook, J. A. Hawkes and W. A. Clark.

Foresters' Annual Ball.

Court Palmer, F. of A., will hold their annual concert and ball in the opera house this evening and it promises to be the social event of the season. Flanagan's sing ng orchestra of Marlboro will furnish music with a concert of six numbers, after which the grand march will form and a dance program of 22 numbers will follow. The following is the concert program:

|---|---|
| March. "Corcoran Cadets." | Sousa |
| Overture. "Light Cavalry." | Suppe |
| Selection. "Woodland." | Luders |
| Vocal Duet. | |
| Messrs. Henry Werner and Eugene Closson. | |
| Medley. "New York Hits." | Shapiro |
| Finale. "On the Go." | Schraft |

All the schools were closed to-day to enable the teachers to attend the Hampden County teachers' convention at Springfield.

Was Destroyed By Fire.

Schoolhouse in the Shaw District Burns Wednesday Morning.

The schoolhouse in the Shaw district, in the extreme northeastern part of the town, was destroyed by fire Wednesday morning. The blaze was discovered by Ware people and an alarm given. The chief of the Ware department notified the Palmer department, and the auto truck hastened to the scene. On its arrival, however, the building was found to be totally destroyed.

The building had not been used for a schoolhouse for some time. It is probable that hunters visited the building and started the blaze in some manner, and probably left the building without knowing it.

With the burning of the Shaw school another of our few remaining outlying schoolhouses passes out of existence. A school was established in this district in 1767, and the original land for its accommodation was located about half a mile south of the Charles R. Shaw homestead on the ridge road. At one time Ephraim Gates taught school with 75 pupils in attendance. This old house passed away many years ago, and about 25 or 30 years ago the new house, just destroyed, took its place, being located near the ancient home of Charles R. Shaw. It was occupied for schoolhouse purposes until the attendance became so small that the school was discontinued a few years ago.

Only four country schoolhouses now remain in town, viz: The Shorley, the Forest Lake, the Mason and the Old Center. The old Burleigh schoolhouse has fallen into complete ruin.

News From Former Residents.

The following communication will be of interest to the friends of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Phelp, who resided in Palmer a number of years ago, Mr. Phelp being at one time an employe of the Journal office:

"Many readers of the Journal in Palmer and Ware, who remember Mr. and Mrs. Jack Phelp, will be glad to hear of them from one who has recently visited their home in England. Mr. and Mrs. Phelp have built a new home on the border of Effing Forest in Greater London. No one but Jack Phelp could have designed such a house, with modern ideas, grafted on to English prejudices, and the result is charming. Those who remember his well-cultivated garden in Palmer, will be interested to learn that his present garden is his especial interest, and anyone who knows what an English garden is, can form some opinion of it. Mr. and Mrs. Phelp will celebrate their silver wedding in November. With their three daughters, Mr. and Mrs. Phelp are still young in spirit and enjoy the respect and love of their neighbors and friends. The Journal comes to their home each week, bringing to them news of their old associates and never to be forgotten friends. Next to visiting Palmer nothing would give them greater pleasure than greeting some of their American friends in their new home."

Plate Glass Window Broken.

The large plate glass window in the jewelry store of E. E. Brooks on Main street was broken in a peculiar manner Monday afternoon. A tire blew out on a passing automobile, and one of the bolts fastening the tire was broken, a portion of it striking the window with such force as to break a small hole in the glass and crack it badly. The bolt re-bounded, falling in the gutter. Fortunately no one was passing at the time or a serious injury might have resulted. The owner of the machine offered to pay for the damage done.

Relatives Claim Body.

The body of John Deady, about 40 years of age, who was accidentally killed by jumping from the bridge at the Central Massachusetts electric light plant at Blanchardville to avoid being run over by an electric car on the evening of October 12th, was claimed Wednesday by his two brothers from Rhode Island. The remains have been at Phillips' undertaking rooms awaiting identification. The body was buried in the Thorndike cemetery. It was through the efforts of Officer T. J. Crimmins that the relatives were located.

Treen—Schneider.

Dr. J. Philip Schneider of Palmer and Miss Margaret M. Treen of Clifton Springs, N. Y., were united in marriage Wednesday evening at 7 o'clock at the home of Dr. Willam A. Hare in Springfield. Rev. Otto S. Raspe, pastor of the Universalist church, performed the ceremony, in the presence of immediate relatives and a few friends. The couple was unattended. The bride wore a gown of white chiffon over white silk, trimmed with Venetian lace, and carried a shower bouquet of white roses and lilies-of-the-valley. Following the ceremony a reception was held, Spare catering. Dr. Schneider is a well-known physician and surgeon. He was graduated from the University of Vermont and has since taken surgical courses in New York and Boston. During all the 17 years of his practice he has been in Palmer, where he is chairman of the board of health, railroad surgeon and a leading physician. Dr. and Mrs. Schneider left on a trip of three weeks to North Dakota. After December 1 they will be at home to their friends at 12 Thorndike street, Palmer.

Rare Musical Treat.

The Boston Festival Orchestral Club will give an entertainment in the opera house next Wednesday evening, under the auspices of the Palmer Society for District Nursing. This will be a rare musical treat for the people of the town, and a large patronage is expected. Mrs. Ada Murdock Hill of Southbridge will give readings. Mrs. Hill is well known to Palmer audiences and is a favorite entertainer here. The entertainment promises to be of a high order and is in such a worthy cause that it is hoped there will not be a vacant seat in the house. Tickets are being sold by members, and may be exchanged for reserved seats at Kinsley's pharmacy next Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock.

Plea For An Emergency Room.

Editor of the Journal:

May I beg space in your paper to voice some ideas that recent events have brought forcibly to my attention?

About two weeks ago I was called to attend an accident case of serious nature in our town. The man had fallen from a bridge into the river and was fatally injured from fall and exposure. He was not drunk and there was no reason for taking him to our lockup except that he must be taken somewhere and treated, a trip to the hospital being out of the question. The only place there was and is to take a case needing urgent care is to the doctor's office or the lockup. The case in question died and it seemed to our officers and myself that it was a terrible way to treat the "Stranger within our gates." The medical profession of the town without exception gladly open their offices for the injured, but a physician's office is a public place and we have not the facilities to care for a case needing warm clothing and a bed for several hours.

This brings up the need of an emergency and detention room in the town other than the lockup. I do not believe that the people of Palmer have any conception of the number of cases taken to the Springfield hospitals from our town or the condition of some of those taken. Let me say that one hospital tells me that the income from Palmer patients last year was over $3000. The need of a hospital is too expensive a question to enter into now, but an emergency room is not expensive and much needed, and with the above as a sort of introduction I would like to give an opinion of the location, equipment and cost of such a room.

There will soon be vacant on Central street a large room on ground floor with large entrance, convenient to the junction of some of our "seven railroads." This room can be easily divided into two rooms, the rear room large enough to contain two cots. This room can be used for a detention room by our police for cases not advisable to take to the lockup. The front room should have an emergency table, an instrument table, a case holding dressings and first aid instruments and solutions, an instantaneous gas water heater, telephone and chairs. There should also be kept here two stretchers convenient for any one to go and get in time of need; plenty of blankets and a hospital cot basket to be used in conveying the patients to Springfield hospitals.

The use of the room would work out about as follows: A sick or injured patient would be taken to the room direct, some physician called at once; also the district nurse. Here they could do all very necessary dressings and have the things convenient to do with. If it was not advisable to take the patient to the hospital at once, the cots could be utilized for a number of hours and the life of at least one saved each year. It seems to me that I can recall about one each year that dies in our town for want of such care. The police can use the room for cases that seem to them to be in a dangerous condition, and you need only to ask our officer how many such he has in a year and what a relief it would be to him to have such a place to take them. Juveniles who very often must be detained for a number of hours should not be taken to the lockup and could well be cared for. The cost of such a room should be assessed to the town under the departments of Overseers of Poor or Board of Health. The cost of equipping such a room would be about $200. The cost of maintaining, $250 rent, lights, heat and occasional nursing and janitor service. The heat could be furnished by gas heaters and then could be had only as needed. We have several excellent nurses in town and an institution near us that has again and again shown their willingness to help us in emergencies. The janitor service would be light and easily filled. The sources of income for such a place are several, namely: The desire of many patients to pay their own bills, the various insurance companies who expect to pay first aid charges for their injured, and the local police court that no doubt would assess in the fines for first aid care.

My idea in this communication is not necessarily for any special location or to dictate how or what the idea should embrace, but to get it before the public in some form at once with the idea that what the public needs the public is best able to say. If the plan is good, say so to your local officer or write the local papers who are always interested to act for a public improvement. Don't let us have to work on our sick and wounded in any such place as our local lockup.

DR. H. C. CHENEY.

There is a bad hill where the accident occurred and great care had to be exercised in running the trains at this point. Truth About Domestic Duties.

There is absolutely nothing in domestic duties themselves, or in any form of manual labor that develops the mind or elevates and broadens the character. The idea that every woman needs practical instruction in housekeeping as a part of her education is as absurd as would be the claim that every man needs to be taught in school to plant corn or milk a cow.—Mary Leal Harkness.

WRATH CAME IN VERY HANDY

So Mad After Spat With Sweetheart That He Whipped a Bandit.

Sam Jones was mad clear through. He had just had a quarrel with his sweetheart, and although he had concealed his anger until he left her home he was now boiling over with rage. As usual, Sam had got the worst of the little spat, for in spite of his 6 feet 2 and his great strength his diminutive lady love had wound him around her finger like so much ribbon.

As Sam alighted from the elevated train at his home station his cheeks were still flushed with helpless anger and he was just "spoiling" for a fight or almost any kind of a chance to even up matters on some one. His wish was destined to be granted sooner than he knew, for when he descended the elevated steps to the street a figure blocked his path, a revolver was held a few inches below his nose, and a gruff voice commanded, "Come on! Shell out, Jack!"

Without a second's hesitation Sam smashed the would-be robber full in the face with his brawny fist and sent him reeling several paces backward and stunned him so that he dropped his weapon. Both Sam and the thief were so surprised that they merely stared at each other for a few seconds, then the latter remembered that he possessed a good pair of legs and started to run at express speed.

"Here's a good one," Sam laughed grimly as he set out in hot pursuit of his assailant. "This fellow intended to hold me up and now I'm going to hold him up just to balance things a trifle." Sam was soon forced to give up the chase, however, for he was burdened with a heavy ulster, while the holdup man wore a light sweater.

"Gee," chuckled Sam, "If I hadn't been as hot under the collar as I was, as a result of that little fuss with Alice, I'll bet I'd have shelled out like a little lamb when he presented the invitation. I'll go up there tomorrow night with a big box of chocolates and square things up."

Failing Appetite.

At breakfast in a country boarding house a girl of 12 got away with a dish of prunes, a bowl of cereal, three eggs, two muffins, three slices of bread, two glasses of milk and two cups of coffee. "Well, Mary," some one remarked, "you seem to have a good appetite." Regretfully the child answered. "Not very; 'tisn't nearly as good as it used to be."

Fellow Feeling.

An advertising man of Cleveland was going home one night in a street car. It was late and the man who sat next to him began to talk.

"What business are you in?" he asked.

"The advertising business."

"Is that so? I used to be in the advertising business myself. Quit it, though, and went into the rag and old bottle business; got a horse and clean up my sixty every month."

There seemed to be nothing for the advertising man to say, so he said it.

"Yes," continued the talkative man, "I was in the advertising business—was a sandwich man for a clothing store for six months! Say," and he leaned over confidentially, "ain't it hard work when the wind blows?"—Saturday Evening Post.

Eagles Clearing Away Pests.

The wild boars and foxes of Santa Rosa Island, Cal., are being exterminated rapidly and in a novel manner. The American eagle is doing the work. The eagles that have their habitat in the rocky eminences of the island grow to immense size, the smallest mature bird measuring about four feet from tip to tip and the largest being seven feet or more in sweep with wings extended. They can carry thirty or forty pounds dead weight for miles with apparent ease. The eagle swoops down upon its prey and rises to a height of fifty feet or more with the struggling animal clutched in its talons. If the pig shows too much fight it is dropped, the fall killing the animal. Then the eagle descends and carries off the carcass to the distant aerie. Foxes also are the prey of the eagles.

Monson News.

Loses Part of His Foot.

Monson Boy Jumps On Freight. Is Now In Springfield Hospital.

An extremely sad accident occurred Tuesday afternoon, when Norman P. Dempsey Jr., son of N. P. Dempsey of Oak street, was seriously injured. He is in the Hampden hospital in Springfield, with all of his left foot except the heel cut off.

Young Dempsey, in the company of several other students of the Green street grammar school, was at the school awaiting the opening of the afternoon session, when a local frieght train came along back of the school building at a slow rate of speed. As has been the custom for years with the school boys, they dared each other to jump aboard and take a short ride, although this has been expressly forbidden by railroad and school authorities and the parents of the children. In doing so young Dempsey slipped and his left leg fell directly in front of the moving wheels. He had however presence of mind enough to pull his leg off the track, but the greater part of his left foot was run over diagonally from the big toe to the heel.

Dr. Fuller and Dr. Jackson were summoned and young Dempsey was removed to the Hampden hospital in Springfield, where it is thought that with skillfull surgery in time he can walk on the heel of his left foot without the aid of crutches or a cane. Young Dempsey is a bright and popular young student and sympathy for him and his family is general.

EVER SEE A STOUT POSTMAN?

In London, for Instance, Carriers Walk Over Sixteen Miles Carrying Forty Pounds.

Has it ever struck you why a stout postman is such a rarity? The question is worth attention.

A postman who in a busy London residential district walks from fourteen to sixteen miles a day, starts out in the morning with mails weighing something like eighty pounds. As his letters and packages are distributed, the weight of his bag, of course, grows less, so that the average weight he carries during his trip is forty pounds. A pint of water weighs a pound. A 16-quart pail weighs about twenty pounds, and the average weight the postman carries is equal to two of these. If you want to know why postmen are thin, try a 15-mile walk with a 10-quart pail of water in each hand.

The driver of a brewery wagon, on the other hand, is usually fat. The reason is that he sits on the seat of his dray most of the day, and often consumes large quantities of liquid. Policemen, too, often grow fat through standing about on their beats. —Answers, London.

Doan's Kidney Pills are for weak kidneys,

Read what a Palmer citizen says:

Mrs. A. Sherman, 24 Park St., Palmer, Mass., says: "All I said in praise of Doan's Kidney Pills when I publicly recommended them in August, 1908, still holds good. It would be hard to fully describe the misery I endured from kidney complaint. I was rarely free from a dull, bearing-down pain in my back and I was subject to chills and dizzy spells. My head ached, my appetite was poor and I had a feeling of languor. When I saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised, I obtained a box at Lynde & Gould's Drug Store (now J. P. Lynde's Drug Store) and they helped me from the first. As I continued taking them, I steadily grew better until my trouble was a thing of the past."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—DOAN'S—and take no other.

Old Charcoal Burner.

The charcoal burner may still be found, and that within 30 miles of London. This writer knows a charcoal burner who has carried on his ancient trade for 40 years in Surrey and Sussex. You come suddenly upon the piled dome of fine earth on hearth or in woodland and near it is his neatly constructed hut of withes, fern and heather, with its rough corner posts and little door.

There he lives during the whole period of the calcining process, keeping a sharp lookout to see that inquisitive passersby do not push an injuring stick into the mound which might result in a sudden burst of flame and the ruin of that particular lot of wood. This man is his own master; he knows his markets and he makes a decent living. A curious, solitary life—but he knows all about the birds.—London Chronicle.

Most Big Fires Spread Because of Wooden Roofs

The cheapest fire insurance is to roof your buildings with Penco Metal Shingles. They will keep your house safe if there is a fire nearby.

Penco TRADE MARK 1869 METAL SHINGLES

cost no more than good wooden shingles, they last as long, look better and do not "spring aleak" nearly as often. Our clamp joint keeps out all moisture. Nails are not exposed and can't pull out. The warm, red brown of these shingles is the most attractive color for a roof. They afford almost perfect protection from lightning. Because they are light in weight, they put only one-third to one-fourth as much strain on rafters as wood or slate.

Any tinsmith, carpenter or dealer in hardware and building material can supply and lay a Penco roof for you that will give you the best satisfaction. They are just the thing for siding. The larger size Penco Shingles are splendidly adapted to laying over old wooden shingles. Penco Shingles are galvanized or painted.

VALUE OF FORESTS PROVED

In Addition to Conserving Rainfall, They Are of Other Aids to Agriculture.

While the rainfall of any region is dependent on dynamic influences in the atmosphere, and can be affected only in a very slight degree, if at all, by the extent of that region covered by forests, it has certainly been shown that woods and forests conserve rainfall. The briefest consideration indicates the likelihood that this must be so, because vegetation and the ground covered with vegetation absorb water and allow it to percolate slowly to the lower levels, whereas on bare ground the rainwater runs quickly away to sea. But trees serve another purpose in aid of agriculture; because, as some recent experiments show, they act as windbreaks and shelters to growing crops. The distance to which the protective influence of trees extends is estimated at twenty times their height, though complete protection, such as might be afforded to growing wheat in a gale, extends only to a distance eight times the height of the trees. Partial protection is about twelve to fourteen times the height. They also check evaporation of rainfall, their influence extending five times their height to windward and eighteen times to leeward, and preserve as much as 70 per cent. of moisture ordinarily lost. Finally, their influence heats both air and soil, increasing the diurnal range of temperature by as much as nine degrees Fahrenheit.

Patrolman's Brave Act.

A New York patrolman of the East 126th street station, sent thrills up and down the spines of several hundred persons in Third avenue the other afternoon when he leaped for the head of a runaway horse, missed the bridle, fell sprawling, and then picked himself up in time to get a grab at the end of the flying wagon. Such was the speed at which the outfit was moving that the policeman, to the admiration of onlookers, was hoisted into the wagon. He found it impossible to stop the horse, but calmly sat in the driver's seat and waited until the animal was halted by a string of street cars at 138th street. The horse had run more than three miles.

Pay for Privilege of Hunting.

Different German states have different rates for persons who want to hunt. In Prussia, for instance, Germans pay about $5.50 a year for the privilege, and foreigners pay four times that amount. In Wurtemberg, native hunters pay about $7.50 a year and foreigners pay twice that amount.

HOW THREE WOMEN ENJOYED THE MUSIC

Three plump women, ranging in weight from 160 to 200 pounds, file in and, after much creaking of silk gowns and groaning of chairs, are seated as the concert is about to begin.)

First Plump Woman (breathlessly)—"This is going to be a perfectly grand concert. I'm so glad we decided to come this afternoon, though I was awfully afraid Mrs. Deming wouldn't send my gown home. It did come, though, just in time for me to dress. How do you like it?"

Second Plump Woman—"It's perfectly lovely. But then you always look exactly right. So well groomed, don't you know, and all that. Doesn't she, Mrs. Tilden?"

Mrs. Tilden—"It's the dearest thing I ever saw. You certainly have the best taste in dress, Mrs. Snowdon. Every time I see Mrs. Snowdon, Mrs. Thompkins, I say to myself: 'If I only had such taste as she has!'"

Mrs. Snowdon—"How nice you two are! Of course, I know you're just saying it to make me happy, but then it's just as dear of you as if you meant it. Now, I think you two are the trimmest two women I know."

(Orchestra plays first number. At its close the three women give three sighs of appreciation or relief.)

Mrs. Snowdon—"Pretty, wasn't it? I do just love Wagner. And while I think of it, Mrs. Tilden, I want to ask you where you got that perfect dream of a fichu you had on yesterday at the tea. I'm crazy about it!"

Mrs. Tilden—"Oh, do you really like it? How sweet of you to say so! I got the lace in Paris and I had my little seamstress make it when I got home. I think it's rather fetching."

Mrs. Thompkins—"It's the dearest thing! Oh, they're going to play again. I wish they'd wait a little longer between the numbers."

(The first violinist plays a solo.)

Mrs. Thompkins—"Isn't that violinist the dearest thing you ever saw? I simply adore him."

Mrs. Snowdon—"Yes, he's perfectly sweet, but he has the funniest looking wife. Did you ever see her?"

Mrs. Tilden—"I should think I did. I have very good reasons to remember her. I saw her at the tea Mrs. Dupont gave for her, and one of the maids spilled punch all over my best gown. It was never fit to wear afterward."

(Chorus of lamentations from the other two.)

Mrs. Tilden—"And such a dowdy thing as she is, too. Really, her gown was nothing but the plainest kind of silk. It looked as if she had bought it ready made. Really, the most ordinary looking thing."

Mrs. Snowdon—"Funny, isn't it, how queer these artistic people are about their clothes? The only one I ever knew who wasn't was the wife of that artist who visited Mrs. Tolman last winter. Do you remember what perfect dreams her gowns were?"

Mrs. Tompkins (with intense interest)—"Weren't they! I never saw anything more beautiful than the one she had at the reception Mrs. Tolman gave for her."

(The orchestra rudely interrupts them.)

Mrs. Tilden—"Isn't that young flutist absolutely the most attractive creature you ever saw? Now, do tell me about the gown you were speaking of, Mrs. Thompkins. You know, I was ill last winter and didn't go to the reception."

Mrs. Thompkins—"Well, it was gorgeous, my dear. Simply too wonderful for words. It was the most delicate shade of bluish lavender—a perfectly indescribable color. Marquisette over messaline, draped in the most wonderful way, and caught up with little bunches of chiffon, with a violet fastened in the center of each. What a catastrophe that you missed it!"

Mrs. Tilden—"I almost cried when I heard about it. I was the most disappointed person you ever saw. And usually Mrs. Tolman's affairs are so dowdy. By the way, there's Mrs. Parks down there. Speaking of dowdy people made me think of her. She has less idea of dressing than an other woman I ever knew. Actually she went to Mrs. Tuttle's garden party last Thursday in a perfectly plain linen frock. Not even a suit, my dear—just a little linen dress, with some sprays of embroidery on the front panel. Can you imagine any one doing such an unheard of thing? I'm sure Mrs. Tuttle felt it very keenly."

Mrs. Snowdon—"Poor Mrs. Tuttle! By the way, I suppose you're both going to the Trenton's Friday evening?"

The Other Two—"Yes, indeed!"

Mrs. Tilden—"I wouldn't miss it for worlds. What are you going to wear?"

Mrs. Snowdon—"Oh, I'm having Mrs. Deming freshen up my white voile with some new laces—just cheap little lace, only $3.50 a yard, but I've worn the gown three times already and I didn't feel like putting much money into fixing it up."

Mrs. Thompkins—"I'm having a little gray chiffon made, and I really think it's going to be a very dainty little frock. Simple, of course, and inexpensive. I've made up my mind that I simply won't spend more than $50 on it. But then I adore simplicity. I simply will not fuss over my clothes."

Mrs. Tilden—"Nor I."

Mrs. Snowdon—"I feel just the way you do. That's why I adore living in Forest View. I simply couldn't live in a place where people judged you by the clothes you wear. In Forest View, you know, you really don't have to give your clothes a single thought."

Paris has 115 inhabitants to the acre while London has 51.

Surely Simple Enough.

"Jersey justice" is famed the country over, and one of the latest examples proves that it is indeed sui generis. In a city not a thousand miles from New York the Sunday law with regard to amusements is supposed to be strictly enforced. It was noticed recently, however, that a wealthy and influential brewer who was the principal owner of a house not noted for giving classic entertainments was permitted to present unmolested "sacred concerts," which consisted principally of high kicking and stale jokes. A rival manager, learning of this went to the police commissioner with his tale of woe. That functionary, leaning his chin on his hand, regarded the theatrical man attentively for a moment, and then said: "You see, it's this way. He can give his performance on Sunday and you can't. Now, you understand the law, don't you?" And who could fail to comprehend such a simple explanation?—New York Tribune.

Give Liberally to Religion.

Americans are the most liberal contributors to religion in the world. In addition to providing $12,000,000 a year for the redemption of the heathen of other lands, they give to the churches the munificent sum of $127,000,000 a year for their support and maintenance.

His Line of Work.

"Sam, have you got a job now?" "Oh, yes, sah." "What are you doing, Sam?" "Why, I's gettin' my wife washin', boss."

Have Long and Short Lives.

BACKACHE NOT A DISEASE

But a Symptom, a Danger Signal Which Every Woman Should Heed.

Backache is a symptom of organic weakness or derangement. If you have backache don't neglect it. To get permanent relief you must reach the root of the trouble. Read about Mrs. Woodall's experience.

Morton's Gap, Kentucky.—"I suffered two years with female disorders, my health was very bad and I had a continual backache which was simply awful. I could not stand on my feet long enough to cook a meal's victuals without my back nearly killing me, and I would have such dragging sensations I could hardly bear it. I had soreness in each side, could not stand tight clothing, and was irregular. I was completely run down. On advice I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and am enjoying good health. It is now more than two years and I have not had an ache or pain since. I do all my own work, washing and everything, and never have backache any more. I think your medicine is grand and I praise it to all my neighbors. If you think my testimony will help others you may publish it."—Mrs. OLLIE WOODALL, Morton's Gap, Kentucky.

Every woman ought to have Lydia E. Pinkham's 80-Page Text Book. It is not a book for general distribution as it is too expensive. It is free and only obtainable by mail. Write for it to-day. Lydia E. Pinkham Med. Co., Lynn, Mass.

Crawford Ranges

The experienced cook knows that in the ordinary range the oven has "cold corners" and "scorching spots"; in other words it is not heated uniformly at all points. In the Crawford the heat from the fire is carried around the oven by specially designed heat flues in such a way as to heat it in all parts alike. That is one reason why the Crawford Oven bakes better than others.

The perfect control of the fire afforded by the patented Single Damper together with these scientific heat flues make the Crawford Range a better baker than any other. Then there is the Ash Hod instead of that old kitchen nuisance, the clumsy ash pan.

OLD SCHOOL HISTORY.

Interesting Items Concerning the Shaw Building.

HAD MANY PUPILS IN EARLY DAYS.

Building First Erected in 1767, in Then Populous Community. Not Used For 20 Years.

The passing of the school house in the Shaw district, as reported last week, serves to call to mind some interesting facts connected with maintaining schools in that locality since 1752.

In 1752, when Palmer was established as a district, steps were taken at once to establish schools in the four quarters of the town, and the territory east of the Pottaquattuck, since known as the Shaw district, was one of them. Prior to 1767, however, the schools here as elsewhere in town were held in private houses with one teacher going from quarter to quarter in succession.

In 1767 this district was one of the four quarters of the town which was honored with a colonial schoolhouse. It was located on the ridge east of Pottaquattuck, at the four corners where the road from the McClanathan house crosses east to the Erwin Shaw place, and where the road from the C. R. Shaw farm runs south to the Shorley district. At the time of its erection this locality was one of the most populous in town, and the territory now largely overgrown with timber was then under cultivation; within a radius of half a mile of this schoolhouse have been found some 20 cellar holes where happy homes then existed, each furnishing a goodly quota of children for the school. So that for many years there were from 75 to 80 pupils in attendance during the winter term, when often the pupils were 20 years old. But at the advent of the mills in town in 1825 and later, the boys and girls left the old homes on the hills to seek employment, money coming quicker in the mills than from the stony hillsides. As a consequence the schools began to decrease in size, as one by one the fathers and mothers silently found a resting-place in "God's Acre" at the old Center, and the boys and girls did not come back to take their places on the old homesteads, which in time nature claimed as her own again. With the diminished number of pupils came a lack of interest in the schoolhouse, which received scant repair, so that in 1853, the committee were led to report concerning the house "It is a dismal looking place inside, and almost out of sight and hearing of any dwelling." And again in 1854 the committee report, "Schoolhouse far away from the habitations of men and a relic of ancient times." This state of things continued till the winter of 1859, when there was an average attendance of only one pupil, due to the uncomfortable condition of the building. The schools were closed from this point till the winter of 1864-5; then closed till the summer of 1867 and kept open until the house was left to ruin in 1870.

In 1869 the old district school system, which had obtained so long in Palmer, was abolished, and the town took over the school property of all the districts. But the schoolhouse in the Shaw district had become such a wreck that it was not deemed worthy of appraisement by the committee, after serving from 1767 to 1869 or 102 years.

In December, 1870, the ancient house having been discarded, a new house was built near C. R. Shaw's residence, at a cost of about $700. A school was opened at once, with an average attendance of nineteen pupils, proving the wisdom of furnishing comfortable conditions in a desirable location. Again the school prospered under the guidance of qualified instructors until removals of families from the district reduced the attendance to such a degree that the school could no longer be profitably maintained, and in 1892 the school was closed never again to be opened and the schoolhouse was left to itself to perish at last in the flames on October 23, surviving 42 years.

The names of only a few of the old-time teachers have come down to us. In 1774 Robert Brown was hired to teach in this district for one pound, twelve shillings and eleven pence for the term, and waited two years for his pay; John Patrick was an early teacher; Samuel McClanathan taught for six years and Samuel Shaw for 22 years. Our later records have preserved a complete list of the teachers in the Shaw district from 1851 till the school was closed, which list is given herewith with average attendance:

As there were but four children in the district who would go to school the school was closed in September and the four children provided for elsewhere.

CORRECTION.—In my article entitled "Old School Days in Palmer," in the Journal of April 10, 1908, it is stated by a slip of the pen, that the second Shaw schoolhouse was built 100 years ago. It should read 100 years later than the first.

Wilbraham Academy Dedication.

Will be Next Friday, 87 Years From Ceremony of First Building.

The dedication exercises of the new Wilbraham Academy will take place next Friday. The date set is of peculiar interest, being just 87 years since the dedication of the old Academy. The morning will be devoted to the inspection of the buildings, grounds, etc. This will afford former students and friends of the Academy an opportunity to see the many changes and improvements made during the summer on all the buildings, which have been extensively remodeled and improved. At noon a buffet lunch will be served in the new dining room at Rich Hall.

At 2 in the afternoon public exercises will be conducted in Fisk Hall. Prof. Caleb T. Winchester of Middletown, Ct., a graduate in the class of 1865, and president of the board of trustees, will be the presiding officer. Brief addresses will be made by Frank C. Dunn, ex-1889, of Gardner, Prof. Charles H. Raymond, assistant headmaster of the Lawrenceville school at Lawrenceville, N. J., and Bishop William Burt, 1885, of Buffalo, N. Y. Immediately following these events, there will be a meeting of former students of the Academy for the purpose of organizing a permanent alumni association.

In the evening will occur an anniversary of the famous old literary societies, Old Club and Philo. Hundreds of men prominent in the affairs of the world have obtained useful literary training in one or the other of these societies. A large attendance is expected at the day's exercises.

NORTH WILBRAHAM.

Death of Mrs. Jane Tuggey.

Mrs. Jane Tuggey, 62, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Jennie Roberts, Sunday night as the result of a fractured hip sustained about four weeks ago by falling downstairs. Mrs. Tuggey was born in England, and spent most of her life in Montreal, where she lived until 12 years ago, when she moved to North Wilbraham. She leaves two daughters, Mrs. Jennie Roberts of North Wilbraham and Mrs. Ward Angel of Springfield, and also four grandchildren. The funeral was held Tuesday at the home of her daughter on Cottage street. Burial was in East Wilbraham cemetery.

Arnold Green entertained a husking party at his home in East Wilbraham last Friday evening about 25 of his young friends from Palmer, Monson and North Wilbraham being present. After the husking the party adjourned to the house where there was dancing and vocal and instrumental music.

SCHOOL ATTENDANCE.

Palmer Building Has Highest Average For Month.

FOUR ROOMS HAVE PERFECT RECORD.

Two Rooms Perfect For Two Months. Tardiness Decreased Nearly 75 Per Cent.

The attendance reports of the Palmer schools for the month of October indicate that good work along the lines of attendance still continues.

The per cent of attendance for the entire schools is 96.94 per cent. This per cent is slightly more than it was for the same month last year. The enrollment, the average membership and the average attendance indicate that there are some 80 more pupils in attendance this year than last.

The best showing of all is in the matter of tardiness. A glance at the summary will show that in every school in town there was a very noticeable decrease in the number of tardy cases. In the high school, the Thorndike grammar and the Bondsville grammar schools there was only one case registered in each building. This means that some 636 have caused but three tardy cases in the entire month. The number of cases registered by all the schools was 17 against 63 for the same month last year. The per cent of decrease in tardiness for this month over the same month last year was 73 per cent.

Three of the buildings had a high percentage of attendance: The Palmer grammar school with 97.85 per cent, Bondsville grammar school with 97.36 per cent, and Three Rivers grammar school with 96.88 per cent. These same schools registered respectively 8, 1 and 4 tardy cases each.

Four rooms had a very high percentage of attendance and not a single tardy case. Grade seven of Palmer, grades eight and nine of Three Rivers, and grades six and seven of Bondsville all had 100 per cent. Grade six, Palmer, had 99.11 per cent. Grade seven, Palmer, and grades six and seven, Bondsville, have had an average of 100 per cent for the past two months. This is a remarkably fine showing.

LONG ARM OF THE LAW.

Grasps Auto Law Offender After Four Months.

BOSTON MAN IN COURT ON MONDAY.

Offences Committed Last June. Drove Unlicensed Car and He Gave Worthless Check.

Nemesis in the form of the long arm of the law, reaching out with relentless grasp over a third of a year, brought Timothy J. Hennessy of Boston into the district court in Palmer Monday morning to answer to three counts charging him with violation of the automobile laws. He pleaded guilty to two and not guilty on the third. Bail was fixed in the sum of $300 and he was released until November 16, when the cases will come up again.

On the 21st of June a large touring car with chocolate body and red running gear, bearing a Massachusetts license tag numbered 31545, was brought to the garage of John Lewis for repairs. These were completed and the man who brought it in claiming to be Dr. Padge of the New York board of health, insisted on trying out the car before he paid the bill. Lewis didn't like the looks of the fellow and sent two of his men with him on the trip. He hit up a fast pace and refused to stop until Springfield was reached where, to get rid of them, he gave a check on the Dorchester Trust Company for $37, signed Frank Padge; it came back marked "No Funds." Investigation showed that after getting rid of the Palmer men the party headed toward New York. It was found that the car had been owned by an East Boston man but had been sold though not to "Padge."

The charges to which Hennessy pleaded guilty were operating a motor vehicle to which were attached number plates issued to another machine, and of operating a motor vehicle that was not properly registered; he pleaded not guilty to operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of intoxicating liquor.

Registration Very Large.

More Voters Enrolled Than Ever Before in History of Town.

The registrars of voters held their last session before the fall election last Saturday evening, and at its close were surprised to find that the number of voters enrolled was the largest in the history of the town. The total number is 1390, an increase of 42 over last spring; the number of names added to the list was 81. The spring registration is usually largest, that in the fall dropping materially, but this year there is a gain instead.

Bradley of Hartford, Ct., and the best man was John J. Leahy of Gilbertville, brother of the groom. The bride wore a blue traveling suit and white hat. The bridesmaid wore a brown traveling suit and gray hat. Following the ceremony there was a wedding breakfast served at the home of the bride, after which the couple left for a trip to Boston and New York. On their return they will live on South street.

DEATH OF H. T. BISHOP.

Native of Thorndike and Town Official for Years.

END CAME EARLY TUESDAY MORNING

Well Known Throughout Town. Assessor And Overseer of Poor For Long Time.

Harry Thomas Bishop, 61, a native of the town and well known to all of the English-speaking portion of the population at least, died at his home in Thorndike at 1 o'clock Tuesday morning. He had been in poor health for a long time, having suffered from a heart and kidney trouble, but he was confined to his bed less than two weeks and his death was a surprise to many of his friends, who did not know that he was seriously ill.

Mr. Bishop was born in Thorndike September 22, 1851, and spent his entire life there. His parents were Davis B. and Augusta Bowen Bishop, and his father was for many years a successful merchant, conducting a general store and a coal and wood business. At his death his son conducted the business for some time, later giving them up. He was married December 20, 1871, to Lucy Putnam of Ludlow, who survives him. Of the five children born to them two only are living, Mrs. John Murphy of Hartford, Ct., and Miss Ruth Bishop at home.

Mr. Bishop at the time of his death was a member of the board of assessors and one of the overseers of the poor, having held both positions for a number of years, his genial disposition winning him repeated re-elections.

The funeral was held at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon at the home. Rev. Otto S. Raspe of St. Paul's church, Palmer, officiating. Mrs. Seamless of Hartford, Ct., sang. The bearers were Roy E. Cummings, J. A. Hawkes, Frank J. Hamilton, John O. Hamilton. Burial was in Four Corners cemetery.

Office Force Enjoys Outing.

Manager H. M. Parsons of the Central Massachusetts Electric company took his entire office force to the electrical show at Boston last Friday, the party going early by automobile and returning in the evening. Mr. Parsons proved a most excellent host and the trip was highly enjoyed by all.

Miss Mary Cunningham of Hartford, Ct., is spending a few weeks with her mother, Mrs. Mary Lynch.

Mrs. Isaiah Hiscock, Mrs. M. Rourke and Miss Ada Rourke spent the week-end with friends in Stafford.

Albert Sizer has bought George H Lanphear's milk route and began peddling milk Tuesday morning.

Deacon W. E. Needham and Mrs. Charles T. Holt attended the Baptist state anniversaries in Springfield this week.

A Progressive rally was held in the Baptist church last evening. D. L. Bodfish of Palmer and Rev. H. P. Smith of this town addressed the meeting.

BELCHERTOWN.

A special town meeting is called for the Thursday after election day to raise funds for the roads.

Dr. Elliott of Portland, Me., will succeed Dr. Fuller, who purchased Dr. Lake's practice. The office will remain in the present location.

Congressman W. H. Wilder.

Candidate For Re-election in District Comprising Eastern Hampden.

The following extract from "Practical Politics," a Boston publication, under date of September 14, will be of interest to the voters of Eastern Hampden county, which is in the district which Mr. Wilder represents: The wool bill and the cotton bill were each aimed at two of New England's greatest industries, while in the farmer's free list bill boots and shoes were placed on the free list and her third great industry thus given a tariff dose that would have meant disaster. None knew the arguments with which to combat the Democratic intentions better than Mr. Wilder, and he proceeded to do so, both on the floor of the House and in the lobbies and committee rooms. He told of New England's peculiar situation with a vehemence and knowledge that made many enemies for the free-trade bills. He showed how the industries of this section were among the most prosperous in the land and how they added to the prosperity of the nation at large. He cited the wages paid to the workers here and compared them with those paid in the competing countries of Europe—not all of them "pauper countries," as he pointed out, but all of them paying a much lower wage scale than it would be possible for a New England workingman to accept. He argued the law and the ethic of the matter, and he made out a case that attracted much more attention from the thinkers of congress than did the arguments of some of the professional howlers for protection.

He had the facts of the situation at his fingers' end, and he marshalled his figures and his arguments in such order that they did all the good possible, although in view of the fact that the Democrats had the votes it was plain from the beginning that the necessities of New England were to cut very little figure when the enmity of the south and southwest was the measure of hostility to be met.

Be that as it may, Mr. Wilder made such a good impression on his Republican colleagues that he was warmly congratulated for his efforts, and Minority Leader Mann, at the conclusion of the Gardner man's speech on the cotton revision bill, joined those who congratulated him.

On the financial and monetary question there are few better posted men in the United States than Cong. Wilder. He has made several trips abroad in his studies of the financial question and has the monetary systems of the entire world at his finger tips, a knowledge and equipment not to be despised at this time when the financial question is one of the biggest, if not the biggest, issue before the country.

Cong. Wilder believes in organization of the most thorough kind, so that responsibility may be placed, but that organization in politics should be like an organization for business purposes. He has no use for the bosses and is not a boss himself. His business associates esteem him a friend, and this is his attitude toward everyone. Men holding these views can seldom ever be led around by the nose. He is a man that will kotow to no one; one who assumes there are none above or below him and asks no one to kotow to him. He believes that all men must meet upon a common platform in the great hereafter, and if so then, why not here? As has been said by another, he believes that the same high principals should control us in our political activities as we insist shall prevail in our private dealings. He has not one single promise or obligation outstanding and does not propose to have any of any kind during his campaign. He considers himself bound only to a square deal, stands only for clean politics and all certain progression and has the support of those who stand on this common platform.

Arsenic Found in Vegetables.

Arsenic has been found as a normal constituent in man and animals, and now Drs. Jadin and Astrug, two French biologists, show that it may be derived from edible plants and fruits. They examined thirty-nine vegetable substances, and obtained arsenic from all, the quantities ranging from 0.03 part per million in the leek to 0.25 part per million in almonds and beans. Other vegetable matters, containing arsenic are the common cabbage, the turnip, the potato, cultivated mushrooms, black truffles, Japanese rice, red haricots, white haricots, gray peas, split peas, lentils, artichokes, salsify, chicory, lettuce, spinach, green peas, celery, carrots, watercress, cauliflower, wild asparagus, hazelnuts, filberts, chestnuts, apples, pears, oranges, pineapples and bananas.

Their Endless Wrangle.

The Doctor—"Natural endowment goes a great way, I grant you, but it takes education to make a man of parts." The Professor—"Yes, but monkeying with a buzzsaw will do it quicker."

Necessities From Japan.

For each person in the United States a dozen paper napkins and a third of a pound of tea are imported from Japan every year.

POLITICAL ADVERTISING.

CONGRESSIONAL ISSUES.

The time has come when it is the duty of every voter to decide who his Representative in Congress for the next two years shall be. This is something more than a personal matter, something beyond your likes and dislikes, something which has a vital bearing on your daily existence. You are a unit in a district comprising forty-nine towns and one city, more than twenty-five towns of which are entirely dependent for their success and the success of their citizens, upon the prosperity of their factories and industries. The farming towns of your district in turn depend upon the success of their industrial neighbors.

Now, Mr. Voter, your Representative in Congress whoever he may be, will be an important factor in deciding upon measures pertaining to the welfare of the industries in your district. Is it not then your duty to consider carefully the qualifications of the candidates regardless of your own personal likes or dislikes? These congressional issues are entirely independent and apart from many other of the political issues that confront you. Your congressional district is materially dependent upon the stability of the tariff --- the industries especially, which in turn make the market for the farmers. There are many of you who well remember the result that the Wilson Democratic tariff bill of the Cleveland second administration had upon your town.

William H. Wilder has already had two years' experience in Congress. Reared as a farmer he has progressed through the various stages from employee to retail merchant to manufacturer and lawyer. His business experiences cover a wide range of activity and have given him a competent acquaintance with the needs of the people and industries of your district.

In this connection it might be well to state that a vote for the Progressive candidate is half a vote for the Democratic candidate.

WHALE BOAT CATCHES SHARK

Marine Monster, Weighing Approximately Eight Tons, Harpooned Off Vancouver Coast.

While scouring the ocean for whales one of the little steamers working from the Kyuquot station landed a thirty foot shark.

The "wolf of the sea" is claimed to be one of the largest ever seen in northern waters and weighed approximately eight tons.

The whaling steamer had been searching vainly for whales for several days and the lookout had grown tired of scanning the surface of the ocean. He was suddenly aroused to action by observing the dorsal fin of a monster shark cutting the water about 200 yards on the port bow. As the big sharks yield considerable oil, the ship's officers decided to try for this one in view of the lack of whales.

Running to within thirty yards of the shark with the boat, the gunner fired the harpoon from the gun and struck the monster at the first shot. After a terrific fight to hold the struggling sea animal it was hauled aboard and cut up, the steamer resuming her search for the larger mammals.

Officers of the Tees declare that the shark was the largest they had ever seen. It was of the species common to the Pacific coast, but not quite so far north.—Vancouver Sun.

NOTHING IS EVER DESTROYED

Matter Changes, But Does Not Cease to Exist—Simple Experiment That Proves Proposition.

When a candle burns it is not destroyed. What seems like destruction is merely change. Any one can prove this for himself by a very simple experiment.

Take a glass tube and fit a cork into each end. Bore some holes in the lower cork, one of them in the middle large enough to hold a candle. Bend a smaller glass tube to U shape, fill it with small pieces of caustic soda and cork one end. Now connect the two cylinders by a small glass tube through the corks. Insert the candle through the lower cork and suspend the whole apparatus from one beam of the chemical balance. Weigh it carefully.

Connect the free end of the U tube to an aspirator so as to establish a uniform current of air through the tubes. Remove the candle, light it and instantly reinsert it. Let it burn down until entirely consumed. Now reweigh the apparatus. You will find that it actually weighs more than it did before the candle was burnt!

What had happened? The carbon and hydrogen of which the candle was composed have been separated, have drawn oxygen from the air and combined with it, forming water and carbon dioxide or carbonic acid gas. The caustic soda has absorbed the carbon dioxide and made sodium carbonate, and has also caught the water. The extra weight is simply that of the oxygen taken out of the air.

This is a practical illustration of the great truth that nothing is ever destroyed. Matter changes, but does not cease to exist. St. Thomas Aquinas taught this in the thirteenth century —thus as in so many other ways anticipating modern scientists—and some of the ancient Greek philosophers understood it. It has only been proved experimentally in recent years.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only Constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

HAVE A CARE!

In the First Hampden representative district there exists a condition unique in Eastern Hampden Legislative contests, in that there are three candidates for the coveted seat in the lower branch of the General Court. Freelon Q. Ball of Monson is the Republican nominee, Richard S. Hughes of the same town has been named by the Democrats, and John F. Hebard of Holland has the backing of the Progressives. In making up their minds which candidate to favor with their votes it will be well for the Republicans to bear in mind the possible effect of a division of the party strength. The district is normally Republican, but not by a large majority. The votes for the Progressive candidate will, it is presumed, come very largely from that party, and should enough of them be thus diverted the election of the Democratic candidate might result. This would mean an additional vote for John F. Fitzgerald for United States senator, and Massachusetts, with her reputation for sending men of large calibre to these positions, should do everything possible to maintain her prestige. Under the circumstances it is no time for the Republicans of the First Hampden representative district to try experiments; they should bear in mind that a vote for any other than the regular party nominee is a vote for John F. Fitzgerald for United States senator.

THE outlook for Republican success in the presidential contest grows brighter every day, and the idea that the struggle would be exclusively between Wilson and Roosevelt has been shattered. Many elements have contributed to the change in sentiment,—the investigation of campaign contributions at Washington, the sound condition of business, the prospect of continued prosperity,—but chiefly the sound sober thought that, after all that has been said and insinuated, the fact remains that very little appears by way of advantage or gain to the country or to the people in throwing President Taft out of office and substituting in his place either of his opponents. The contest as it shapes itself on the approach of election day is clearly between Taft and his Democratic opponent, Mr. Wilson.

THE citizens of Palmer will look askance at any proposition which will tend to place more poles and wires in the streets of the town. Every effort should be made to lessen the number and not add to them. Whether the new company seeking rights within our borders would consent to place all its wires underground or not is not known, but there is no suggestion to that effect.

HALLOWE'EN celebrators were out in force last evening in every section. In Springfield there were 13 false fire alarms by youngsters who of course knew better. But when "the youth of the town knew that they could not be prosecuted even if they were caught in the act of ringing a false alarm," as the Springfield Republican states, it's time for a change of conditions.

IT is to be remarked that the finding of the jury in the Becker murder trial in New York, and the death sentence this week, occasions little if any adverse comment outside the convicted man's family, counsel and the men charged with the actual killing. Apparently everybody is satisfied that only justice has been done.

A NEW method of restricting profanity is that of Director Cooke of the Philadelphia department of public works, who has issued an order that no employe of the department is to use profane language to himself or to a fellow-employe without first getting a permit. Perhaps it will work.

Boy Run Over.

The young son of Mr. and Mrs. William Drechsler of Walnut street received slight injuries Friday morning, as the result of a fall from a delivery wagon. The wagon was one from J. C. Shaw's market, and while the driver was delivering goods in a house the boy climbed up on the wagon. The horse started and after going a short distance the boy decided to get out. He did so, but fell over so that one rear wheel passed over his back. He was bruised and scratched, but it is believed that there will be no serious results.

PALMER NEWS.

New Company Wants Franchise.

To Sell Electricity Manufactured in Warren in Town of Palmer.

Last evening was held the many-times postponed hearing on the petition of the Warren Power company for permission to set poles in the town of Palmer. The Warren Power company is a corporation organized to develop the property of John T. F. MacDonnell at West Warren, and is to be financed—so Mr. MacDonnell states—by New York bankers.

The petition and statements given out had created the impression that all the company desired was locations for three poles in order to cross Palmer land to other fields of operation, but it developed last evening that what the company desires is an opportunity to enter Palmer in competition with the Central Massachusetts Electric company in the sale of electricity for heat, light and power; this was confirmed this morning by the company's representative in town, Arthur E. Fitch. Mr. MacDonnell was present last evening and outlined the plan of his company. It is to build a large dam on the Quaboag river below West Warren, giving a pond flowage of a mile, and by this means generate electricity in fully-equipped power house, distributing this to points west of the plant. A portion of the dam and all of the buildings would be in Palmer, adding much to the taxable property of the town in addition to being of almost unmeasured benefit in many ways.

After his plans had been fully explained Manager H. M. Parsons of the Central Massachusetts Electric company voiced the opposition of his company to the proposition. No company could come into Palmer and, making a reasonable return on its investment, sell electricity lower than could his company. Admitting that during the reconstruction of the old plant there had been a lack of service at times, he promised that within six weeks there would be an abundance of electricity for all purposes and all comers. He told of the amount now being used and the amount capable of being generated, and of plans to connect at Ware with the high tension lines of the Connecticut River Power company and the Deerfield Power company, so that in case of accident there would be ample power for all. He failed to see how there could be more water at West Warren than in Palmer, and here there is not near enough to run the plant continuously.

The selectmen reserved decision.

The Warren company has applied for franchises in Ludlow, Chicopee and West Springfield, none of which have yet been granted.

Plant 6000 Trout Hereabouts.

Palmer Fishermen Get First Consignment From Local Hatchery.

Palmer sportsmen yesterday planted about 6000 trout in brooks in this vicinity which they lease for trout fishing, though some of them went into public brooks. The fish came in cans about noon and were distributed to those who had made application for them. The fish came from the newly-established fish hatchery at Palmer Center, and was the first consignment sent out from there. The entire lot shipped went to Palmer fishermen The lot was commented on as the largest and finest which had been seen in many a day, considering the age of the little fellows. Although hatched this spring, many of them measured a plump finger-length, and all were strong and lively. If the thrive and do well they will do much toward making fishing enjoyable in the near future.

An unusually pretty wedding took place in St. Thomas' church Tuesday morning, when Miss Julia G. Daley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John J. Daley of Mt. Dumplin, was united in marriage to Dr. Edmund J. The wedding party entered the church to the strains of the "Lohengrin" wedding march. The bride was charmingly attired in a gown of white duchess satin over messaline, cut en traine. She wore a veil caught up with orange blossoms and lilies-of-the-valley, and carried a shower bouquet of bride roses and lilies-of-the-valley. She was attended by her sister, Miss Nellie Daley, who wore a gown of pink satin charmeuse, trimmed with real lace, and cut in side train. She wore a black picture hat and carried pink and white chrysanthemums. The best man was Dr. V. J. Staples of Pittsfield, a graduate of Tuft's college and classmate of the groom.

After supper a very pleasant social time was enjoyed, games being played and all present had their fortunes told by a witch.

At a meeting held at the Universalist parsonage Tuesday evening, the Century class of St. Paul's church was organized with 14 members. ### To Wipe Out Finger Marks.

Rub the finger marks on doors with a piece of clean flannel dipped in kerosene oil; afterwards wipe with a cloth wrung out of hot water to take the smell away. This is better than using soap and water, as it does not destroy the paint.

Among the Churches.

The regular Episcopal service will be held Sunday afternoon at 3.30 in Masonic hall, with preaching by the pastor.

The services at the Congregational church will be held at the usual hour. There will be a brief sermon by the pastor, reception of new members and celebration of the Lord's Supper. Sunday school at 12, Christian Endeavor at 6; subject, "Zeal"; leader, F. L. Jones. Evening worship at 7; subject, "He Lifted Me."

The Marseillaise.

There is a certain irony in the fact that the town which produced the "Marseillaise" is now German territory. The song dates from April 24, 1792, when Rouget de Lisle, then quartered at Strasburg as captain of engineers, composed it in response to the mayor of Strasburg's request for a patriotic song.

At Strasburg the song was printed under the title, "Chant de Guerre pour l'Armee du Rhine." It owes its present title to the volunteers from Marseilles, who sang it as they marched on Paris.

Famous Kisses.

The first recorded kiss was the treacherous one given by Jacob to his father Isaac, when the former was masquerading as Esau. It is the first in a series of deceitful kisses recorded in history. There is a famous kiss in the "Beggar's Opera." It was given by Macheath to Jenny Diver, and the unpleasant effect which it produced on him may be judged from the sarcastic remark, "One may know by your kiss that your gin is excellent." Petruchio gave his bride a kiss of enormous caliber. We are told that he "kist her lips with such a clamorous smack that at the parting all the church echoed."

GARMENT WEEK

Now in Full Swing

After weeks of preparation, we are pleased to announce our Garment Week, the most important event on the calendar, to every woman who appreciates correct style in dress. Here is the importance of this Event and the reason why it should appeal to you.

1 --- The season's styles are now absolutely established, the latest Paris models, from which all of our styles have their beginning, have been received, carefully studied, modified and adapted to suit the American trade.

2 --- The styles featured during this week are absolutely new, the greater part of them scarcely out of the tailors' hands, and they are for the most part entirely different from what has been shown before this season.

3 --- The assortments shown this week are tremendous, far greater than anything we have heretofore attempted.

4 --- And most important are the values. In order to make this event the most successful in our history, the value-giving will be extraordinary, and we have priced many garments at little more than the actual cost of production.

5 --- Our fittings and alterations are by expert fitters and are executed by competent men tailors and dressmakers, and are guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction. We welcome inspection, and every visitor to our Suit Department this week will be given a convenient collapsible coat hanger.

Sydney Smith on Music.

There is a story, which we have not been able to verify, of Sydney Smith's once saying that he never had seen "a more degrading spectacle than that of 500 people fiddling away about the children of Israel." As against this unsubstantiated anecdote it is only right to quote the saying recorded in his "Life" (volume 1, page 442), "If I were to begin life again, I would devote much time to music. All musical people seem to be happy; it is the most engrossing pursuit, almost the only innocent and unpunished passion." This is a noble tribute, though the generalization is perhaps too sweeping when one thinks of the loneliness of Beethoven, the early and tragic ends of Mozart and Schubert, of Schumann and Hugo Wolf.—London Spectator.

George M[illegible]'s Belief.

"Let nothing [illegible] your sense of a Supreme Being, and be certain that your understanding wavers whenever you chance to doubt that he leads to good. We grow to good as surely as the plant grows to the light. The school has only to look through history for a scier[illegible] assurance of it."—George Meredith, writing to his son.

WHEN IRVING PLAYED ROMEO

Silence, Light and Actors, the Three Things Necessary for Artistic Effect and Atmosphere.

Wendell Phillips Dodge relates an incident growing out of the first meeting of Robert Mantell with Sir Henry Irving, back in 1882, when both were playing Romeo in London. There were reviewers who found Irving too old for the youthful Romeo, and one advised that he should make way for "the young fellow over at the Olympic." Irving prepared a special afternoon performance in the Lyceum, to which all the players in London were invited. After it was over, Mantell went back of the stage, and Irving asked him how he liked the performance. "It has been like an afternoon at school with congenial lessons," replied Mantell. "How do you do it? How do you manage effects? How do you get such atmosphere, such a realization of the glory of the tragedy, with such little effort? Is there no recipe?"

"There is; indeed there is," answered Irving. "Simple, too: only three things to remember. The first is silence, and plenty of it behind the scenes, so that the actor may be at ease, with nothing to distract when striving for his shadings. The second is light, regulated as far as possible so that nature is counterfeited—and that, young man, is the recipe."

"But," protested Mantel, "you said there were three things to remember; you have mentioned but two. Is there a third?"

"Did I say a third?" asked Irving. "Um, perhaps I did, perhaps I did; but what could I have had in mind? Let me see. Ah, yes, silence, light, and—um, shall I say—actors? Remember that, my boy, actors. Silence, light, and—actors, that is the third."—London Strand.

To Thine Own Self Be True.

Although all the world ranged themselves in one line to tell "This is wrong," be you your own faithful vassal and the ambassador of God—throw down the glove and answer This is right."—Robert Louis Stevenson.

Cure for Seasickness.

A passenger on a German steamer after trying various remedies for seasickness, at a pancake with (German) cranberries, and found himself promptly cured. All the steamers of that line now have "Pfannkuchen mit Preisselbeeren" on their menu.

Nothing Else to Do.

"What are the wild waves saying, mother?" "I do not know, my child." "But why do they dance all day long?" "Well, my child, they cannot play bridge."—Kansas City Journal.

AID THE KIDNEYS

Palmer Sufferers Should Take No Further Risk.

Why will people continue to suffer the agonies of kidney complaint, backache, urinary disorders, lameness, headaches, languor,—why allow themselves to become chronic invalids, when a tested remedy is offered them?

Doan's Kidney Pills have been used in kidney trouble over 50 years, have been tested in thousands of cases.

If you have any, even one, of the symptoms of kidney diseases, act now, for gravel, dropsy or Bright's disease may set in and make neglect dangerous. Can Palmer residents demand more convincing proof than the following?

Napoleon Billiodeau, Monson, Mass., says: "I suffered for a long time, especially at night. When I arose in the morning I was tired and languid. Finally reading about Doan's Kidney Pills: I procured a box and found almost immediate relief through their use. I can recommend this remedy without the least doubt of its efficiency."

SINCE TIME OF GRANDMA

Remarkable Changes Effected In Dress and Social Activities In Feminine World.

The modern society woman has a multitude of expenses that her grandmother never even dreamed of; her visits to the masseuse, the hairdresser, the chiropodist, are a necessary part of her grooming today. While grandma tucked her switch guiltily away in the drawer of her dressing table and could not be bullied into the admission that she used powder, today her granddaughter unhesitatingly admits that she wears false braids and curls and that the soft glow of health on her rounded cheek was skillfully applied by a "perfect wonder" of a beauty doctor.

Social affairs have increased in number as well as in variety, and this has brought about a great change in my lady's wardrobe. Our grandmothers talked about their "best dress" and "best hat," the up-to-date lady speaks of her bridge gown, her dinner gown and her dancing frock. She has not one gown for dress up affairs, but 12 or 15. She has an appropriate outfit for each occasion. Not only must the gown be suitable, but all the accessories, including hat, wrap, gloves, shoes, veil, jewelry and even lingerie must be in absolute harmony.

When one stops to consider that the woman who is "in society" does remarkably well if she keeps within $100 for a year's supply of gloves, some idea may be formed as to the amount which she spends for such items as tailored suits, ball gowns and furlined evening wraps.

Potted Roses.

There was a time when Englishmen could celebrate St. George's day by feasting on roses as well as wearing them. Old cookery books abound in recipes into which rose leaves enter.

One writer tells how to make potted roses. "I first pound some of the most fragrant roses in a mortar; then I take the brains of birds and pigs well boiled and stripped of every particle of meat. I then add the yolks of some eggs, some oil, a little cordial, some pepper and some wine. After having beaten and mixed it well together, I place it over a slow fire. When this dish is brought to table the most delicious fragrance issues forth, covering the guests with delight." Every good housewife in the seventeenth century made rosewater, which was used for flavoring food.

Gold Trodden Into Floor.

The wooden floor of a jewelry workshop becomes valuable after a few years because of the gold dust that is tramped into the pores of the wood and into the cracks. A manufacturing jeweler who moved not long ago got permission from the landlord to tear up the old floor and replace it with a new one after he moved. The boards and dirt were burned to ashes and yielded a profit of $125 in gold after all expenses of the new floor and the smelting were paid.

Improved Capstan.

A capstan is built into a new block and tackle with which one man can handle loads of one thousand pounds and two men, loads of four thousand pounds.

THE RED-HEADED BOY'S BIG BONFIRE

When a young woman has just finished hanging out a perfectly good wash on perilous lines run on pulleys from the back porch of her flat to the telephone pole in the alley, no right-minded person could blame her for losing her temper if a red-headed boy with a wide mouth and the ingenuity of a fiend should start a smudgy bonfire directly below.

The red-headed boy worked in Simms' grocery, one of the stores that occupied the ground floor of the flat building. He was poking the fire as though he enjoyed it when Miss Clancy saw him.

"Say, you, Tommy Herkimer!" Miss Clancy called threateningly. "See what you're doing to my wash!"

Tommy grinned up at her and gave the fire another stirring. Great clouds of smoke and black smudges wavered upward, seeking the chaste whiteness of the Clancy linen.

"Stop it!" Miss Clancy shrieked, shaking one fist in the offender's direction. The fist was small and white, for it was Miss Clancy's mother who had washed the clothes, her pretty daughter's share in the work being the hanging out process. Mrs. Clancy was proud of Sadie's hands just as she was proud of Sadie's crisply curling black hair and blue eyes and the general freshness of her. "Stop it, I say! You're horrid, and if you don't stop it I'll——"

"Yah-h-h!" yelled Tommy, derisively. "I ain't afraid of you, Sadie Clancy! You can't do nothin'!"

Sadie Clancy shot down the one flight of stairs like an angry comet and catapulted toward Tommy. Dropping the broom handle with which he was stirring the fire, Tommy bolted, with Sadie after him. He darted toward the back door of the grocery and swerved just as that door filled with the bulk of young Simms himself. Young Simms being Sadie's devoted worshiper, Tommy recognized that here was no safe haven. Indeed, after a breathless word from Sadie, Simms also joined the chase down the alley. As he rushed past one of the delivery wagons he caught his foot in the trailing lines and pitched headlong in the dust.

"Pickles and prunes!" young Simms exploded as he staggered up.

"Oh, did you hurt yourself?" Sadie cried, looking around in horror. Right in her course was the water hydrant and, hitting it, she, too, ornamented the alley pavement.

"Don't you know anything worse than that?" she gasped out furiously as Simms picked her up, roaring. "Coffee cakes and buns! Let me get my hands on him!"

Tommy, who had paused interestedly to view the unexpected gymnastics, was doubled up in mirth. He began to run again when his furious pursuers darted toward him. Spying an open door into the basement under Leigh's furniture store, he dashed in and his pursuers followed. Sadie was in the lead. Rounding some crates of dressers, she saw a human object shrunk up close to the last crate. She grabbed it with a shriek of triumph, to which the object responded with a howl. Young Simms, arriving, also grabbed.

'Gotchu!" the object yelled in terrible glee. "Y'will play tag in my basement and carve initials all over the mahogany, will yer? I'll teach you kids a lesson! I've been a-layin for yeh and now I've got yeh!"

Leigh, the furniture man, as he spoke was shaking Sadie and young Simms, occasionally knocking their heads together for emphasis. Suddenly the size of Simms seemed to confuse him and he jerked his captives into the light of a gas jet.

"Good land!" Leigh gurgled, releasing his hold. He stared at his neighbors whom he had been shaking.

"Why—why——" stammered Leigh, and sat down meekly. Then he gave a sort of groan and scrambled to his feet. He had sat down in a bucket of varnish.

"Oh-h-h-h!" Sadie wept hysterically, clinging to young Simms. He put his arm around her protectingly and jammed it against a nail point that was projecting through one of the uprights in the wall.

"Woo-o-of!" roared Simms, clasping his wound.

Somewhere in the distance of the basement there was a strangled but demoniac laugh that sounded as though emanating from a red-headed boy with a wide mouth.

"Let him go," said young Simms as he put his arm around Sadie again. "Somehow I don't seem to mind him now—do you, Sadie?"

"Let's help Mr. Leigh get that varnish off him," said Sadie with very pink cheeks. She did not move away from the arm. "Anyhow, ma's taken the clothes in by now!"—Chicago Daily News.

They Never Learn.

Draw poker is a fine game, full of skill and science, and the man who knows what to draw to and when to do it is the fellow who gets the money. Harris Dixon, the author, was explaining one day that every man who makes a practice of trying to fill a four-card flush is doomed to bankruptcy.

"There is no use talking," said Dixon. "Drawing to a four-flush is bad business. I knew an old man down in Mississippi who lost three plantations drawing to them. Two of the plantations he lost by drawing and never filling the flush, and he threw away the third by finally making the flush against a full house."—Popular Magazine.

ANIMALS' EYES ARE MIRRORS

Reflected Light Is What Causes Them to Glow in Dark, Not Occult Agencies.

It is well known that the eyes of animals glow like coals in the dark. The reason for this is commonly believed to be because there is phosphorescent matter in the eyeballs. There are many, too, who attribute it to some weird occult agencies.

But it is all perfectly natural. The light does not come directly from the eyes of the animals, but indirectly. That is, it is a reflected light. Let an animal come out of the forest and approach a camp fire. His eyes glow like two balls of fire. This is because his eyes are mirrors and reflect the light while the rest of him is in darkness, making the spectacle all the more wonderful.

If you go in a dark room with a light the animal will look directly at the light. Then his eyes will reflect that light.

The case is somewhat similar to the way the moon borrows light. The moon itself is an opaque body without any inherent luminosity, and consequently it has no power of emitting light of its own. But when the shafts of light from the sun fall upon the surface of the moon they are reflected back, and it is the sun's light that brightens up the surface of our celestial nightly attendant and makes it visible to us.

WOMAN SICK TWELVE YEARS

Wants Other Women to Know How She Was Finally Restored to Health.

Louisiana, Mo.:—"I think a woman naturally dislikes to make her troubles known to the public, but complete restoration to health means so much to me that I cannot keep from telling mine for the sake of other suffering women.

"I had been sick about twelve years, and had eleven doctors. I had dragging down pains, pains at monthly periods, bilious spells, and was getting worse all the time. I would hardly get over one spell when I would be sick again. No tongue can tell what I suffered from cramps, and at times I could hardly walk. The doctors said I might die at one of those times, but I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and got better right away. Your valuable medicine is worth more than mountains of gold to suffering women."—Mrs. Bertha Muff, 503 N. 4th Street, Louisiana, Mo.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotic or harmful drugs, and to-day holds the record of being the most successful remedy for female ills we know of, and thousands of voluntary testimonials on file in the Pinkham laboratory at Lynn, Mass., seem to prove this fact.

We challenge anyone to name even one other medicine that has been so successful in relieving woman's suffering as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

LECTURE COURSE SURE.

Sale of Tickets Has Been Very Gratifying So Far.

FOUR FINE ENTERTAINMENTS FOR $1

A Profit Already Assured, Which Will Be Given to the District Nurse Association.

Final arrangements for the entertainment course, as planned by the Citizens' Committee, have been nearly perfected. There seems to have been existing in the minds of many of the Palmer people a desire for something of this nature. As a result the tickets have been very readily sold the past week. A complete canvass of the town will be made by Miss Adams, a representative of the Red Path Lyceum Bureau, during the next few days. The committee originally planned this course of entertainments for the sole purpose of affording the Palmer people an opportunity to hear some of the best artists in the musical world and on the lecture platform. Certainly there was no desire to make money, but now the committee is desirous of making a profit in order that they may turn over the balance to the Palmer District Nurse association.

As planned, there will be four attractions. The course will open with Miss Katharine Ridgeway on December 20th. Miss Ridgeway will be followed by Thomas Brooks Fletcher on January 6th. The other attractions are the Aida Quartet and Mr. C. Pol Plancon, and the Hon. Frank J. Cannon.

Miss Ridgeway is to-day acknowledged to be the best known reader in her particular line in the United States. She rarely appears except on the largest courses in America, and on many of these courses she has appeared from five to eight times. Miss Ridgeway gives an evening of varied readings instead of an entire program of a single play or story. These varied selections are linked by a definite idea of life which in its influence is an uplift. She has unerring judgment in picking out selections which the public like. Miss Ridgeway will be accompanied by Miss Grace Desmond, a pianist. She is a pupil of the late Mr. Sherwood, Fannie Bleomfield Zeisler, and other teachers, and is an accomplished performer.

Thomas Brooks Fletcher has achieved most brilliant success upon the lyceum platform in the opinion of the best informed critics. In thought Mr. Fletcher is profound, keen and convincing; in delivery he is powerful, fascinating, and dramatic; in personality he is cordial, refreshing, and original. Mr. Fletcher is well fitted by nature for his chosen profession. He has the personal gifts of the great artist. He keeps his audience alive, alert, and awake. He deals with live topics and is so apt and forceful in his lectures that he drives home great truths in a startling, but always effective, manner.

The Aida Quartet is a well-known musical organization from New York city which presents a program of high standard in violin, cornet, trumpet, and piano music. The quartet is accompanied by Mr. C. Pol Plancon, a well-known baritone. The quartet has appeared with such well-known artists as Schumann-Heink, Bispham, and others. It is composed of Miss Edna White, the only solo trumpeter of her sex in the world; Miss Norma Sauter, violinist, a pupil of Franz Kneisel; Miss Cora Sauter, 'cellist, a pupil of Leo Schulz; and Miss Ruth Wolf, a well-known pianist. Mr. Plancon is a nephew of the world-famous French basso of the same name. He has been connected with the Boston Conservatory of Music, and has had considerable experience in Grand Opera.

Ex-U. S. Senator Frank J. Cannon is well known to the American people because of his recent articles in Everybody's Magazine relative to the status of Mormonism and the part it plays in the American lives as a whole and is likely to play in the future. Mr. Cannon was a Mormon ambassador to Washington in 1888 and 1890, and is a son of the first counselor of the Mormon church. He has long fought polygamy in the Morman church. He knows his subject matter thoroughly. He has a magnificent presence, a fine delivery, and inspires, enthuses, and enlightens his audience as very few men in this country can do. He has a wonderful message, and is doing glorious work for his state and for his country. Mr. Cannon has been a member of the House of Representatives at Washington and also senator from Utah. It is readily conceded that he is one of the best orators, scholars, and statesmen who is appearing on the lecture platform of the present day.

The course promises to be one of exceptionally high merit. The people of Palmer are offered an opportunity for education and entertainment such as has not been offered them for many years. Anyone who appreciates what is given in music, readings, and lectures will not fail to miss a single number of the course.

Tickets for the entire course have been put at the low price of $1; for those who wish reserved seats, the same seat being reserved for the four entertainments, the price is made $1.50. The first entertainment will be December 20,—Miss Ridgeway,—and reserved seats may be selected at Kinsley's drug store in Palmer at 9.30 on the morning of the 16th.

Fined For Spitting in Car.

Cost Springfield Man $5 For Persisting After Warning.

A fine of $5—the first of its kind in the history of the district court since the passing of the law permitting it—was imposed on a Springfield man Tuesday morning for spitting on the floor of an electric car. The fellow boarded at some point east of Palmer the car due here at 1.15 Monday afternoon, and soon began decorating the floor. He was spoken to by the conductor but kept on; on being spoken to a second time he became abusive, announced that he'd do as he pleased and told the conductor where he could go to—a place whose least qualification is the supposed climate. He then proceeded to make the floor under two seats an abomination to decent people.

The conductor telephoned to Palmer for an officer and the man was taken from the car and locked up. Tuesday morning he had sobered sufficiently to appreciate his error, expessed his penitence and regret, and paid the fine imposed.

Probate Court Business.

At a session of the probate court in Springfield Wednesday, the following business was among that transacted:

Administrations granted in the estates of—Margaret M. O'Neil, late of Palmer, George F. Conley of Westfield administrator; Minnie B. Converse, late of Palmer, Freelon Q. Ball of Monson administrator.

Will proved in the estate of Henry E. Bugbee, late of Monson, A. Amelia Bugbee executrix.

Sales of real estate allowed in estate of D. W. Foskit, late of Brimfield.

WARREN.

Death of Edward L. Fosket.

Edward L. Foskit, 73, a well-known contractor and builder, died at the home of his son in Springfield Sunday evening after a several weeks' illness. He was born in Warren, where he spent all his life, until seven weeks ago, when he went to Springfield for a visit with his son. He was a member of Arcturus lodge of Odd Fellows, of which he was past grand, and a member of Knowles council, Royal Arcanum of Warren. He leaves one son, Ralph A. Foskit of Springfield and one daughter, Miss Mabel G. Foskit of Warren. Funeral services were held Wednesday afternoon in the Warren Universalist church.

Quaboag lodge of Masons has elected the following officers: Master, John B. Canfield; senior warden, Daniel A. Hathaway; junior warden, Rev. O. I. Darling; treasurer, Charles B. Blair; secretary, Charles D. Perkins.

The Massachusetts state federation of women's clubs will hold its first autumn meeting Monday in the Congregational church by invitation of the Tuesday club. The morning session will open at 10.45. There will be addresses by George C. Minard, Mrs. Jessie D. Hodder and Miss Anne Taft. A box luncheon will be served at noon. In the afternoon there will be an address by Dr. Woods Hutchinson on "Woman's responsibility for the health of the community." Delegates will go from Springfield and vicinity on the train leaving Springfield at 10.30 a. m.

WARE.

Death of Mrs. Eliza Cowles.

Mrs. Eliza Cowles, 77, wife of Julius Cowles, died at her home in Ware Center Tuesday morning of cancer. She was born in Palmer, but had been a resident of Ware for 75 years. She was married June 1, 1861. Besides her husband, she leaves one brother, J. W. Cummings of Ware Center.

NORTH WILBRAHAM.

Mrs. Julia Lyman and Mrs. Lydia Sikes were guests Sunday of their father, Walter M. Green.

Mrs. Lizzie Herran has returned to the home of her cousin, Mrs. A. Louis Warriner, after spending a week with relatives in Springfield.

DEMOCRATIC LANDSLIDE

Wilson and Marshall Win by an Uusually Wide Margin.

ROOSEVELT IS SECOND AND TAFT THIRD

Foss and Walsh Are Elected in Massachusetts. Legislature Republican by Good Margin. Congress Has Ample Democratic Working Majority.

It will be President Wilson after March 4 of next year. This was decided Tuesday in one of the largest votes ever cast in this country. From coast to coast the wave was most emphatically Democratic, so much so that there isn't even a ghost of an uncertainity as to the ultimate result. Wilson is sure of 442 votes in the electoral college, with only 266 needed to elect: Roosevelt is second with 77 and Taft third with 12. In addition, several doubtful states have a tendency toward Wilson, and his vote may be larger still when all the returns are in. Congress will be Democratic, and that by a very comfortable margin.

In Massachusetts the Democrats captured the two first places on the ticket, Foss and Walsh being elected by pluralities of about 50,000. The other places on the state ticket were carried by the Republicans with the exception of Secretary of State, where Donahue defeated Langtry by something like 4500.

For the first time literally "within the memory of the oldest inhabitant" we have a Democratic lieutenant governor; we have had governors of that political affiliation, but the Republicans have managed to elect the next in line. The Legislature will contain a safe Republican majority.

The figures in the towns near Palmer are given below:

The Bull Moose movement did not materialize in Eastern Hampden to the extent which had been prophesied for it. Wales and Brimfield were reported full of this kind of game, but both gave a plurality to Taft, though small in each case. Late reports also filled the woods of Monson with them, but here Taft had a substantial lead. The little town of Holland had little use for other candidates however, 22 of her 32 votes going to the Colonel.

The First Hampden representative district sends Freelon Q. Ball of Monson, Republican, to the House by a plurality of 28, which is considered very good in view of the three-cornered contest, the first of the kind for years. Here also the Bull Moosers shied off, although their candidate had recognized strength.

Senator William H. Wheeler of Hubbardston, Republican, wins a re-election by a plurality of 293, this too in a three-cornered fight.

Congressman Wilder of Gardner secured a Republican re-election by a generous margin of 3018 in a four-sided contest.

The Second Hampden district sends William J. Sessions of Hampden, Republican, and James F. Barry of Agawam, to the Legislature.

A. L. Pratt of Belchertown, Republican, who was last year defeated for the Legislature by E. E. Sargent, Democrat, wins out against last year's favorite by the narrow margin of 12 votes.

Senator Schoonmaker of Ware has many friends in this section who will rejoice in his election to the office of district attorney for Franklin and Hampshire counties; he carried both.

Frederick H. Gillett of Springfield gets a return to Congress from the new district in which he is located. Palmer was former?y in Mr. Gillett's district, and he has many friends here who congratulate him on his success.

County Commissioner Spellman is given another term by a large majority. His opponent, A. L. Potter, never had a look-in from the first.

County Treasurer F. Bearse had the nomination of both parties and didn't need to wait up to have the returns counted.

Another Springfield man who has many admirers in this section is Col. A. H. Goetting, who encountered his first serious opposition to a place on the governor's council Tuesday, but who won out.

More Electricity Soon.

New Machinery and Water Wheels Are Being Rapidly Installed.

A crowd of expert electrical engineers, workmen, and laborers is busily at work in Blanchardville rushing the installation of the new electric generating machinery that will give the station of the Central Massachusetts Electric Co. an additional capacity of some 2500-horse power.

Manager H. M. Parsons has hastened the construction work and has succeeded in getting the three water wheels placed in their pits, one being nearly ready for operation, while he has secured, at the same time, the erection of the new 1300-horse power tubo-electric generator which is now resting firmly on its foundation in the station. Meanwhile electrical experts have been installing an entirely new switch board which will take care of the total output of the remodelled station the minute the power is turned on from the new engines.

It is hoped and expected that the company will have at least one of its water wheels running by Thanksgiving time, and this will mean not only better service but a great relief for Manager Parsons and his men, who have been working under a strain to get these improvements done in record time while continuing the operation of the station at "full blast."

WANTS $10,000 DAMAGES

Central Mass. Electric Co. Sued For That Amount.

FINGERS BURNED BY BROKEN WIRE.

Pole and Wire Broken by Moving Building; Boy Refused to Obey Warning Orders.

Ernest Belisle of Thorndike, through his next friend, George Belisle, has brought suit against the Central Massachusetts Electric company for $10,000 damages for burns received by coming in contact with a live electric wire in Thorndike in April. Two fingers were amputated as a result of the burns, in addition to which the feet of the lad—he is only four years old—were severely burned.

The injury was sustained April 6, on High street in Thorndike. A building was being moved to a new location on the street, and in the course of the work it came in contact with the electric wires and the pole was broken, allowing the wires to drop to the ground. The electric company received a telephone message early in the afternoon that a wire was down, but its employes could not find any in the location given. Later in the day the correct place was 'phoned to the office and the trouble was at once remedied. In the meantime the Belisle boy, who was playing about the street, after having been ordered from the locality several times by the mover of the building, came in contact with the wires and was burned.

A Touch of Winter.

The temperature Sunday and Sunday night gave an emphatic reminder that winter is to be expected in earnest before long. There was a chill in the air all day Sunday which made heavy wraps necessary if one was out for any length of time. Sunday night the temperature dropped materially, and as low as 12 degrees was reported the next morning. The ground was frozen hard in many places. Tuesday was much warmer, as was Wednesday. Yesterday was also warm, with showers at intervals through the day until about 4 in the afternoon, when a steady rain set in.

Laborers Wanted.

The Flynt Granite Company of Monson, which is building the new road at Four Corners, will give work to any Palmer laborers who may apply. The company is in need of more help and states that it will give the preference to Palmer men if there are any who desire employment.

Mrs. M. D. S. Longley has gone to Downington, Pa., where she will spend the winter.

D. C. Coe of New Haven has been the guest of his daughter, Mrs. E. S. Thomson, this week.

The party came to Springfield in President Underwood's private car, and by automobile to Belchertown.

Howlett was chosen president in place of Mrs. Childs, who resigned after holding the office since the society was organized three years ago. Mrs. John F. Hebard was elected vice president, Mrs. Arthur G. Childs secretary, Miss Louise M. Howlett treasurer in place of Miss Delia Blodgett, resigned, who served three years. Mrs. Loring Howlett was chosen chairman on table committee.

How Palmer Voted.

The detailed record of the vote in Palmer is given below and makes an interesting study. It will be noticed that the town, which is usually Democratic, gave Taft a substantial lead—125—over Wilson and 353 over Roosevelt. The vote for the Progressive candidates did not assume the proportions claimed for it by the friends of that party. Foss and Walsh carried the town by small pluralities, while the Republican candidates for the other state offices were given leads with the exeeption of attorney general, where the Democratic candidate had a lead of three. Boyer, the Democratic candidate for senator, had a lead of 97 over Wheeler, the Republican nominee, and in the representative contest Hughes led Ball, his Republican opponent, by 45; precinct A was the only one which Ball carried, but that gave him a plurality of 64.

The total vote was 1175 out of a registration of 1390, or 84.5 per eent, not a very large showing for a presidential year. The registration and vote cast in the several precincts was:

| Precinct | A | B | C | D |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Registration | 680 | 298 | 258 | 153 |
| Vote cast | 596 | 240 | 215 | 124 |

The returns were a long time coming in, a record being established in this line. All but precinct A were in at 7.30, but those from A did not show up until 11.25. This was due to a lack of officials at the polling place. The law allows the counting to commence before the polls are closed, but there was no time during the day when a force sufficient to count could be spared from the number required by law to operate the election machinery. This will undoubtedly be remedied another year by the appointment of at least two additional men.

Pitched Battle With Gypsies.

Some gypsies infesting the forests in the neighborhood of Fulda, Prussia, who have been hunted for weeks past, by the inhabitants and the military, have continued their nocturnal incursions into villages and lonely farms, where they lay their hands on anything they can take. A few days ago the population of Hunfeld, led by Baron Schenk, a local landowner, went in hot pursuit of the thieves, and, tracing them to the border of a forest, surprised them whilst feasting on the spoil of the farm yards. A pitched battle ensued between the two parties. One gypsy was wounded by a shot from Baron Schenk's revolver, but some of the band took him on their shoulders and ran into the forest, while the rest covered their flight with a steady fire. Then, turning, they fled in their turn and were lost in the forest. The whole countryside is now searching for them.

Nature True Comforter.

Nature knows best how to comfort the heart of the mourner. Her soothing is the best because she deals in hints and suggestions, not in conventional phrases, and her ministrations make for sanity and renewed vigor.—The Christian Register.

Feathered Citizens of London.

Besides the sparrows and the pigeons which inhabit the atmosphere of London, there is a great nest of crows in Grays inn, the last survivor of numerous rookeries which used to exist in the old buildings of the city. A single pair of carrion crows also have their nest near St. Pancras church, around which they are often seen flying and teaching their young ones how to stretch their wings.

First United States Stocking Factory.

The first United States stocking factory was set up at Cohoes, New York, in 1832. The machine for knitting was the invention of Lee, an Englishman, who took out a patent in 1589. The Lee machine was introduced in the Colonies during the Revolution, but a sharp Yankee improved on it, and set up the first factory at Cohoes.

New Idea in Penal Reform.

Chocolate and music have been introduced into a Swiss prison, with the idea of reforming the inmates.

Bread From Dried Codfish.

In Iceland a bread is made from the flesh of dried codfish beaten to a powder.

GIRL CAPTURED BY BRIGANDS FINDS HERO

By JOHN PHILIP ORTH.

Miss Clare Benson had the pony and phaeton brought around to the door of her father's house in Bellville that she might take a drive down the Shady Beech road. She stepped into the vehicle, gathered up the lines and gave the pony a cut with the whip and was off. A man always utters a cluck to start a horse; a woman always gives him a cut.

After a drive of three miles Miss Claire turned out of the road and hitched the pony and then strolled into a grove to sit down and think as the summer breeze sighed through the branches above her head.

The girl thought and thought and thought! She had got it about settled in her mind that her hero would never come along, when a chipmunk ran along the ground before her and dived into his burrow.

"Poor thing—he shall not smother down there because he fears me!" exclaimed the tender-hearted girl as she rose up and looked around for help.

In a moment more she was running through the woods, thinking she heard the voices of men. She was right about that. She hadn't taken a hundred steps when three brigands lying hidden in a hollow leaped up and came rushing at her. They wore rough clothes; they had long hair; their whiskers were black as the ace of spades and matted with leaves.

"Seize her and to horse!" shouted the leader.

Miss Claire was duly seized. She wanted to stop and explain about that suffering, suffocating chipmunk, but the brigands were hustlers and they made her hustle, too.

In a minute and a half three horses were reached, and the leader of the brigands shouted:

"Keep the sheriff off, boys, until I can get a little start!"

And then there were whoops from the bushes across a creek, and the reports of firearms from all around, and Miss Claire was hustled further. That is, the leader mounted his cayuse and she was grabbed and hoisted up to him and the beast started off on a run for life.

"After 'em, boys!"

"Shoot 'em down like dogs!"

"No quarter to brigands!"

"Ki-yi! Whoop!"

Miss Claire only partly lost consciousness. It was a wild ride up and down hills—across meadows and through thickets, and she prayed that the sheriff's party would not fail. It was wonderful how very quickly that suffering chipmunk was forgotten.

At length justice prevailed, as it always should, but never does when the other man has the most money to spend on lawyers. The two brigands covering the retreat were killed off after being struck in vital parts about thirty times apiece and then the leader's horse gave a stumble and a groan and fell to breathe his last. Nobody hurt in the fall—merely bounced some more. Behind the carcass knelt the last and the most desperate of the brigands and emptied his guns at the advancing foe and then died with the sacred name of "mother" on his ashen lips. Then the sheriff's posse dashed in with whoops of victory.

Miss Claire Benson lay sprawled out in a graceful and picturesque position.

"Who are you, and how did you happen to butt in here!"

"She's the girl," answered the brigand leader who had died and come again to life with promptness and dispatch.

"The girl be hanged! You made a mistake! There is the girl over there you should have carried off, but she was late in getting here. Nice sort of a thing you've done!"

Miss Claire recovered her dignity, and as the "sheriff" stepped forward and raised his hat she demanded in turn:

"Sir, will you explain this outrage?"

"I'll try to, miss, and beg your pardon a thousand times over. We are moving picture actors, and are out here acting a play for a reel. The girl who was to be carried off by the brigands is a farmer's daughter, but through some blunder she didn't reach her assigned place in time. It seems you were there, and the brigands thought it was all right to go ahead. Isn't it so, Mr. Aldrich?"

The brigand leader had doffed hat, wig and whiskers and laid aside his guns and bandolier, and he now appeared as a fine looking young man. With a bow and a smile he said:

"It's my fault, and I can't hope to be forgiven. I think you tried to make an explanation, but it was too late then. Our cue was out and we had to hustle. You were in the woods to gather flowers?"

His query reminded Miss Claire of that poor chipmunk, and she forgot all else temporarily and cried out:

"Some one must come with me at once! There's a poor little animal dying back there!"

With her hand in Mr. Aldrich's they hastened back to the woods with scarcely a word between them, and presently arrived at the tragic spot. When the chipmunk business had been explained the young man sat down on a log and laughed.

It was three months later when Mr. Benson felt it his duty to say:

"Claire, I could never give my consent to your marrying an actor."

"I don't expect one to ask for my hand," was the reply.

"But this—this Mr. Aldrich?"

"Oh, he went into the coffee trust long ago!"

The price of lobsters has gone up, but this is no excuse for being one.

HALF LOVE ONLY HINDERS AMBITION

"Does love help or hinder an ambitious man?"

Jeanette asked me that question after telling me that Jimmie had come home in a rather depressed state of mind, because Tom Jenkins had confided to him that since his marriage to Daisy he had been unable to pursue the ambition of his life—to become a successful stock broker.

It seems Daisy is jealous of Tom's business. She complains whenever business takes him away from her for an evening or keeps him downtown late, and rather than have a scene when he reaches home, Tom tells prospective customers that it is impossible for him to see them after 4 o'clock, or to call upon them in the evening. So dear little Jeanette is worried for fear Jimmie will think his love for him a hindrance to his ambition.

"Jeanette, dear," I said, "you have no cause to worry, even if Jimmie is grumpy. It depends largely upon the love and the lover whether love will be a help or hindrance in life.

"Just because some grouchy old codger has said that 'love slays ambition' is no reason to believe it, and close observation shows it to be a pretty poor ambition that ever suffers extinction."

"But Cousin Daisy wants Tom to take a position in a bank, where he will have regular hours, and she can always look for him to be home shortly after 3 in the afternoon. Couldn't he be ambitious in a bank as well as selling stocks and bonds?"

"Surely he may, my dear," I answered. "Love may transform the goal aspired to. It may even change a man's aims; but the man who is truly ambitious to make a name for himself, like Jimmie, will assuredly be more ambitious, not less, because his successes will bring happiness to you, whom he loves, as well as to himself."

"Then why should Tom not be satisfied to do as Daisy wishes?"

"The fault, my dear Jeanette, lies with Daisy, not with Tom's love or her love. It is always so when the so-called 'love' hampers rather than helps a man to rise in the world. It is not 'love,' dear child, but selfishness pure and simple. Selfishness and jealousy can wreck any man's ambitions if allowed to interfere with them."

"Do you think Daisy is selfish and jealous of Tom's ambition? Isn't it because she loves him so dearly that makes her want him with her every minute he can be there?"

"Jeanette, you love Jimmie, do you not?"

"Why, of course, cousin, I—"

"That's what I thought. Well, would you put your own social pleasures before Jimmie's work?"

"No."

"Would you be angry if he were detained a little late at the office, especially if you had planned an early dinner so you could go out in the evening?"

"N-no—no. I should be sure Jimmie would get home as early as he possibly could under such circumstances."

"Are you interested in your husband's business?"

"Of course I am—you know that. He always talks things over with me when he has any interesting news or problems to decide."

"Very well, then. That is as it should be. You need have no fear, and neither need Jimmie, that your love will ever hinder him in his advancement. It is only the self-centered, foolish, selfish woman who will in any way interfere with her husband's ambition. Hers is not 'love,' but rather selfish greed for all her husband's time and all of his money, too, forgetting that to make the money necessary to satisfy her wants he must spend many hours outside those prescribed by banking houses as 'business hours.'

"Remember, my dear child, that if Daisy loved Tom more truly his desires and ambitions would become so wholly hers that she would naturally be a help to him.

"It is only the half lovers and the self-lovers that ever hinder a husband's ambitions. Now run along home and tell Jimmie what I have said to you and see if he doesn't agree with me."

Cotton Duck for Motor Tires.

One million yards of high grade duck, to be made from sea island and Egyptian cotton, has recently been sold by a Georgia cotton mill to a manufacturer of automobile tires.

The quality of this material is of the highest grade, used only in the larger tires, the lower grade of goods being available for the smaller tires. One million yards of cotton duck, one yard wide, is a pretty big order to go from one mill to one tire manufacturer.

It illustrates, however, the ever broadening market for cotton and the reason why a big cotton crop has been so promptly absorbed. Every year sees new uses for the south's cotton. Not only is it being used in the manufacture of tires, it is likewise used in the manufacture of automobile tops, and the wider the use of automobiles the greater will be the demand for cotton.—Manufacturers' Record.

Deaths Caused by Snakes.

The danger from snake bites in tropical countries can hardly be exaggerated. In Brazil alone, 20,000 persons are annually bitten by snakes, and over one-fourth of the bites have so far proved fatal.

German Musicians Poorly Paid.

The Germans like music, but they do not want to pay for it. What they gladly pay for is food and drink, with free music on the side. When a high-class musician plays at a variety show or in a night cafe, he is looked down on; yet these are the only places where an orchestral player can earn a decent living. Some startling figures have been printed in Der Turmer which shows that it is practically impossible for a German orchestral musician to marry and bring up a family. For a family of four the minimum expenses, apart from food, are $250 a year. The income of an orchestral player is $330 a year; which leaves less than 25 cents a day for food. Americans pay musicians ten times as much as the Germans do; but we, to be sure, are mere barbarians in the eyes of the Germans. —Boston Transcript.

Twins in Common Suffering.

Darwin has recorded a French case of two twin brothers, one living in Paris and the other in Vienna, who were attacked by rheumatic ophthalmia at the same moment. Each was certain, when consulting a specialist, that the other was suffering from a like complaint, and mentioned the fact. Subsequent letters confirmed this.

Labor Poorly Paid.

Palermo, Italy, produces quantities of outfits for brides, principally in muslin. The girls who do the work get from 12 to 25 cents and the skilled workers from 30 to 60 cents a day.

CURIOSITY OF MODERN SLANG

English Journal Comments With Some Sharpness, and Admiration, of American Slang.

Time was—and not so very long ago, either—when the only distinctively American expression known in this country was "I guess." To say "I guess" and endeavor—not always with success—to speak it through your nose, was the recognized way of impersonating an American It was always sure of an appreciative and understanding laugh—the laugh that indicates, "Yes, yes; I'm just as intelligent as you, and know exactly what you intend." Nowadays, we don't know why, our common speech is well flavored with transatlantic idioms. Not always slang, we mean. American slang has its uses, though the only one we can think of at the moment is that it saves trouble. When one has classified one's friends and acquaintances as "the limit" and "the goods," one has been spared much labor of characterization. Otherwise the argot of the Bowery is more curious than beautiful. But we go further. "We fix things up." Instead of finishing a task we are "through with it." We do not begin, but "start in." This habit is spreading like a canker through all classes of the community—even to those conservative gentlemen, the dramatists, who name their new productions "The Glad Eye" or "Looking for Trouble" No doubt we shall be told by apologists for the habit that all the expressions we have noted are to be found in Shakespeare or Milton. That may be, but we doubt if Miss Corelli's predecessor at Stratford-on-Avon ever caused one of his heroines to be called a "lallapalooza."—London Globe.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only Constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 8, 1912.

WILL Mr. Wilson have the strength to keep Bryan out of the cabinet? If he can do this it will help some.

MASSACHUSETTS established a new record Tuesday. She elected a Democratic Lieutenant-Governor for the first time in her history.

THE entertainment course which a self-appointed committee of citizens has arranged for deserves the patronage of every person who believes that good clean attractions of this sort are a help to a community. The price is extremely reasonable, and the surplus over expenses is to go to a good cause.

WHAT of the future? Having succeeded in disrupting the party which gave him all the honors within its power, will Roosevelt be content to fight for "My policies," or will "I" be the dominating motive? If the latter, the result four years hence will be the same as that of this week; the country's voters will never again select T. R. as their chief executive.

THE campaign is over, the votes have been counted and the result announced; now the country can settle down to—guessing what will happen after next March. With the election of Wilson goes a Democratic majority in Congress. As has been suggested, "They have the horse, wagon and harness, and can do all the driving." What the results will be is yet to be disclosed. It will not be surprising if business is more or less unsettled for a time until it is known definitely what will be done, for capital dislikes to make excursions into the realm of uncertainty. It is certainly to be hoped that no move will be made which will tend to check the advance of the incoming wave of prosperity.

Now that the strenuousness of the campaign is over and the people have come back to a normal attitude, there is much of post-election sympathy and kind words for the man who went down to defeat—William Howard Taft. The Springfield Union had this to say of the election:

On every hand one hears the most sincere expressions of sympathy for him and regret that he should be the victim of such a political upheaval as the country has just experienced. Those that during the strenuous and exciting days of the canvass professed to regard the President with anything but admiration already are forming a more just estimate of him and of his administration. The magnitude of the Democratic victory is having its sobering effects on not a few excitable temperaments, and by the time Mr. Taft lays down the cares of office there are plenty of indications that all will deplore the grave injustice that has been done him. Stranger things have happened than that the country four years hence should turn to Mr. Taft as embodying those principles that have proved their worth, for the inevitable reaction is bound to set in.

Much worse might happen than that this should come to pass.

THE Palmer letter in last Sunday's Springfield Republican contained the following regarding the political situation in this town:

The fact that this year men are doing their own thinking, and take less kindly than formerly to being labeled with the party emblem, has troubled those who usually compile ante-election figures. The bitter partisans arraign in scathing terms those who dare assert their manhood and desert either of the old parties for another candidate. This, in a great degree, accounts for the large silent vote that will not declare itself until Tuesday, when a stern rebuke will be administered to whatever party or candidate has so forgotten the sacredness of the privilege that is the heritage of every American citizen, the right to cast his ballot as his conscience may dictate.

There has been emphatic protest against this picture of the local political situation. Voters have taken sides, as they have since political parties were established, and they have argued—at times emphatically and with vehemence, as is customary—for their convictions, but nowhere and at no time has there been that rabid intolerance of the recognized rights of another which is represented above. This is evidenced by the result on Tuesday. The "large silent vote" did not materialize; Palmer cast no more than the usual percentage of votes, and the "stern rebuke" which was to come from both the old parties resulted in a much smaller vote for the new third party nominees than had been predicted.

In another column will be found an announcement of the Central Massachusetts Electric company's special holiday wiring offer, with free gift to new patrons. It is good only to December 15.

Bresette—Matrowe.

A pretty wedding took place in St. Thomas' church Monday morning at 8 o'clock, when Miss Edna Bresette, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Bressette of South Main street, was united in marriage to William T. Matrowe, son of Mr. and Mrs. Tribley Matrowe of Monson. The ceremony was performed by Rev. M. J. O'Connell, who celebrated the nuptial mass which followed. The bridesmaid was Miss Ida Bresette, sister of the bride, and George Mutrowe of Monson was best man. The bride was attired in a gown of white messaline, trimmed with white silk fringe. She wore a veil caught up with lilies-of-the-valley, and carried a shower bouquet of white carnations. The bridesmaid wore a gown of white embroidered voile, with a white picture hat, and carried daybreak carnations. The couple received a fine array of gifts. A wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride after the ceremony. The bridal couple left in the afternoon for a trip to New York, after which they will make their home in Palmer.

"Uncle Tom's Cabin" Next Monday.

Quaint and joyous humor, alternating with genuine pathos, clear-cut descriptions and a simply broadly romantic plot—that is what is to be found in Harriet Beecher Stowe's "Uncle Tom's Cabin," which is to be at the Palmer opera house next Monday evening. The presentation will be by Leon Washburn's "Uncle Tom's Cabin" Co., one of the largest and most complete on the road to-day. Every member has been selected especially for the part to be played, and their work appeals to the heart of every man, woman and child who sees the piece. As a dramatic story "Uncle Tom's Cabin" is as forceful, interesting and picturesque as any play that has ever been based on incidents that go to make up life in this great world. It appeals to all, and all will want to see this stupendous production. Reserved seats are on sale at Kinsley's drug store.

Stevenson—Clark.

A quiet home wedding took place Wednesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Clark on the Brimfield road, when their son, Robert Austin, and Miss Gertrude Eugenie Stevenson of Sharon were married. The bridesmaid was Miss Marion Clark, a sister of the groom, and Ernest Carpenter of Monson was best man: Rev. F. S. Brewer of the Palmer Congregational church performed the ceremony. The young couple left later in the evening for a short wedding tour, and will live in Sharon, where Mr. Clark is employed; they will be at home to friends after January 1.

Taylor—Durkin.

Miss Annie Taylor, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Taylor of this town, was united in marriage to E. J. Durkin of Westfield last Thursday morning. The couple enjoyed a short trip to Hartford, Ct., and New York, returning Saturday to Westfield where they were met by a large number of friends. The couple were the recipients of many handsome and useful presents. Mr. and Mrs. Durkin will live in Westfield, where Mr. Durkin is employed as engineer of the Westfield Municipal Lighting Company.

The Woman's Tuesday club will meet next week with Mrs. W. E. Stone of Squier street.

The rummage sale to be held by the ladies of St. Paul's church has been postponed until Friday and Saturday of next week.

A regular meeting of the firemen was held Monday evening. Flanagan's singing orchestra has been secured for the annual ball in January.

The next meeting of the Palmer Woman's club will be next Friday evening with Mrs. C. A. Tabor of Thorndike. It will be a social evening.

Ahern & Hannifin will hold a sale at their millinery store in the Holden block next week. Attention is called to their advertisement in another column.

Mrs. Henry Gilp of South Main street received word yesterday of the death of her sister, Mrs. Mary Watt Ferguson of Greeley, Col. Mrs. Ferguson leaves two sisters in the town, Mrs. McGilp and Miss Lizzie Watts.

The Congregational church sent Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Bennett, L. H. Gager, Theodore Norman and C. F. Smith as delegates to the meeting of the Hampden Association of Churches and Ministers, held in Holyoke Wednesday.

The Y. P. C. U. of St. Paul's church will give a barn dance in Memorial hall this evening. Attendants are expected to dress in costume. There will be a varied program, and Getchell's orchestra of Springfield is to furnish music.

Professor Connelly's dancing class, which meets every Monday evening in the opera house hall, will be discontinued for two weeks, owing to other entertainments in the opera house. The next meeting will be held November 25th.

Voted For 16 Presidents.

Without doubt the oldest voter at the polls in precinct A on Tuesday was Nicholas K. Rogers of South Main street. Mr. Rogers is 87 years old, but came to the polls in an auto and cast his 16th vote for president. Mr. Rogers voted for John C. Freemont, Lincoln, and this year for Taft. He has missed but one presidential election since he began to vote, and then only because he had moved from the West to the East and had not lived in his new home long enough to be registered; this was at the time of Lincoln's second election. Mr. Rogers has always voted for the Republican candidates.

HITHERTO STRANGER TO FEAR

But Now He Had Run Against Something That Caused His Nerve to Forsake Him.

"I came, sir, in answer to your advertisement. You said you wanted to employ a man who was a total stranger to fear."

"Are you a brave man?"

"I am, sir. I have given proof of my courage in many parts of the world."

"Yes?"

"I have faced bullets in Mexico and machetes in Cuba."

"Good!"

"I helped to defend the missionaries against the Boxers, and I was present at the siege of Port Arthur."

"Fine."

"I have fought the infuriated walrus of Baffin bay and the maddened bull elephants of Central Africa, and I went through an Armenian massacre without losing my nerve."

"You seem to be the man I want. Would you be willing to go out on a field in front of 20,000 fair-minded, sport-loving Americans and umpire a baseball game honestly, deciding against the home team when necessary?"

"So that's the job, is it?" replied the man of courage, and broke into a cold perspiration and a run for the door simultaneously.

Unfortunate Situation.

Willesden Magistrate (to a woman who complained that her husband would not work): "You cannot make a man work if he is determined not to do so. There are so many wives willing to work in these days to keep their husbands that the wives who will not do so are apt to become unpopular."—London Mail.

William Penn's Sepulcher.

It is in the Church of St. Mary Redcliff, in Bristol, that the remains of Sir William Penn, father of the proprietor of Pennsylvania, rest. A tablet to his memory has been on the walls of the edifice ever since Sir William's death. Above it are hung his armor, his sword and his flags.

Many Children Are Sickly.

Mother Gray's Sweet Powders for Children Break up Colds in 24 hours, relieve Feverishness, Headache, Stomach Troubles, Teething Disorders, and Destroy Worms. At all druggists, 25c. Sample mailed FREE.

Sunshine of Life.

The sunshine of life is made up of very little beams that are bright all the time. To give up something when giving up will prevent unhappiness; to yield when persisting will chafe and fret others; to go a little way around rather than come against another; to take an adverse look or word quietly rather than return it—these are the ways in which cloudy are kept off and pleasant, steady sunshine is secured.—Aikin.

Freelon Q. Ball of Monson.
Elected Representative in the First Hampden district.

The Remaining Good.

If you lose heart about your work, remember that none of it is lost, that the good of every good deed remains and breeds and works on forever, and that all that falls and is lost is the outside shell of the thing, which, perhaps, might have been better done; but better or worse has nothing to do with the real spiritual good which you have done to men's hearts.—C. Kingsley.

Prehistoric Monster.

Eighty feet long and thirty feet high, the atlantosaurus was one of our prehistoric animals.

William H. Wheeler of Hubbardston.
Re-elected Senator in the Worcester-Hampden district.

Try This on Grease Spots.

For very bad grease spots on the front of a cotton dress sprinkle plentifully with finely prepared starch and cover it with brown paper. Iron it with a hot iron for a few minutes, then wash it in the usual way in warm soapsuds; no trace of the grease remains.

Value of Garlic.

The scientific name for the active principle of garlic is allyl sulphide, which is a powerful germicide. For this reason, people who are in the custom of eating garlic are far less subject to any form of tuberculosis than those who refrain from the odorous vegetable.

BUILD TIGER PROOF HOUSES

Malay Natives Perch Their Houses High Up In Trees to Escape Beasts.

The ordinary Malay house is built on posts from five to seven feet high; but one which I came across was perched high up in a tree. It was the home of a man, his wife and family, and they informed me that it was placed in this unusual situation so as to be out of the way of the numerous tigers which then infested the neighborhood.

As tigers have been known to jump 18 feet in vertical height somewhere above 20 feet is considered to be the limit of safety. The Malayan house is a frail and flimsy structure of sticks tied together with rattan thatched with palm leaves and walled with plaited bamboo, or, as in this case, with the bark of a tree.

It is therefore an easy matter for a tiger with its great strength to break into a house and attack the inhabitants. Many instances of this have been recorded in Malaya. In one well known case a whole family were killed except one man, who climbed up into the roof, and thus escaping the notice of the tiger, was a horrified observer of the cruel mauling and ultimate slaughter and devouring of his relatives.—Strand.

RENOWNED POOL OF SIVA

Wonderful Waters Credited by People of India With All Sorts of Magnetic Attributes.

A remarkable Indian ceremony is the Kumbakonam Mahamakam festival. This feast takes place once a year, but the Hindu gods are supposed to visit the sacred tank on each twelfth anniversary. It is said that the god Brahma once requested Siva to collect the essence of all the waters in the world. It is understood that Siva succeeded in doing this, placing the fluid in a pot, which he hid away on the top of a mountain. During the flood this pot floated away from its position, and when the waters subsided it rested at a spot some distance away, now known as Kumbakonam. Siva, who happened to be hunting in the vicinity, saw the pot and, drawing his bow and arrow, shot at it with disastrous results. The water, rushing out, filled a hollow, and this at the present time is the renowned tank. This tank is now a place of pilgrimage, where, during the festival, untold thousands of the faithful dip themselves in the wonderful water, which is credited with all sorts of magical attributes.—Wide World Magazine.

Case of Autosuggestion.

A man was watching a moving picture film of a religious ceremony in Burma. There were pictures of bell players or ringers among the Burmese musicians, while the actual orchestra, with the moving picture exhibition, was composed entirely of stringed instruments. Yet this man solemnly declared he heard the bells ringing. It was autosuggestion, but through that suggestion his sense of hearing had actually informed his brain of sounds that were not—had lied to him, as it were.

Water Always Best Drink.

Water continues to be the best drink, despite the years man has devoted to trying to improve it.—Achison Globe.

Increased Comfort for Hog.

A hog's habit of scratching itself against a post has led to the invention of an automatic disinfector for animals, which are sprayed with a fluid as they rub against a supporting column.

Daily Thought.

It has been well observed that advice is not hated because it is advice, but because so few people know how to give it.—Leigh Hunt.

Willing to Be Good.

"You children are not all obedient," "Well," said the sadly precocious youngster, "we are willing to be obedient, only paw and maw and grandpa and grandma haven't yet come to an understanding as to which is boss."

An Overflowing Cup.

If your cup is small fill to the brim. Let it be multum in parvo. Make the most of your opportunities of honest work and pure pleasure.—Henry Van Dyke.

FALSE IDEAS OF PERFECTION

Absurd Development of Muscle Has Little Part in Production of Perfect Athlete.

A recent portrait of a lumpy athlete, who invites others, and not without success, to try his system of physical development, shows that the false idea of physical perfection which obtained for so many years, and which demanded huge and knobby muscles of its disciples, has not yet quite died out. This type of manly perfection, once useful perhaps to hang armor upon, was thought to possess the sanction of the golden age of artistry when the lubberly Farnese Hercules came to light, to be hailed as a supreme product of the Greeks. We know it now for an example of decadent Greek taste, fit companion of the absurd and sensational Laocoon. It is naught but a type of the strong man of vaudeville with his clumsy masses of beef and his brain of a spoiled child, fit only to push his awkward dumb bells into the air, an enviable sum of achievement truly after a lifetime of work by a civilized human being. No less than strength, are speed and grace demanded of the ideal athletes, likewise a face of refinement and intelligence to tell of a brain within to comprehend art, music and literature, and the ability to plan victories either of peace or war. Look upon the Apollo Belvidere, which embodies the true dreams of health and mental and physical efficiency, with its face of exquisite beauty above a form whose lines are tranquil poetry, yet shadow forth their readiness to start into sinewy vigor when the call for action comes. Even the Indian, the perfect savage, never resembled the Farnese monstrosity the emulators of which find their place in modern life so much better filled by the derrick.—New York Medical Record.

Bull Made Merry Time.

Two men injured, several more seeking refuge in trees, and a panic among pedestrians, were a few of the results which attended the recent escapade of a young and ferocious bull at Burton-on-Trent, England. The animal escaped from a sale yard, and, after causing consternation by its antics through several busy thoroughfares, entered a recreation ground, where it proceeded to play havoc. An inmate of the workhouse was knocked down. While a man was trying to effect a rescue the animal rushed away, and knocked down a second person. While several betook themselves to trees for safety one man sought safety behind a tree, and for ten minutes had to continually circle it and defend himself by his belt. For two hours all efforts to capture the animal proved futile but the expedient of fetching a herd of cows had the desired effect.

Nobility of Virtue.

If there be no nobility of descent, all the more indispensable is it that there should be nobility of ascent—a character in them that bear rule so fine and high and pure that as men come within the circle of its influence they involuntarily pay homage to that which is the one pre-eminent distinction, the royalty of virtue.—Bishop Henry C. Potter.

New York's Demand for Coal.

One year's supply of coal for New York city loaded into fifty-ton cars would make a train reaching from Salt Lake City to the Atlantic ocean, a distance of 2,452 miles.

600 Messaline and Taffeta Petticoats At $1.98 and $2.49

On Sale—Priced at Less Than the Material Entering Into Their Construction

A most extraordinary announcement to be sure. But like all events here there's a reason. It is the direct result of a million dollar failure of one of the Country's largest and oldest Petticoat Manufacturers. A house with the prestige of years back of it --- for the production of high-grade garments --- humbled to a lowly position. The failure is the culmination of a widespread complaint among petticoat manufacturers that the close-fitting dresses have so reduced the demand for petticoats as to make them a glut on the market. In the dissolution our buyer secured this splendid lot of

RELICS OF THE BRONZE AGE

Remarkable Find of Prehistoric Weapons and Ornaments Made in Karst Mountains.

A remarkable find of prehistoric weapons and ornaments has been made in a cavern at St. Kanzion, in the Karst mountains, not far from Abbazia. The cavern, which is known as the "Cave of Flies," from the number of insects which, apparently breeding there, issue forth at certain times of the year, is a subterranean chamber with a perpendicular depth of one hundred and fifty feet, the only entrance to which is by a hole in the roof. It was recently explored by some climbers with the help of a long rope ladder. A Roman helmet, dating from the beginning of the Christian era, which the owner had apparently dropped down the hole, was first found. Encouraged by this the imperial museum sent men to dig into the earth and stones which have fallen from the roof and sides and form the floor of the cavern, and at a depth of three feet they discovered over a thousand articles of bronze, including two hundred lance heads, a number of swords, axes, clasps and vessels. The last named had all been burned through by fire. The date of the articles is estimated at about 1000 B. C. Since it appears impossible that men in the bronze age should have lived at the bottom of such a deep and inaccessible cavern archaeologists believe the weapons and vessels must have been thrown down the hole as a sacrifice to some subteranean deity.—Vienna Correspondence London Standard.

MA PUT INDIAN SIGN ON CUPID

By LAURA TURNER.

"My ma surely did put the skids under that Heinz fellow last Sunday night," laughed the girl with the exaggerated psyche knot. "He won't come mooning around my sister Bertha any more. "She giggled as she tucked in a few stray hairs that had curled over her collar and surveyed her pleasing reflection in the mirror above the lavatory.

"How did she squelch him, Annie?" asked the sleepy looking blonde, stretching her wet handkerchief across the mirror to dry it.

"Well, Bertha's had an awful case on Heinzy for quite a while. He's a widower, with a boy about five years old, but Bertha said she didn't care, for she liked him anyway. She used to rave about him until she made ma and me tired. I could see from the start that ma didn't have much use for him, and she warned Bertha that all he was looking for was somebody to keep house and cook his meals for him and take care of that kid of his.

"Bertha said ma was wrong, that he was head over ears in love with her, and she wouldn't hear a word against him. Ma used to call him Bertha's fireside companion, because he never took her anywhere, but just sat around and acted as though he was afraid to spend a nickel.

"Last Sunday morning Bertha went out to the kitchen and asked ma if she would let her have the Heinz fellow to supper that evening. She coaxed around until ma finally said she could ask him if she wanted to, but you could see that ma wasn't at all crazy about having him come.

"After Bertha had gone out and ma and I were doing up the work, all of a sudden I saw that ma had an idea. She chuckled to herself the rest of the morning, but she wouldn't let me in on the joke. When I asked her about it she just told me I would have to wait and keep my eyes open and I would see something funny.

"That evening Bertha said she wanted to get supper all by herself and show Heinzy what a grand cook she was. Ma says 'All right, if you want to get a job as housekeeper, of course you must give your future boss a sample of your cooking.' With that she went upstairs.

"After a while ma came down again and asked Bertha how she was getting along. Bertha said that everything was on the stove ready to dish up, and would ma watch things while she hustled upstairs in order to primp up a bit?

"Ma said she would, so Bertha beat it upstairs to doll up for Heinzy.

"When we all filed up to the dining room and sat down things looked good to me. While ma was bringing in the dishes she says to Heinzy: 'I want you to know, Mr. Heinz, that Bertha cooked every bit of the supper tonight, so if you like it you'll have to give her all the credit for it.'

Heinzy looked over at Bertha with a fat, contented smile and tucked a napkin under his double chin. Then he took a bite of biscuit and next I saw him look all around to see if anybody was watching him as he rolled it out of his mouth into his hand and laid it carefully on his plate. I began to get suspicious, so I took a bite of biscuit just to see. Say, it was about the awfulest tasting thing I ever ate!

"It was positively green inside! Bertha had used soda instead of baking powder, and plenty of it, too, and the biscuits were simply terrible!

"I copied Heinzy and got rid of my bite quick as I could and took a swallow of coffee to get the taste out of my mouth. Say! The coffee was so weak it was just like water! I looked over at ma and her face was as red as a beet, she was trying so hard to keep from laughing.

"I knew pretty well then who had queered the supper. Ma must have put soda in the baking powder can so Bertha would be sure to get it, and probably she put plenty of hot water in the coffee pot after Bertha had gone upstairs.

"I was curious to know what else ma had done, so I helped myself to a chop. Salty! It was worse than a mackerel that hadn't been soaked overnight! Why, I felt pickled in brine after I swallowed it! I glanced over at Heinzy. He was the glummest looking somebody you ever saw! Every now and then he looked at Bertha with a frown blanker than a thunder cloud.

"When we came to pie I found that ma had even switched pies on poor Bertha. The under crust was just like soft rubber! Heinzy ate the filling out and left the under crust staring Bertha in the face. Then we all got up and went into the parlor, but Heinzy never said a word about Bertha's fine cooking. Bertha didn't say anything, either. She had caught on right away what ma had done, but she never chirped.

"Heinzy didn't stay very late that night. I guess he was anxious to get away and hunt a lunch counter. He'd been coming to see Bertha every night for two weeks, but he hasn't been back since."

"What did Bertha say to your mother afterward?" asked the sleepy looking blonde. "Was she ugly about it?"

"I should say not! She saw that ma was right—that he was only looking for a cook—and she's glad that she found it out in time. My ma is as sharp as they make 'em, and nobody can put anything over on her. She's got the Indian sign on Cupid!"

Members Are Told How Pauper Department of Towns is Conducted.

The society held its regular meeting on Tuesday night. In the absence of the president and vice president, the curator, O. P. Allen, presided as chairman. The paper of the evening was read by Louis E. Chandler, a former member of the board of overseers of the poor, and dealt largely with the laws under which aid is given to those in need. The paper was a veritable cyclopedia of all conditions under which a person could gain a settlement in town or state, inclusive of methods employed to gain or prevent a settlement. The facts proved conclusively that to be an effective overseer in this department is no sinecure or summer vacation, for alertness is required at every turn, a keen knowledge of human nature, and sound judgment mingled with the salt of human sympathy is required. But it was also pointed out that the overseer must guard against the practice of fraud by those seeking aid, who sometimes have ample means for support hidden away. It has always been the endeavor of the board in Palmer to deal justly and kindly with all who have had the misfortune to really need aid at the hands of the town, yet under the closest care and scrutiny to safeguard the town against undue expense, for at the best the department has become an expensive one to maintain. The paper revealed some conditions connected with the pauperizing of parents and children not generally known, one of which is the fact that such families are quite liable to hand down the taint of pauperism in direct descent for several generations at least, as has been illustrated by the records. The statement was made that some persons who applied for aid would gladly take all they could get at home, yet objected to being taken to the town farm, as they considered it a disgrace; yet objectors, after being there a short time, would settle down in content, as they fared better there than in their own home. The trouble occurred last Friday night. Korzek was entertaining a party of friends in his room, and they made so much of a disturbance that Mrs. Lekarczyk, in the room below, was unable to sleep. She finally went up and protested, whereupon Korzek threw a lamp at her; it broke against the wall, and as she ran down the stairs he threw one of the pieces after her, striking her on the face and inflicting a bad cut.

WORK STOPS ON SOUTHERN NEW ENGLAND ROAD

Cause, "Scarcity of Money." Halt Said to be Temporary Only. Morgan Influence Claimed. Also Agreement with New Haven Lines.

Latest Reports Seem to Bear Out This Claim, But Palmer-Providence Line May Yet be Built--Federal Government May Make Investigation--Much Interest in Outcome in Massachusetts and Rhode Island.

Work on the construction of the Southern New England railroad, the extension of the Grand Trunk road which was to connect the latter's Central Vermont line at Palmer with Providence, R. I., has been wholly stopped this week, and it is a question if it is ever resumed. There appears to be a possibility — if the statements of officials are to be believed, that the Palmer–Providence section may ultimately be finished if the Providence end puts up a loud enough "holler," but the other branches of the road in New England, including the Boston connection and several other pieces, are hopelessly lost.

News of this decision was made public by the Monday morning dailies. The order was sent out by President Edson I. Chamberlain of the Grand Trunk, and came as a thunderbolt out of a clear sky. The reason given was a lack of finances due to the tightness of the money market incident on the Balkan war situation. It was announced that the stoppage was only temporary, but no time for resuming was given. Contractors at various places along the line between Palmer and Providence received orders a day or two later to discharge their help and cease work, this under clauses in the contracts which permitted work to be stopped at any time. At present the only work being done is that necessary to place highways in safe condition where bridge abutments have been erected and the final grading is uncompleted, and work of a similar nature.

To say that the shock to Southern New England — especially Massachusetts and Rhode Island — was great would be putting it mild. The whole territory was up in arms at once, more especially as the reasons given by President Chamberlain for the cessation of work were at once denied. Not only were they denied, but the denial was bolstered up by claims which had at least a semblance of truth. All the machinery of protest, objection, and inquiry into the actual situation which could be put in motion was started up at once. Gov. Foss of Massachusetts and Gov. Pothier of Rhode Island took immediate steps to get at the actual facts; boards of trades and chambers of commerce in both states took the matter up, and it is not improbable that, before the matter is finally settled, the federal government may take a hand.

Boiled down and sifted, it is openly claimed that the abandonment of the Southern New England railroad project may be laid to the "fine Italian hand" of J. Pierpont Morgan. The Southern New England was to compete with the New York, New Haven and Hartford road for freight in a busy and productive section of New England now dependent on the latter for getting material in and finished goods out. Rhode Island has wanted another outlet for years; so has a material section along the southern side of Massachusetts. The prospect of such an increase in advantage by way of the Southern New England — giving throuhg its Central Vermont and Grand Trunk connections at the North, direct outlet to the West and Northwest — was hailed with delight by a section anxious to increase its manufactures but hampered by being dependent on a single railroad. The new road was of course violently opposed by the New Haven system, but was granted permission to build. Now, what is more natural to suppose, is asked, than that the man whose influence in financial matters is most feared, being largely interested in the New Haven system, should suggest to the directors of the Grand Trunk that it might be to their distinct disadvantage to persist in paralleling the New Haven (and the Boston and Maine, controlled by the New Haven) as originally planned. Such a suggestion would no doubt be followed by an immediate withholding of funds, and the Balkan war is made an excuse for the "tightness of the money market."

Coupled with this is made another claim, that the Grand Trunk is to be given a sop in the way of a traffic agreement with the New Haven by which the Grand Trunk "would virtually be at every station in New England without burdening the community with a duplication of present facilities." This is to be a traffic agreement, an entirely different thing from a trackage agreement. By the latter the Grand Trunk would be permitted to use the New Haven tracks to important centers, but not under the former, which would be simply an amicable working understanding.

Naturally the first question asked when the work was ordered stopped was "Why," and President Chamberlain of the Grand Trunk announced that it was a precautionary measure brought about by the unsettled money market which is produced by the war conditions in Europe at the present time. He announced and reiterated that he considered the stoppage only temporary and the work would be resumed later, although he was unable to estimate the time, that depending wholly on the financial situation. There were, however, immediate rumors that some agreement with the New Haven system was to be entered into, and the Providence Journal put the matter squarely up to President Charles S. Mellen of the New York, New Haven and Hartford road as follows:

"Ever since the death of Mr. Heys Charles S. Mellen has been making every effort, through financial interests in London, through Canadian government interests, through officials of the Canadian Pacific Railroad, through J. P. Morgan & Co., and last through President Chamberlin himself, to disrupt and destroy the Southern New England proposition, which was the first real competition which he has had to face in his private empire of New England.

"He has within the past week finally induced President Chamberlin of the Grand Trunk to violate all the pledges of that road made to the people of this state when the new charter was granted, and has secured his consent to an absolute withdrawal from this territory.

"The consideration to be paid to the Grand Trunk for withdrawal is declared to be by one of the two following methods or by both:

"1. A traffic agreement, with the promise of direct New York passenger connections and other traffic arrangements.

"2. The payment of a large sum of money by Charles S. Mellen covering every dollar that has been expended by the Grand Trunk in the construction work of the Southern New England."

This was squarely denied by President Chamberlin, with the statement that "The New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad has nothing to do with our decision to suspend work on the Southern New England. We have no arrangement with the New Haven by which we are under obligations not to build the lines to Providence and Boston. The New Haven does not enter into this situation."

In apparent support of this, when the matter was put up to Mr. Mellen of the New Haven road the following was given out: "Mr. Mellen has only to say in connection with the newspaper stories regarding the relations of the New Haven and Grand Trunk, that he has known Mr. Chamberlin for many years, does not believe for one moment that Mr. Chamberlain would make any statement regarding this or any other matter that was not strictly true. Whatever statement, therefore, Mr. Chamberlain make regarding the present or future relations of the two companies may be relied upon without question, and it is unnecessary for him (Mr. Mellen) to confirm or otherwise."

On the other hand a high official of the New Haven road is quoted as follows: "You will find that the board of directors of the Grand Trunk have come to realize, since the death of Charles M. Hays, that it would be much more profitable for the road to come into Boston on the tracks of the New Haven system than to build a separate road.

"In other words, they have come to realize that the percentage of profit when the New Haven tracks are used is greater than the profit that the Grand Trunk would make after building and operating its own line. Operating expenses take up about 85 percent of the gross profits, and I think that the Grand Trunk would find that the percentage would be even higher if it used its own rails to Boston.

"Now, the New Haven is willing to make concessions to the Grand Trunk. It merely says to the Canadian line 'Come on in over our lines. and all that we ask is that you give us a certain amount for using them.' The New Haven has made these concessions to other roads but it treats them all alike. If it did not, it would be in hot water all the time.

"When Mr. Hays was alive he wanted to have Mr. Mellen grant concessions to the Grand Trunk which were far greater than the New Haven granted to any of the other roads.

"Mr. Hays then said that he would come into Boston and Providence on his own rails. He told Pres. Mellen that because the Central Vermont reached New London the Grand Trunk was a New England line and was therefore entitled to greater concessions, but Mr. Mellen could not see it in that way.

"Now the directors of the Grand Trunk are coming to see that the cost of building the branches to Boston and Providence was too great, and poor business when the road could use the New Haven tracks and by using them make more money than by using its own. You know as well as I do that the Grand Trunk is having a hard time getting money. The greater profits by using our tracks have a strong appeal to them."

When the substance of the above was called to President Chamberlain's attention by a special writer of the Boston Globe sent to Montreal to cover the situation, he reiterated that he knew nothing about it; that no traffic arrangement with the New Haven or the Boston and Maine for an entrance into New York, Boston or Providence was contemplated as far as he knew.

The Boston Chamber of Commerce, in its desire to get at the exact facts in the situation, sent a committee of two to Montreal and of their visit the Globe's special writer had the following to say yesterday: It is evident, however, that they gained the impression which has been prevalent here for several days that Mr. Chamberlain, in abandoning the Southern New England project and opening negotiations with Pres. Mellen, is following instructions from a superior authority, and Mr. Chamberlin's superiors are the directors of the Grand Trunk in London. It may be said that Mr. Hubbard and Mr. Ives left the office of the president of the Grand Trunk with the kindliest feeling and sympathy for Mr. Chamberlin, believing that a connection had been established between the powerful financial interests in New York, which control the New Haven, and the London directors of the Grand Trunk, whose supervision of the property here runs to the very details of the management. While the two Boston men would not admit it, it is not a hazard to guess that after talking with Mr. Chamberlin to-day they were satisfied that through the agency of J. Pierpont Morgan and his London connections the directors of the Grand Trunk were persuaded to forbid the entrance of the Grand Trunk into New England as a competitor of the New Haven and the Boston & Maine.

This writer had the following to say of the departure of the committee from Montreal Wednesday:

"Two disappointed men left for Boston to-night. The situation is: The railroad from White River Junction to Boston, for which a charter has been secured, is not to be built. There will be no line from Boston to Blackstone or from that point to Worcester. The Southern New England, which has been surveyed and partially constructed from Palmer to Providence, will not be finished unless public sentiment in Providence is potent enough to overcome the influences which at present have secured the suspension of those operations. If the Governor of Rhode Island and the Legislature and the Mayor and trade organizations of Providence are powerful enough to compel the completion of the extension to that city Providence will have the Grand Trunk subsidiary railroad. If the forces which have succeeded in halting the Providence extension are dominant, the right of way will be abandoned. As the issue was put to-night, it is for Providence to demonstrate whether it can insist upon the completion of the Southern New England. E. J. Chamberlain to-day acknowledges that the railroads which his predecessor, Charles M. Hays, had determined to construct between White River Junction and Boston and between Blackstone and Worcester would not be built. But the president of the Grand Trunk argued in explanation that it would be bad business policy to invest millions in paralell lines, and he could see no profit in running new rails in a territory already tapped by the Boston & Maine system."

That the situation is attracting wide attention is evidenced by the following in a dispatch to the New York Sun from Washington:

"The action of the Grand Trunk Railway in discontinuing construction work on what is known as the Southern New England Railroad after an expenditure of nearly $2,000,000 has aroused the greatest interest among officials of the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Department of Justice. If the Grand Trunk has dropped work on this projected line which was to compete with the New York, New Haven and Hartford, as the result of an agreement with the New Haven line, the action is likely to prove a thorn in the side of the New England railroad. Interstate Commerce Commission officials are satisfied that the discontinuance of work on the projected Grand Trunk branch involves an understanding with the New Haven and have already decided to open the way for an investigation. The department of Justice also stands ready to act if any violation of the Sherman anti-trust law is indicated."

More hope for the Palmer-Providence extension is shown in a report made last night to Gov. Foss and the directors of the port of Boston by William S. McNary, chairman of the harbor and land commission, whose information is based on facts secured from Grand Trunk and New Haven officials. In part this report is:

"That the work of the Southern New England extension from Palmer to Providence has been stopped because the Grand Trunk, which is substantially an English-owned and financed road, cannot get the funds at present in England or Canada, the Balkan war scare contributing largely to this result. That the Palmer-Providence road would in all probability be built in the *spring because of the money already ex*pended and contracts which had been let for steel railway materials, bridges, etc.

"The projected Southern New England or Grand Trunk extension from White River Junction to Boston on the north and from Providence and Blackstone to Boston on the south will not be built, because of the practical impossibility for the Grand Trunk railroad to secure the many millions of dollars needed to finance the plans for construction. That the Grand Trunk railroad will act cautiously on its plans for the Canadian construction for the time being, and will probably go slowly during the present Borden conservative government in Canada, which favors the Canadian Pacific rather than the Grand Trunk.

"That the New Haven road and the Boston and Maine will double-track its lines from Concord, N. H., to White River Junction, and its Connecticut River lines from White River Junction to Greenfield, Mass., and will thus give double-track facilities from White River Junction to Boston, and substantially to New York. That the New Haven and Boston and Maine system will give to the Grand Trunk either traffic facilities over its lines to Boston or trackage facilities by which the Grand Trunk can send business to Boston or to other New England points either over the New Haven and Boston and Maine roads in the cars of the New Haven–Boston and Maine system or can run its own trains with its own motive power, its own cars and its own crews to Boston, and its own freight trains to the Boston terminals at Charlestown and South Boston if the Grand Trunk so desires, and for such terms of years as the Grand Trunk desires also.

May Shoot Deer Next Week.

Hunting Allowed From Sunrise Monday To Sunset Saturday.

The annual weekly deer hunt will be on in Massachusetts next week, when the animals may be hunted and shot from sunrise of Monday until sunset of Saturday. As has been the rule heretofore, shot guns only may be used, a very wise precaution in a section so thickly settled as is this, and where rifles have the power to send bullets a couple of miles or more and do deadly execution at that distance. Only one deer is allowed to a man—or woman if she hunts—and the killing must be reported at once to the game warden in that section. Wounded animals which get away are also to be reported.

That there will be the usual number of hunters is assured. Already quantities of licenses to hunt have been taken out, and many others will be issued before to-morrow night. The number issued by Town Clerk Foley of Palmer up to this morning was 280, and the influx of outside hunters will no doubt be large. While the deer are reported as fairly plentiful, it is said they are not so numerous as in times past, the open seasons of the past two years having, it is claimed, decreased the number materially. Hunters are urged to wear hats of red, or red cloth on their hats as a precaution against being mistaken for a deer by some hunter who cannot wait to see what is in the brush but shoots at anything he sees moving.

He was nominated upon the non-partisan judiciary ticket of Clarke county for judge of the superior court at the direct primaries held Sept. 10, last, and then received nearly as many votes as his four competitors combined. ## "TO THE LEAST" SHALL BE GIVEN

By ADA WILKERSON.

Ever since Joshua died Mary Ann Penrose had been saving up to buy a new altar cloth for the church.

Joshua was Mary Ann's husband, and he had been dead ten years. In life Joshua had been a great trial to his wife. He was a carpenter, and a good carpenter, when they were married. He had built their little home himself, and presented it to Mary Ann on her wedding day.

"That's how I come to still own it," she said the day she told me about the altar cloth.

"Josh would a' sold it long ago if it hadn't been all mine. He hit me once, when he was in liquor, 'cause I wouldn't sign it over to him so he could sell it. But I wouldn't. I was always firm in that, no matter how much Josh wanted money for pain killer.

"The place where he busted his shoulder once when he fell off a scaffold always hurt in damp weather, an' Josh just naturally took to drinkin' to ease the pain. It's a blessin' the Lord never sent us any children. He would a' sold the clothes off their backs fer drink. But when he was himself he always said he wouldn't ever take my home away from me.

"Goodness knows I had a hard enough time to save money for the taxes. I used to hide it in the old brass teapot I kept 'way back in the corner of the cupboard, an' he never once thought of lookin' there.

"But since he's been dead I miss him. Poor old Josh! He was a good husband, an' I always wanted to give somethiin' to the church as a memorial. I thought about one of them fancy winders, but they cost too much, so I settled on an altar cloth, white satin, all worked in gold, like the old one, only lots nicer, with more gold and some pieces of glass that look like jewels.

"I saw one once, when I was visitin' in the city, an' I have my mind set on one like it.

"It would just do me good to set in Grace Chapel every Sunday an' see one of them handsome white and gold cloths hangin' over the pulpit.

"I had money fer it all saved up—a hundred and fifty dollars—in the teapot. Teapots is safer than banks. An' I was a-goin' to go to the city to git the new fixin's, when along come that poor, forlorn woman, Mrs. Quick, sellin' buttons and thread, lace, darnin' cotton and needles she had in a basket. She told me she had tramped all the way from the city. Her husband was killed workin' on the railroad, and she was tryin' to git money to buy her baby some clothes.

"Poor soul! She was staggerin' sick when she come to my door. I just had to take her in—she was a nice, clean little woman, too—an' so white an' miserable lookin'.

"Of course, I had to git the doctor; but he couldn't do nothin' to save her—she hadn't had nourishin' food or the right kind of livin' for so long. Her strength was all gone.

"Both of us did everything we could, and Miss Artman come over to help, but it wasn't any use. Doctor said the baby had taken all his mother's vitality—an' you ought to see what a husky little fellow he is. He's asleep now, but when he wakes up I'll let you hold him a while. He's just as pretty and bright!

"His mother give him to me before she passed away, an' said she wanted him named for his father—David—so I have named him David Joshua Quick.

"It took all the altar cloth money for medicine for the mother and clothes for little David—and the funeral; but Josh, he'll understand that my memorial to him will be the upbringin' of the livin' child, 'stead of the altar cloth.

"Last Sunday I went to church early, before anybody else was there—and I told the Lord how I had to use the money I saved to decorate his house. And it seemed as I knelt there and looked at that old cloth a-hangin' over the pulpit that the gold looked brighter and better than it had fer a long time, and it seemed when I had finished tellin' my story to the Lord, it seemed I could hear a whisper through the silence, like the trees outside the window were a-whisperin' together, and it seemed like it said: 'Inasmuch as thou hast done it unto one of the least of these my children, thou hast done it unto me.'

"So, I guess the Lord understands, too."

Drew the Line.

Pat had been at work for three days digging a well, and as the foreman wanted it finished within the week he had promised Pat another man to help him. It was getting on for eleven o'clock, and Towser, the foreman's bulldog, was looking over the edge of the pit, when Pat said to himself: "I'll have a smoke."

He had just filled his pipe, and was about to light it, when he glanced up and beheld Towser's handsome features.

Slowly removing the pipe from his mouth, he said: "Be-e-egorra, Oi've wor-rked wid Germans and Hengar-r-rians, and Oi've worrked wid Oitalians and niggers, but if a man wid a face like that comes down here to work beside me Oi gets up."

The Way to Date.

"You say you hope to become engaged to a suffragette?"

"Well, I'm going to submit the question to a referendum consisting of her two sisters and her parents."

IN THE CLUTCHES OF GOLF FRENZY

"There is nothing else so sad," declared the woman who had the floor, "as to view a strong man in the clutches of that perfidious disease, the golf fever. He becomes as a small boy who runs home joyously to relate how he played 'keeps' and won all the marbles from the other small boys, or else wants comfort because they won his marbles.

"After a successful afternoon at his club Edward returns to his family so excited that he doesn't know whether the dish before him is pickled doormats or porterhouse steak. He begins talking at once, while I sit waiting for a break in his talk, so that I can ring for more butter or ask for water, and while the children hold on to their chairs by main force, starving to death because he has forgotten to serve them, and they know papa must not be interrupted when he is talking.

"'Yes,' Edward says, 'I licked 'em today! Never saw such a score.' (Business of fishing score card from pocket.) 'Why, the third and sixth and seventh I made in two less than bogey—think of it, two less! And the first and fourth and the next three over the twelfth I did in bogey and the others in just one over—no, by Jove, I did the nineteenth in less than bogey, too!'

"'Why!' I murmur. 'That was a score, certainly! Will you pass—'

"'Hopkins plays a close game,' Edward proceeds cheerily. 'I had to look sharp to win over him. I thought I was lost when he did that 220-yard drive at the third hole, and if I do say it, I'm strong on driving!'

"'Yes, you are, dear,' I agree, brightly. 'Will you please give Eddie some of the—'

"'The committee ought to have the long grass on the tenth mowed,' Edward breaks in, fiercely. 'It's a disgrace to the club! The caddies deliberately lose the balls in that grass. I nearly reported my caddy today—paid no attention to the game at all. I made a fine drive and he was looking the other way! I—'

"'Boo-ho-o-oo!' some one of the children wails when hunger grows unendurable. Then Edward peers about him unseeingly and wants to know what on earth ails Eddie or Jane. I suggest that if they get a share of the dinner they may feel better.

"Sometimes I go out to the club to join Edward for dinner. If you are on the terrace when the golfers come in, hot and grimy and disheveled after their round, you get it full force. You see two men sawing the air and shouting like a political convention and getting purple in the face and acting as though they were just waiting to be dared to jump at each other and claw and scratch. But all in the world that is happening is that one of them is explaining why he lost a stroke at seventh hole and the other is insisting that he should by good rights have lost two if he had scored correctly. Or, maybe one of them is saying the green at the eleventh hole slopes up and the other is declaring that it slopes down.

"I admire the reserve force in a golfer. He will tramp five miles under a sun that would fry eggs, using up good muscle swatting a ball around, and arrive at the club looking as though he was going to die of apoplexy, if not just plain exhaustion. As you wildly start to bring him first aid to the injured another golfer in like condition makes some remark to which he objects and then they're off at a mile a minute gait, arms whirring like windmills, quarreling over the best way to get a ball out of the gully behind the twelfth green.

"The winners are the worst. They take a shower and put on their niftiest clothes and prance up and down all that evening, explaining just how bad the other fellows were. Golf is the only game in which it is sportsmanlike to run down your opponent. It is really expected of you and if you don't do it you are instantly suspected of being no gentleman.

"Still, I approve of golf clubs—they're such nice places to go for a dinner on a hot night when your cook has left!"—Chicago Daily News.

Culture.

Culture may be divided into three classes: Musical, literary and artistic.

Musical culture is made up of motifs, money and half-nakedness. In its most virulent form it is seen at grand opera.

Literary culture consists of equal parts of rhapsody, hysterics, toadyism and simple mania. It is incurable in extreme cases. In the case of young women, a sudden marriage sometimes works wonders.

Artistic culture is divided into realistic, impressionistic and mystic. In the realistic we see things as we think they are; in the impressionistic, as we hope they never will be; in the mystic, we look mysterious and frankly admit that it would be no earthly use to impart to common minds our own superior opinions.—Lippincott's.

Deserted!

One member of the motor car party was very tired. He did not alight at the last two or three controls and presently was dead to the world. When he woke up he found himself on the back seat alone and with a red lamp glaring at him fiercely.

"Fine thing," he was heard to say. "Left alone on a railroad track and with an engine almost on top of me."

The lamp indicated a boulevard turn and the others of the party were putting on a new tire.

The Big Celebration

By DAVID C. GALE

(Copyright, 1912, by Associated Literary Press.)

It was a sweltering day when the letter came, one of the days that makes you wonder why cities are built. The streets were parched and glaring, and the offices—everyone knows how they are in midsummer. Marshall Kenton leaned back in his chair with his eyes half closed. A bit of paper had set him to dreaming of the distant hillside where he had first become acquainted with green fields and shade trees.

"If you could arrange it so as to be at home the first week in August," the letter ran, "there's going to be a big celebration. Town is a hundred years old. Most likely you would see some people you know."

So the sleepy old town had decided to mark the advent of its second century with a birthday party. What a record of uneventful years! He could remember when, as a boy, he had climbed the hill out beyond the meadow and counted every house in the village. And the last time he was at home he had found it surprisingly easy to point out those same houses.

"That was when Alice was married," he mused. "Five years—no—can it be as long ago as that? I wouldn't have believed it."

All that afternoon he was living amid old-time surroundings. Once more he set out on the path that leads up past the trout-brook to the spring in the edge of the woods. He threw himself down beside it as of old, and watched the bubbles zigzag their way to the surface. He could almost hear the call of the south wind in the maples over his head.

When he reached home at night, his eye was still vibrant with boyish enthusiasm

"You must have had a good day," was his wife's greeting.

"I got a letter from home," came the smiling reply.

"Then I'm sure there must be something nice in it—you are so lighthearted. You ran up the walk like a boy."

"I am a boy," he cried, as he handed her the letter. "I've been a boy all the afternoon. Don't ask for a reason; it's impossible to explain it. No one can tell why this letter of all the others should have given me such a backward turn—unless it's the hundred years idea. Anyway, I've squandered my time in dreaming."

"And have you decided to go?"

"We must. It would be a crime to put it off any longer, business or no business. I hadn't realized until today that it's been five years since we paid the old folks a visit. No wonder they keep asking when we are coming home."

"I'll tell you what you ought to do," she exclaimed. "Get the whole family home."

"Ours?"

"No—theirs."

"The old house wouldn't begin to hold us," protested Marshall

"I mean their sons and daughters. Of course I would love to go myself and take the children," she hastened to add, "but that can come later Just for this once, I'd like to have you all go back alone. In no other way could you give your father and mother so much real pleasure: it would seem like old times to them. Think of what it would mean to you, too."

"I don't believe it can be arranged. The rest of the family might not be able to get away."

"Oh, yes it can," she persisted "I'll write to them tonight."

Thus it came about that, on the first Monday in August, the grown-up Kenton children were on their way to the big celebration. They met at a little town six miles from their destination. They met there because the train could carry them no nearer—beyond that point the stage was their only choice. It was the same stage which had carried them to and fro when they were children in reality.

Had Uncle Jerry, the driver, been in charge of things that afternoon, he would never have set out with any such collection of baggage and express—he would have left a part of it until the following day. But the boy was sanguine, and thought he could take it all. He was about ready to start when the Kentons came in sight.

"Wait a minute!" wheezed Marshall who had run on ahead to make arrangements "Where's Uncle Jerry?"

"He's sick I'm driving today."

"Can you make room for us?"

"Guess so—if you don't mind being crowded Get in anywhere you can"

At any other time they would have resented such accommodations, but on this particular day it seemed like another touch of realism. Often, in years gone by, had they started for home after spending the day in town, only to be confronted by similar conditions. So they climbed in among the strawberry crates and mail pouches without a word of protest—even the boy was surprised at their cheerfulness.

"It's a shame the way we've been neglecting the old people," exclaimed Alice, as the stage toiled along over the country road. "I don't believe they've seen any of us since the day I was married.

"We might take turns in going home" advanced James. "Each one of us to make the trip every five years In that way they would have at least one visit a year, and, as Alice says, we ought to get into line some way."

"It looks as if we wouldn't any of us reach home this year," predicted Daniel. "There's Harrington Hill, and it's all the horses can do to pull their load on level ground."

"You'll have to get out and push—some of you," shouted the boy. "'Twould make Uncle Jerry sicker than ever if we got hung up."

Casting aside whatever portion of dignity may have remained, the Kenton boys jumped out and sought to relieve the overworked horses.

With an easier load and additional power behind him, the boy again took up the reins. He glanced confidently up the hill as he started the horses. For fully fifteen minutes he struggled to fill Uncle Jerry's place; then came the surrender.

"It's no use," he groaned. "We're stuck."

"This is a pretty note!" exclaimed Marshall. "What are we going to do?"

The Kentons were slow to adjust themselves to the situation. They had almost forgotten that at best country roads are very uncertain.

"You wait here," volunteered Daniel, "and I'll go to the village for a team."

"No," cried Alice, "let's all walk. It isn't far up over the hill. Our baggage will come—sometime." And she led the way out across the freshly-cut hayfield.

There was a fence to be scaled, and then they were in the midst of innumerable woodland voices and the richly-blended fragrance of the forest. Clambering up the steep, uneven roadway, they came to the sugarhouse in the clearing. Yet another climb, and the end was in sight.

"There she is—just the same as ever, bless her!" shouted Marshall, nodding his head in silent approval.

"Not much change, is there?" breathed Ellen.

"Father must be setting the pace," observed James. "Our house is the only one that's decorated."

"I'll race you down the hill, Alice," challenged Daniel.

With a shout of acceptance she darted away, and the others followed as best they could. They were all troubled with a shortness of breath; that was another thing which the years had brought. On arriving at the orchard not one of them could speak intelligibly.

"Let me go and find them," panted Ellen.

She stole around the corner of the house, only to reappear again straightaway.

"They're on the front porch waiting for the stage," she whispered. "Come on. We'll go in through the house—all together."

Quietly, they picked their way about the familiar rooms—but not quietly enough. Mrs. Kenton heard the muffled click of a latch, and turned to look. Five smiling faces were peering at her from the doorway.

"Why—why—" she mumbled.

Then the storm of their greeting burst forth.

"Where did you come from?" questioned Mr. Kenton, wonderingly, as soon as he could make himself heard.

"Up through the woods—stage is stranded over at Harrington Hill," babbled Alice. "How's the celebration?"

"There, father, you see," moaned Mrs. Kenton. "I told you how it would be. Here they've all come, and we've got to tell them. Oh, why did we make up that story about the celebration?"

"You see, your mother has been trying to get some of you home this good while," interceded Mr. Kenton, "and we finally took a rather questionable way to bring it about. Yet there was no lie in it. We said in the letter that there was going to be a big celebration if you decided to come home—it wasn't necessary to add that there wouldn't be any if you didn't come."

"You poor, dear, old mother, you!" exclaimed Ellen. "I didn't care a rap about the celebration."

"Nor I!" shouted the others in unison.

Somehow, they got the old people together and formed a ring about them. Nor did they separate until everyone in the ring had thrown out a reassuring word.

"You won't have to go to all that trouble next time," asserted James.

"You'll have a visit from one of us every year after this," stated Ellen.

"It's all arranged," declared Daniel "We talked it over on the way."

"That is what should have been done before," interposed Alice.

"And now," cried Marshall, "we are all going to have just the biggest kind of a celebration."

Transvaal Gold.

The value of the gold output of the Transvaal for the year 1911 has been reckoned at $170,000,000. This was an increase in value over the previous year of more than $140,000,000. It is estimated that the gold output of the Transvaal to the year mentioned constitutes almost, if not quite, 38 per cent. of the output of the whole world for the same year. In 1910 the proportion was 33 per cent., so it will be seen that the South African gold mines are steadily improving. The dividend distributed from the 1911 output reached the princely sum of $37,779,057.

Her Favorite.

Young Sportleigh took Belle Gingham to see a boxing contest.

"Keep your eye on Billy the Bean Bumper," he cautioned, "because he is sure to put it all over that lanky boy from Showhegan."

Belle demurred.

"But why?" she inquired; "I'm sure the other gentleman has the best gestures."

Horan --- Brown.

Popular Young Palmer Couple United In Marriage Tuesday.

An unusually pretty wedding took place in St. Thomas' church Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock, when Elizabeth Horan and David J. Brown were united in marriage. Rev. M. J. O'Connell performed the ceremony in the presence of a large number of friends and relatives. Mrs. D. E. O'Connor presided at the organ. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Gertrude Horan, and Wilfred Mongeau was best man. The bride wore a gown of white crepe charmeuse, trimmed with moline lace, and cut en traine. She wore a veil and carried a white ivory prayer-book. The bridesmaid wore a gown of pink crepe meteor trimmed with chiffon and a black picture hat. She carried a bouquet of Killarney roses. A wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Daniel J. Fay on Park street, at which about 35 guests were present. Mr. and Mrs. Brown departed in an automobile about 1 o'clock and will enjoy a three-weeks' wedding trip. Upon their return they will live in Palmer. The bride is a native of Ware, but for a number of years has made her home in Palmer and has been employed as cashier for the Cutler company at North Wilbraham. The groom is a native of Palmer and for the past 12 years has been employed in the Palmer post office. Both young people are well known and very popular in the town.

Plenty of Lecture Course Tickets.

Although the canvass for the sale of tickets for the entertainment course has closed, it must not be supposed that there are no more tickets to be had. There are plenty of tickets left, as nothing like the capacity of the house has been sold as yet. Tickets for the entire course of four entertainments may be had for the price of $1, or if a reserved seat is wished, the price is $1.50. Tickets may be secured of any member of the committee, Dr. C. A. Moore, Clifton H. Hobson, Rev. Otto S. Raspe, Dr. H. C. Cheney, Louis E. Chandler or C. W. Chamberlin. The price of admission to the single entertainments will be 50 cents.

Meets With Painful Accident.

Peter Gernon of Palmer Center, employed by the Flynt Building and Construction company on their job at the electric plant in Blanchardville, was painfully injured Tuesday. He was engaged, with some other workmen, in pulling down a form for concrete. Fearing it might fall upon them, the men rushed to get out of the way, and fell over each other. Gernon, in falling, broke both bones of his right leg above the ankle. He was attended by Dr. H. C. Cheney and removed to his home in Palmer Center.

Superintendent Atkins Goes.

Will Locate On Pacific Coast. Succeeded by Springfield Man.

E. D. Atkins, who for a little more than four years has been superintendent of the Springfield and Eastern division of the Springfield Street Railway company, has resigned that position. He is succeeded by Sidney H. Sayles of Springfield, who for a long time has been an inspector for the company in that city. Mr. Sayles began his new duties Monday, Mr. Atkins remaining through this week to acquaint him with the place and the people of the town. Mr. Atkins came to Palmer in October, 1908, from the Blackstone Valley lines, succeeding F. S. Hunnewell. After a vacation of three weeks in Northern New York state with relatives Mr. Atkins and family will go to Seattle, Washington, where he and his son will have positions with a construction company.

Palmer Vote Recounted.

A Few Errors, But there is No Change In the Result.

A recount of the votes cast in last week's election was held in the selectmen's room Wednesday, the votes recounted being those for treasurer, auditor, attorney-general, and representative to the General Court. The figures of the original count and the recount are given below:

| | | Return. | Recount. | |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Treasurer— | St. Coeur, | 415 | 416 | 1 gain |
| | Stevens, | 427 | 427 | |
| Auditor— | Carens, | 375 | 374 | 1 loss |
| | White, | 403 | 404 | 1 gain |
| Att'y.-general— | Anderson, | 415 | 413 | 2 loss |
| | Swift, | 412 | 416 | 4 gain |
| Representative— | Ball, | 422 | 419 | 3 loss |
| | Hughes, | 467 | 470 | 3 gain |

Monson's count gave no change in the representative vote, thus leaving Ball's plurality 22.

A Big Brother Night.

Men's League Has Plans For Interesting Meeting Next Week.

The Men's League of the Congregational church has perfected plans for a Big Brother and Boys' night on Friday evening of next week in the lecture room of the church. The speaker will be E. H. Kessler in charge of the boys' work of the Holyoke Y. M. C. A. Mr. Kessler is an entertaining speaker and will be sure to have something interesting. All men are invited to attend this meeting, and each one is expected to take with him some boy in whom he is interested.

Interesting Lecturer Coming.

A lecture which is sure to be interesting and well worth hearing will be that of Rev. Wilbur F. Crafts of Washington, D. C., on the evening of November 29. The subject will be "That boy and girl of yours." Dr. Crafts is superintendent of the International Reform Bureau, the work of which is to secure moral legislation in Congress, thirteen laws having already been secured: Six on the temperance question, two on the Sabbath, one on gambling, two on divorce, one on bad literature and one for the protection of girls. The chief undertaking of the bureau this year are the Kenyon-Shepard interstate liquor bill, an appropriation of $250,000 for a nation-wide enforcement of the white-slave law, and the cleaning up of Washington for the inauguration. Only because of an engagement in Brattleboro the day before is it possible for Mr. Crafts to appear in Palmer. The lecture will be in the Congregational church.

Wright, president and general manager of the Wright Wire company, as their candidate for mayor of the city. The list of his endorsers includes many names prominent in the business life of the city. Mr. Wright has served the city two terms as member of the city council, and one as alderman, the latter in 1902.

Houses Scarce, Families Moving Away.

The scarcity of desirable tenements is evidenced in the removal to Monson of William Birmingham, an employe of the street railway company. The house in which he has been living has been sold and the owner wishes to occupy it himself. Mr. Birmingham is unable to find a suitable tenement in Palmer so is forced to moved his family to Monson. He will remain in the employ of the street railway.

The real estate and personal property of the late D. W. Fosket at Fosket's Mills is to be sold at auction next Wednesday, beginning at 9.40 a. m.

Is Given a Franchise.

Warren Power Company May Set Poles and String Wires in Palmer.

The selectmen at their meeting last evening granted the petition of the Warren Power company for a franchise to do business in the town of Palmer. The grant is to be subject to restrictions which the selectmen will impose later. The Warren Power company has a water privilege at West Warren which it proposes to increase and to erect a large power plant, in which it will generate electricity which it wishes to market in Palmer in competition with the Central Massachusetts Electric company, and in towns west of Palmer.

Gold—Brahin.

Miss Dorothy Estelle Gold, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jay Gold, was united in marriage to Samuel Brahin of Westfield Sunday evening at the home of the bride on the Boston road, about about two miles east of Palmer. The wedding march was played by Freiman's orchestra of Springfield as the bridal party entered the parlor. It was led by Miss Marion Gold, the four-years-old sister of the bride. She was followed by five bridesmaids with their escorts. Miss Sadie Gold, sister of the bride, was dressed in blue marquiset over yellow; she was accompanied by her brother, Harry Gold. Miss Bernson of Springfield wore lavendar crepe de chine, and was escorted by Harry Ginsberg. Miss Eleanor Gold, sister of the bride, wore white crepe charmeuse, and was escorted by J. Ecker of Worcester. Miss Gertrude Huowitz of Springfield was gowned in light blue messaline, and was escorted by Benjamin Ellensohn of Springfield. Miss Bessie Gold wore white chiffon and was escorted by Herman Bernson of Springfield. The bride's gown was white charmeuse over satin and she wore a veil. The ceremony was performed by Rabbi S. Pessin of Springfield. Guests were present from Philadelphia, New York city, Springfield, Northampton and Worcester.

Connor—Gould.

A pretty wedding took place in St. Thomas' church Tuesday morning at 8 o'clock, when Anna Louise, daughter of Daniel Connor of South Main street, became the bride of Ezra P. Gould of Monson. The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. H. Hart. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Nellie Connor, and Frank R. Foley of Monson was best man. The bride wore a blue traveling suit with a white picture hat and carried a shower bouquet of white chrysanthemums. The bridesmaid wore a blue suit with hat to match and carried pink chrysanthemums. The bride's gift to the bridesmaid was a gold bracelet and the groom's gift to the best man was gold cuff links. Mr. and Mrs. Gould received many useful gifts, including furniture, china, silver and cut glass. The couple left immediately after the ceremony for a trip through the eastern part of the state. On their return they will reside on Main street in Monson.

Death of an Old Resident.

Rev. Dr. John A. McElwain, a former resident of Thorndike, died at his home in Brookline Wednesday of heart disease at the age of 74 years. At the time of his death he was pastor-evangelist of the Clarendon Street Baptist church, previous to which he was with the church 24 years as pastor's assistant. He is survived by one son and two daughters.

Increase in School Census.

The census of the school children of the town has been completed, and the result is a material increase over last last year. There are now, between the ages of 5 and 15, 847 boys and 825 girls, a total of 1672; between 7 and 14 there are 690 boys and 642 girls, a total of 1332. Last year the totals were 1533 and 1175.

C. T. Brainerd has the contract to construct the 600 feet of sewer at Bondsville, voted at the last special town meeting, and began work yesterday morning.

It is expected that work will be commenced soon on the new bridge which the Boston and Albany is to place over Bridge street. The new structure will be of steel and concrete, and will be waterproof, a feature which will be appreciated by pedestrians making use of that street to reach the passenger station. The sidewalk leading to the subway stairs will be repaired at the same time.

BONDSVILLE.

Funeral of Mrs. E. G. Childs.

The funeral of Mrs. Aliee Hall Childs, wife of Elmer G. Childs, former agent of the Boston Duck Company, was held from the home of her brother, William Hall of 365 Wilder street, Lowell, Sunday afternoon at 2.30. A profusion of beautiful flowers showed the esteem in which Mrs. Childs was held by hosts of friends. Mrs. Childs' death occurred at her home, 896 Beacon street, Boston, at 6.30 o'clock Friday morning and was entirely unexpected, for although she had been somewhat of an invalid for several years and suffered with heart trouble, which was the cause of her death, it was thought she was as comfortable as usual. Mrs. Childs was beloved in Bondsville, where she resided with her husband and family for 16 years. She was of great assistance in church work and took an aetive interest in the social life of the village. She was a valued member of the Ladies' Aid society, of which society she served as president for several years, giving up the office only when her health made it impossible for her to serve longer. Sinee removing from this village about one and one half years ago her interest has continued with the society and she will long be remembered as an earnest Christian worker. She was a member of the Woman's Club in Palmer, being a charter member of that organization. Mrs. Childs was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Hall of Lowell. Her father died several years ago. She leaves, besides her husband, two daughters, Mrs. Louis Sird of Bondsville and Miss Grace Childs in the home. She also leaves an aged mother, Mrs. Maria Hall; a sister, Mrs. Gertrude Pease, and a brother, William Hall, all of Lowell, and another brother, Walter Hall, agent of the West Warren Mills. She also leaves four grandchildren.

Old Egyptian Wall Painting.

Probably the earliest wall paintings are the ancient Egyptian. hey employed a distemper conta....ng disolved gum, and their principal pigments were white chalk, a vegetable yellow, ochres. Ethiopian cinnabar, blue powdered glass stained with copper and charcoal black. Their drawling was technically skilful, and, as is the case with the modern decorator, their coloring was purely decorative and their designs fanciful and extravagant.

AUTOGRAPH TELLS A TALE

Character of the Kaiser Revealed to Expert by Close Analysis of His Signature.

There is always a certain amount of interest attached to the deductions drawn by graphologists from the signatures of eminent men. Here, for example, is an illuminating description of the kaiser's autograph, supplied by an eminent Berlin graphologist:

"To begin with, there is a crochet, a sign of pertinacity, followed by a vertical dash, showing audacity, energy, regardless of any obstacle. Then there is an acute angle, a sign of firmness and aggressiveness. The first stroke of the 'W' indicates a feeling of superiority over the rest of the universe. The termination of the imperial 'W' suggests that the sovereign sometimes finds himself struggling with the multitude of his thoughts, or the power of his instincts.

"The other letters forming the signature show similar characteristics," the graphologist proceeds. "The final 'm' is indicative of great diplomacy, which to the analyist suggests subtlety. The letter also suggests the impossibility of the suppression of the 'ego.' The flourish which terminates the imperial autograph shows a suppleness of spirit, a desire to be loved, also self-esteem.

"The two terminating points indicate defiance and generally the characteristics are those of an extraordinary imagination."

TACT BETTER THAN COMMAND

Good Idea to Let "Less Criticism and More Comradeship" Be Your Guiding Motto.

"Less criticism and more comradeship," would be a helpful maxim for all homes.

It is easy enough to be pleasant to the casual acquaintance, but the great difficulty lies in being decent to those who are devoted to us—to those who are ever willing to forgive our shortcomings. There is no duty above treating your friends courteously and trying to illuminate the general monotony of the lives of those you love.

In home life tact will succeed often where command will fail. Suggestions will go farther than argument. Direction is so much better than dictation. Criticism of loved ones is a vice that takes possession of one like a stimulant, or a drug, once it is encouraged. It may begin in our so-called high moral standard and hatred of sin. But once it becomes a habit, it is indulged in for the satisfaction it gives.

An Eden can be ruined by constant fault-finding, selfishness, and withholding the words of praise. A paradise can be created by small kindnesses and by thinking sweet and helpful thoughts of those about you.

The next time you feel like criticising a loved one, force yourself to say something complimentary to him instead.

Try it and see if you won't be happier.

Source of the Brahmaputra.

For 40 years the birthplace of the great Brahmaputra river of India was thought to be among the high valleys of the eastern Himalayas or on the Plateau of Tibet north of those mountains. The theory could not be proved, for hostile Abors in the Himalayan valleys killed the explorers or barred their way when they sought to solve the mystery.

It was believed 20 years ago that the Sangpo river, flowing far eastward through southern Tibet, was the upper part of the Brahmaputra. Marked logs set afloat in the Sangpo were watched for in the Brahmaputra, but were never found. At last, however, the explorers sent out with the troops who have punished the Abhors for their massacre of Williamson and his 200 carriers have shown that the two rivers are identical. The Brahmaputra rises far west near the headwaters of the Indus, among the mountains bordering southern Tibet.

STEADFAST CONFIDENCE

The Following Statement Should Form Conclusive Proof of Merit to Every Journal Reader.

Could stronger proof of the merit of any remedy be desired than the statements of grateful endorsers who say their confidence has been undiminished by lapse of time? These are the kind of statements that are appearing constantly in your local papers for Doan's Kidney Pills. They are twice-told and confirmed with new enthusiasm. Can any reader doubt the following? It's from a resident of this locality.

Mrs. G. H. Taylor 23 C. Church St., Thorndyke, Mass., says: "I willingly confirm all I said in praise of Doan's Kidney Pills when I publicly endorsed them some years ago. I was in misery from kidney complaint and I was unable to turn in bed without grasping something for support. I was rarely free from pain and I knew that something must be done. Being advised to try Doan's Kidney Pills I obtained a box and the first few doses had a beneficial effect. I continued taking this remedy and before long I was free from pain and enjoying good health."

Small Consolation.

In Dunoon (Scotland) the other afternoon one of the municipal employes had a free bath. He is a veteran who drives the cart for watering the roads. While filling the tank of the vehicle the long hosepipe came off the tap, with the result that the water rushed high into the air as if it were anxious to do the aeroplane act. There was no way to get the water turned off except to go straight into the middle of it. The waterman had many trials before he managed to throttle the impromptu fountain. And when he had made it tap the mat, and came out soaked to the skin, he was not cheered up by the remark of a witness of the Homeric contest, who said—"Ach, Donal, never mind: it'll no dae ye ony herm; it's saut water."

Work Stops on Southern New England Railroad.

"The New Haven will agree, if the Grand Trunk desires, that the Grand Trunk freight or passenger agents will be allowed to get business in any city or section of New England and send it over the New Haven lines to the Grand Trunk connections on the Grand Trunk rates, the New Haven to get its proportion of the rate. The New Haven will give substantially the same privileges to the Canadian Pacific, which connects with the New Haven-Boston and Maine system at Newport, Vt., or to the Canadian Northern, which connects with the New Haven-Boston and Maine system at Montreal.

"The New Haven-Boston and Maine system will give the Grand Trunk any privileges or facilities that it can ask for from White River Junction to Boston or to other points in New England that any railroad, can give to any other railroad and substantially will allow the Grand Trunk to use its tracks and facilities as if they were owned or controlled jointly by the Grand Trunk. That the New Haven-Boston and Maine system will co-operate with the Grand Trunk or any other Canadian road in obtaining business for the port of Boston, and that nothing need be lost or should be lost by the abandonment of the Grand Trunk's plan to parallel the Boston and Maine track from White River Junction to Boston, and Providence to Boston."

The Grand Trunk petitioned the Massachusetts and Rhode Island legislatures early in 1910 for a charter to construct a railway that would connect Palmer with Providence. Ample assurance of the good faith of the petitioners was given and the desired permission was granted, in spite of violent opposition on the part of the New Haven interests.

Work was begun this summer, and along the 58 miles of the route between Palmer and the Rhode Island line at Blackstone material progress has been made, although work was started a little earlier in Rhode Island.

The general contractor in Massachusetts is John Marsch, who has sublet the grading and timber bridges and masonry to various parties. Between one and two miles of grading have been completed in the town of Blackstone, to the east of Blackstone village. In the town of Douglas a mile or two of roadway is graded. In Webster a large amount of grading and timber work is under way. The same conditions exist in Dudley and West Dudley.

In Southbridge the work in progress covered some two miles through the compact part of the town, including retaining walls for station grounds, located on land adjoining the New Haven road's new passenger station. Grading was in progress at several points in Sturbridge and Brimfield.

In Palmer and West Brimfield [illegible] ly three miles of heavy grading are practically ready for the rails, and lofty concrete piers, quite notable from an engineering point of view, are completed at the site selected for two great steel viaducts, one about two miles and the other about six miles out of Palmer. Besides the abutments many of the concrete pedestals for carrying the upright members of the steel bridge are in readiness. These two bridges were to span the Boston and Albany railroad and Quaboag river, and were to be, respectively, 600 feet long and 50 feet high and 1250 feet long and 115 feet high.

More work has been done in Rhode Island, especially in the city of Providence. Bridges had been completed in some places and opened to traffic. The work of grading, excavating and concrete construction was well along in the terminal city as well as in Woonsocket and Lonsdale.

Pretty and Novel Device.

A girl who has passed part of her life in Japan invited 16 friends to dinner recently, and in the center of the table was a large bird made of forget-me-nots. That the bird covered a phonograph was not known until the finger bowl stage of the banquet. In the water were floating rose petals, and they gradually unfolded into a scroll, on which was written: "Get my secret from the bird." Curiosity was at high pitch when the young hostess turned the key and the bird softly sang "Marie and Philip want me to tell you that they are engaged and invite you all to the wedding." Congratulations then were in order, but the secret was kept so well until the bird talked that no one suspected more than a casual friendship existed between the hostess and her admirer.—New York Press

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only Constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

CONCERNING GIRLS AND GOLD BAGS

The girl who likes to talk frowned and edged away from the gold mesh bag carelessly thrown down beside her.

"Take it away," she ordered. "It's a solid one, as I can easily see, and it makes me nervous to be near it! I'm afraid of their influence! Now, I can face a German silver gold washed one without flinching; but run me up against a solid gold bag and I begin to get chills and fever. I guess it is because I am always so overpowered by the thought of several hundred dollars tied up in such a small bit of frivolity.

"Now, if I owned one—if, that is, some relative should catch me and bind and gag me and thrust a solid gold bag upon me by main force—I think I should devote the rest of my life to sheltering it and giving it the reverence which was its due. I know I should waken in the night with a shriek, thinking I had not locked it up in the jewel case that was in the secret drawer of the time-lock safe behind a padlocked closet door.. And I know that in my waking hours I should either sit upon it or wear it chained to me.

"That is why the women who actually do own solid gold bags make me so nervous. The minute you possess one it is the correct thing to act as though it were the mud under your feet or as though you were so sick of having them cluttering up your pathway that you simply couldn't stand it another minute! You can't belong to the clan at all unless you learn to scatter your bag around recklessly where people will find it and have heart disease for fear they won't get it back to you before you have called out the police reserves and set them on their trail.

"It is always the people who don't own them who do the worrying.

"Why, I once knew a man who used to run around with a girl who owned a solid gold bag, and she carried it upon every occasion, of course. She used to drop it between seats at the theater and remember she had done so when they were three-quarters of the way home.. And then the man would be obliged to spend the rest of the night chasing up janitors and box office men and routing them out of bed and groveling under parquet seats or traveling miles to the residence of the usher on that aisle and having a talk with him.

The bag always was found, of course, and the person finding it was only too tickled to get rid of it and perfectly delighted to pass it over to the harassed young man. But that did not help much at 4 or 5 or 6 o'clock in the morning, when he was due at the office again at 8. If this particular girl did not drop it at the theater she would leave it on the table at the cafe, and then, when she telephoned this unfortunate young man at 3 a. m. that she had just remembered doing so and would he very much mind seeing about it, he knew he was in for a near-riot with all the waiters at that restaurant and that he would never dare face the haughty head waiter in that particular place again, even if all the other restaurants burned up and he had to starve to death. Really, by the end of the winter he was the most popularly hated young man in town at restaurants and box offices.

"Once she lost it on the suburban train, discovering the fact when they arose to leave. She said, of course, he could easily find it. Shoving her into her front door the young man tore back to the station and caught the same train on its return trip to town and tackled the conductor, pop-eyed with anxiety and responsibility and hopelessness. 'Gold bag?' repeated the conductor casually. 'Sure—here it is! I picked it up right after you left!'

"But the unlooked-for luck was too much of a shock for the young man and he gurgled and fell all in a heap. When he had quite recovered from his illness he went away quickly and married a girl who had never in her life owned anything more elaborate than a $3.98 bargain mesh bag that looked its price.

"There was another woman with a solid gold bag who spent her summer at the lake last year and who used to leave the bag on logs in the woods or on steps when she went calling on the cottagers. The children, finding it on the steps, would gleefully bury it in their sand forts and forget all about what they had done, and then for hours all the resorters and inn servants would madly search for that bag.

"When they had uprootetd all the shrubbery and devastated their homes and politely accused everybody else, and when nearly all the maids and nurses had burst into tears and thrown up their positions, somebody would accidentally kick over the sand fort and fall upon the bag with a yelp of joy. Then every one would mop her or his fevered brow and call for lemonade and fans and talk about how they hated that woman. She actually seemed to enjoy the commotion she caused every day or so and when she left they gave her a big party, they were so glad to be rid of her!

"Must you go?" ended the girl who loves to talk. "If so, would you mind taking along this gold bag I see you are leaving behind? I presume you forgot it!"

"Dear me!" said the bag's owner. "I believe I did forget it! Isn't that funny!"—Grit.

To Fatten Cattle.

Good blue grass pasture with plenty of shade and supplied with an abundance of pure water is almost an ideal kind of a place to fatten cattle in summer, especially if the corn supply is ample.

The price of lobsters has gone up, but this is no excuse for being one.

Sick Women

When shown positive and reliable proof that a certain remedy had cured many cases of female ills, wouldn't any sensible woman conclude that the same remedy would also benefit her if suffering with the same trouble?

Here are five letters from southern women which prove the efficiency of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

LETTER FROM VIRGINIA.

Elliston, Va.—"I feel it my duty to express my thanks to you and your great medicine. I was a sufferer from female troubles and had been confined in bed over one third of my time for ten months. I could not do my housework and had fainting spells so that my husband could not leave me alone for five minutes at a time.

"Now I owe my health to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Blood Purifier. Whenever I see a suffering woman I want to tell her what these medicines have done for me and I will always speak a good word for them."—Mrs. Robert Blankenship, Elliston, Montgomery Co., Va.

LETTER FROM LOUISIANA.

New Orleans, La.—"I was passing through the Change of Life and before I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was troubled with hot flashes, weak and dizzy feelings, backache and irregularities. I would get up in the morning feeling tired out and not fit to do anything.

"Since I have been taking your Compound and Blood Purifier I feel all right. Your medicines are worth their weight in gold."—Mrs. Gaston Blondeau, 1541 Polymnia St., New Orleans, La.

LETTER FROM FLORIDA.

Wauchula, Fla.—"Some time ago I wrote to you giving you my symptoms, headache, backache, bearing-down, and discomfort in walking, caused by female troubles.

"I got two bottles of Lydia E Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and a package of Sanative Wash and that was all I used to make me a well woman.

"I am satisfied that if I had done like a good many women, and had not taken your remedies, I would have been a great sufferer. But I started in time with the right medicine and got well. It did not cost very much either. I feel that you are a friend to all women and I would rather use your remedies than have a doctor."—Mrs. Mattie Hodnot, Box 406, Wauchula, Florida.

LETTER FROM WEST VIRGINIA.

Martinsburg, W. Va.—"I am glad to say that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done wonders for my mother, daughter and myself.

"I have told dozens of people about it and my daughter says that when she hears a girl complaining with cramps, she tells her to take your Compound."—Mrs. Mary A. Hockenberry, 712 N. 3rd St., Martinsburg, W. Va.

ANOTHER LETTER FROM VIRGINIA.

Newport News, Va.—"About five years ago I was troubled with such pains and bloating every month that I would have to go to bed.

"A friend told me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I soon found relief. The medicine strengthened me in every way and my doctor approved of my taking it.

"I will be glad if my testimony will help some one who is suffering from female weakness."—Mrs. W. J. Blayton, 1029 Hampton Ave., Newport News, Va.

WEST WARREN STRIKE.

About 500 Employes of Warren Mills Go Out.

DISCHARGE OF OVERSEER DEMANDED.

Demand Refused, and Employes Quit Yesterday. No Material Change In Situation.

The unrest which has been brewing among the members of the new labor union formed last spring in West Warren broke out yesterday in a strike of a portion of the operatives of the Warren Cotton Mills of the Thorn dike company. A meeting was held Wednesday evening in Faneuf's hall and a representative of the parent organization heard the complaints; it is understood that the workers were advised not to strike, as they would not be supported.

The trouble appears to be principally in the weaving department. The operatives ask that the overseer, Daniel A. O'Leary, be removed and that all employes who have been dropped for any reason shall be taken back. They also demand that any employe who shall be absent from his work two or three weeks or a few days shall be taken back whenever he gets ready to return to work.

Walter B. Hall, the resident agent, was visited yesterday morning by a committee of four of the weavers, but after listening to their demands declined to grant them. As a consequence about 500 of the workers left the mill before noon and others from time to time through the day.

There is a report that the present union may be dissolved and a branch of the Industrial Workers of the World be started, it being understood that a representative of that organization has been working among the employes. The strike is greatly regretted by the citizens and merchants, as the company is making extensive improvements to the plant so as to materially increase the amount of business done.

The situation this morning remained about the same as yesterday, a few more neglecting to return to work today. The company is running about 50 per cent of its carding and spinning department and 20 per cent of its looms.

Purse of Gold Presented.

Street Railway Manager Remembered by Springfield Friends.

Superintendent Sidney Sayles of the Springfield and Eastern street railway, recently advanced to that position from an inspectorship in Springfield, where he has been located for a number of years, was given a farewell banquet in Springfield Wednesday evening by members of the Trolleymen's Baseball association at the American House, more than 100 attending. The feature of the program was the presentation to Mr. Sayles of a purse of $100 in gold. An entertainment was provided and a general good time was in order. A Springfield account of the affair said: "Mr. Sayles is one of the most popular trolleymen in the Springfield system. He has worked for the company more than 20 years and for a long time was one of the inspectors. In the baseball association he has always been a prominent figure."

Files Petition in Bankruptcy.

Peter A. Gaudette of Wales, hotel keeper, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with a schedule of liabilities amounting to $6871.94 and with no assets. Thomas A. Kent of Wales is the only secured creditor, holding a mortgage to cover a claim of $1000. There are nearly a score of unsecured claims, of which the most important follow: Arthur W. Holbrook of Palmer $3000, as indorser; Chapin national bank of Springfield, co-indorser with Timothy J. Hynes, $500; Springfield breweries company, $400; Thomas L. Smith $431; F. M. Smith of Boston, $500, and Thomas M. King of Wales, $200.

Monson Man Drops Dead.

Horace D. Moulton Succumbs to Heart Disease in Street Car.

Horace D. Moulton, a well-known business man and a long-time resident of Monson, died suddenly Sunday morning at 8.45 o'clock, on an electric car in the town of Webster. Mr. Moulton was on his way home after having transacted some lumber business in Stonington, Ct. He had changed cars in Webster and had to hurry for a distance of 50 yards to catch his car, and a few minutes after taking his seat he died of heart failure caused by over exertion in hurrying for the car.

When he was seen to topple over in the car the passengers were aware that his condition was serious, so the car was stopped in front of the office of Dr. George C. Littlefield, who was called by the conductor. After a brief examination the doctor realized that Mr. Moulton was dead and telephoned to the medical examiner, Dr. Cary C. Bradford, in Southbridge, and received permission to remove the body from the car to the undertaking rooms. The only means of identification found on Mr. Moulton was a receipt from a firm in Stonington, and by telephoning to that place it was learned who the unfortunate man was and where he lived. That Mr. Moulton had been troubled with indigestion and heart trouble was learned through the finding in one of his pocket of pills used for this purpose that had been purchased in Mystic, Ct.

The body was brought to Monson Monday morning, and the funeral was held from his late home Wednesday afternoon, at 2 o'clock, Rev. W. A. Kilmer of the Methodist church officiating; burial was in the No. 1 cemetery.

Mr. Moulton was 65 years of age, having been born in Townsend Dec. 28, 1850, the son of Rev. Horace D. and Julia Moulton. He completed his education at Wesleyan Academy and for several years he taught school, coming to Monson to live in 1864. He then learned the carpenter's trade and since has been a extensive dealer in lumber, and at the time of his death was owner of acres of timber and wood lots all over this section of New England. He also did farming on an extensive scale. He has served the local boards of selectmen, assessors, and school committee. On Nov. 25, 1875 he married Miss Laura Blanchard, who survives him with eight children, William and Walter H. of Chicago, Helen of New York city, Mrs. Howard P. Barber of Springfield, Ralph R., Marion R., Carl F. and Blanche of Monson; also one sister Mrs. William M. Clark of Ansonia, Ct.

Milk by Trolley Express.

Gilbertville and Hardwick Farmers Want to Ship This Way.

Milk producers of Hardwick and Gilbertville are endeavoring to make arrangements whereby they may ship their milk to Springfield by the electric express company and the Springfield and Eastern Street railway. They are now sending milk — about 175 cans daily — by way of the Ware River railroad with trans-shipment at Palmer and connections have not always been good. The difficulty of shipping by the electric road has been that there is no connection between the tracks of the Ware and Brookfield and the Springfield and Eastern lines at Ware. It is understood however that negotiations are under way whereby a connection is likely to be made, allowing through transportation. Another feature which appeals to the farmers of this section is that the rates by trolley express are about half those by the steam road.

WARE.

Death of Mrs. Catherine Curley.

Mrs. Catherine Curley, 88, died Saturday night at the home of her daughter, John J. Kidgell, on Pleasant street after a long illness of heart trouble and paralysis. Mrs. Curley was born in Ireland, coming to this country when a young girl. She lived in New London, Ct., until a few years ago, when she came to Ware. She leaves two daughters, Mrs. Kidgell and Sister Mary Anthony, a nun in New Orleans. The funeral was held Monday morning at 7.30, with services in All Saints' church and burial was in New London, Ct.

Death of Mrs. Mary B. Kennedy.

Mrs. Mary B. Kennedy, 83, died Saturday night at her home on Pleasant street after a two weeks' illness of heart trouble. She was born in Ireland and came to Ware when 10 years old. She leaves three sons, John and James of New Haven, Ct., and William of Salem, and one daughter, Mrs. William H. Hawkins of Utica, N. Y.

SOUTHERN NEW ENGLAND.

The Situation as it Appears at Present Time.

PROVIDENCE LINE LIKELY TO COME.

Traffic Agreement Made. Federal Government to Hold Up Probe For A Time.

The temper of the inhabitants of Southern New England having in a measure subsided and their attention having been in part diverted to other channels, it is well to look over the ground with reference to the status of the abandonment of the Southern New England railroad proposition by the Grand Trunk and the reported traffic deal between the latter and the New Haven system.

President Chamberlain of the Grand Trunk and President Mellen of the New Haven lines got to charging each other with apparent untruthfulness the latter part of last week, and there were rumors of various sorts, with denials of everything which had any semblance of official statement. Now that things have settled down a bit it seems pretty certain that there was an understanding between the roads before the construction work was stopped on the Palmer-Providence line. Of course, as Mr. Mellen says, "the orders came from the board of directors of the Grand Trunk in London" and Mr. Chamberlain should not be blamed. What the public in this section would like to know is what changed the minds of the directors, and they haven't the slightest suspicion that it was the stringency of the money market. That all new work except the Palmer-Providence line is to be abandoned there is not the slightest doubt. That the Providence extension is likely to be built ultimately is also believed, with some reason.

Announcement is made that a 25-year's traffic agreement has been consummated between the Grand Trunk and the New Haven lines, and that it has been sent to London for ratification.

It is also stated that there is every likelihood of the Department of Justice at Washington taking some action under the Sherman anti-trust law toward an investigation of the reported deal and the stoppage work on the Providence extension, which is looked upon as a natural result of such a deal. Yesterday it was announced that active work in the matter would be delayed until later, as both roads had agreed to give the Federal government access to all the papers in the possession of the roads bearing the case.

Probate Court Business.

A decree was granted in the probate court in Springfield Wednesday in the estate of Frank F. Marcy, late of Palmer, allowing an extension of time for the payment of the inheritance tax. The petition for the extension was made by Clara Marcy and Thomas W. Kenefick of Palmer, executors named in the will. The time for the payment of the tax would have expired November 15, without the extension, which was asked because the value of the estate could not be determined until Mr. Marcy's share in the lumber business, in which he was engaged with H. P. Marcy, and in the firm of Marcy & Gardner, were determined. A suit in equity is now pending to determine the value of the estate's interest in the Marcy & Gardner firm.

Other local business was transacted as follows:

Administrations granted in the estates of—Meriva L. Capen, late of Palmer, Edward T. Broadhurst administrator; Louise B. Warren, late of Hampden, Springfield safe deposit and trust company administrator; Horace D. Moulton, late of Monson, Laura M. Moulton administratrix; Louis Wood, late of Ludlow, Edmund L. Wood administrator.

Will proved in the estate of George M. Atkins, late of Palmer; Margaret J. Atkins executrix.

Accounts allowed in the estates of—Isaac F. Gerald, late of Palmer, Clara Newport, late of Brimfield; Catherine C. Moriarty, late of Palmer.

Sale of real estate allowed in the estate of Emma L. Feeney, late of Palmer.

Gets West Springfield Franchise.

The selectmen of West Springfield have granted a franchise to the Warren Power company to do business in that town. This is the same company which was last week granted a franchise in Palmer. The West Springfield grant carries with it a requirement that a bond of $100,000 be furnished and that power be on sale in that place in nine months.

GOLDEN WEDDINGS.

Two Couples Celebrate 50 Years Of Married Life.

ONE IN PALMER, ONE IN BRIMFIELD.

Mr. and Mrs. G. M. Hitchcock This Week. Mr. and Mrs. Sumner Blodgett Next.

Mr. and Mrs. Sumner R. Blodgett will observe their golden wedding anniversary at their home on Dewey Hill next Tuesday, but on account of the long illness of Mrs. Blodgett there will be no gathering and the day will be passed quietly.

Mr. Blodgett is the oldest son of Rufus L. and Almina Bradway Blodgett. He was born in Monson September 25th, 1841. Mrs. Blodgett is the daughter of Carlton and Susan N. Dorman Squires. She was born in Monson July 15, 1844. They were married in Brimfield Nov. 26, 1862, by Rev. Charles M. Hyde, pastor of the Congregational church.

Mr. Blodgett has been engaged in several kinds of business, starting as a farmer and working with his father at odd jobs in masonry. This he continued for several years, finally selling his farm and moving into the village. Later he removed to Palmer, where he and Mrs. Blodgett were employed in the hat shop of R. L. Goddard, remaining there until it was closed. He has been a resident of Palmer for 35 years. One son was born to the couple, dying when nine years of age.

In 1884 Mr. Blodgett started in business as a florist on a small scale, and was very successful, the business increasing extensively. He remained in this for 15 years, but in 1899 the largest part of the greenhouse, together with the barn, and its contents were destroyed by fire. Mr. Blodgett did not rebuild the greenhouse, but took a position as superintendent of the state highways in Monson, Brimfield, Palmer and Wilbraham. After ten years' service in this connection he retired from active business and is now enjoying a well-earned rest.

Mr. and Mrs. George Hitchcock of Brimfield passed the 50th anniversary of their marriage Tuesday. Their observance of the occasion was in the nature of a wedding journey. They have visited this week at the home of their daughter, Mrs. Francis B. Boardman, in Waterbury, Ct., whence they went on their anniversary day to visit their grandson, Allan Boardman, at Yale college. The day was also the 75th birthday of Mr. Hitchcock, who is one of the most active citizens of Brimfield. For many years he has been the town sexton and was long a leading singer and choir master. He has been a member of the board of trustees of Hitchcock academy for 30 years and has served as clerk of the board for 21 years. He was one of the first pupils who attended the academy upon the opening of the institution. The teachers of the academy presented flowers to Mr. and Mrs. Hitchcock in honor of the event.

Woman Found Dead in Bed.

Formerly of Palmer, Miss Elizabeth Corcoran, and Well Known.

Mrs. Elizabeth Kelly, 34, who before her marriage was Miss Elizabeth Corcoran and well known in Palmer, where she was a telegraph operator for a considerable time, was found dead in bed at the home of her mother in Pittsfield early Saturday morning; the medical examiner gave heart failure as the cause of death. Mrs. Kelly had suffered severely with rheumatism, and for the past few weeks had been at the home of her mother. She was born in Great Barrington, and after attending the public schools learned telegraphy, becoming an expert operator. She had been employed in numerous places in this section, and a few years ago had a responsible position in Boston. She married, about three years ago, Joseph L. Kelly of Pittsfield.

Because of the unrequited love of Mrs. Kelly, who was then Elizabeth Corcoran, Gamaliel Bradford Jr., member of a well-known eastern Massachusetts family, committed suicide in Boston about three years ago. Mrs. Kelly was working in Boston at that time. She was engaged to Mr. Kelly when young Bradford persisted in his attentions, and after her friends speaking to him of her position he went to his room in a hotel and shot himself. Miss Corcoran and Mr. Kelly were married in Great Barrington September 21, 1910, and went to Pittsfield to live. Mr. Kelly was employed there for some time as telegrapher in a brokerage office.

State Highway Traffic.

Shows That Autos Comprise Three-fifths Of Travel Over Roads.

The state highway commission has recently finished a census of the state traffic over the state highways, the figures being taken at 158 different points in all parts of the state, exclusive of Boston, where a special tally was kept. The figures show that for the entire state there was a daily average of 7954 single horse light vehicles and 7638 single horse heavies. There were 598 light vehicles for two or more horses, and 4530 heavy ones. There were 5083 runabouts, 22,285 touring cars and wagons, and 1836 trucks or omnibuses. There was a total of 8552 light vehicles, 12,168 heavies, or 20,720 horse-drawn in all, and 29,204 of different kinds of automobiles, making a total of 49,924 vehicles of all kinds as the daily average for the 158 stations. The percentage of light horse-drawn was 17, of heavy-horse drawn 24, or 41 per cent of horse-drawn in all, against 59 per cent for all kinds of automobiles, or, broadly, three-fifths of the number of teams are automobiles of some kind, while only two-fifths are horse-drawn.

One of the stations was near North Wilbraham, and there the record was: Single horse light, average per day for each of the six days, 15; horse-drawn heavy, 24; two-horse light, one; two-heavy, eight; runabouts, 62; touring cars, 293; trucks, 12; total horse-drawn light, 16; total horse-drawn heavy, 32; total horse-drawn, 48; total of all kinds of automobiles, 367; total of all kinds of vehicles, 415; per cent of light horse-drawn, 4; per cent of heavy horse-drawn, 8; per cent of all kinds of horse-drawn, 12; per cent of all kinds of automobiles, 88. This is one of the heaviest percentages of automobile traffic in all the state.

The Brimfield station daily record, taken near the Cooley Crossing, was: Single horse light, 19; single horse heavy, five; two-horse light, two; two-horse heavy, nine; runabouts, six; touring cars, 31; trucks, one: total horse-drawn light, 21; total horse-drawn heavy, 14; total horse-drawn, 35; total of all kinds of automobiles, 38; total of all kinds of vehicles, 73; per cent of horse-drawn light, 29; per cent of horse-drawn heavy, 19; total per cent of horse-drawn, 48; total per cent of automobiles, 52.

The Ware record, taken at the end of the state road built two years ago, was: Single horse light, 23; single horse heavy, 17; two-horse light, one; two-horse heavy, eight; runabouts, seven; touring cars, 43; trucks, one; total horse-drawn light, 24; total horse-drawn heavy, 25; total horse-drawn, 49; total of all kinds of automobiles, 51; total vehicles of all kinds, 100; per cent of horse-drawn light, 24; per cent of horse-drawn heavy, 25; total per cent of horse-drawn, 49; total per cent of automobiles, 51. Thus this station does not come up to the average of the use of the automobile.

DEER HUNTING SEASON.

Legions of Hunters in Woods All This Week.

GAME IS SCARCER THAN LAST YEAR.

But About 60 Have Been Reported Hereabouts; Many Others Shot And Taken Away.

The deer hunters in this vicinity began the season early Monday morning, and have had no cause to complain of their lack of success. Up to noon to-day about 50 deer have been reported as taken in Palmer, Monson, Wales, Brimfield and Warren.

The most enthusiastic of the hunters started long before daylight Monday—in fact, some of them were on the ground the night before so as to be sure and be ready by sunrise, the time when they are permitted to shoot. In addition to the local hunters, there were almost countless numbers from out of town, some coming from as far as Boston. The covers in this section have sheltered a goodly number of the animals, and Palmer's reputation as a good hunting place seems to have traveled far and wide. The best hunting grounds — or the places where the best luck has prevailed — have been Baptist Hill in Palmer, the King brook section near West Brimfield, the vicinity of Lake Florence in Monson, and near Foskett's Mills between Brimfield and Monson. In the vicinity of the Hampden railroad line in the west part of Palmer the animals seem to have been driven away by the continued blasting.

The following kills have been reported to Game Warden John F. Luman of Palmer: Palmer — Bucks, Jesse Trumble, who scored the biggest animal of the list, one weighing 300 pounds, Joseph Mongeau, Charles Billings, Gardner Randlett, Harry Smart, C. D. Smith, Joseph Brouthers, Perlin Bacon; doe, Charles Grimstone. Monson — Bucks, Omer Bradway, A. M. Walker, George Holdridge, Daniel Moriarty, Herbert Blodgett; doe, Alvin Stanton. Wales — Buck, Mr. Gale; doe, Ernest Needham, Charles Gale. Brimfield — Buck, Robert Sherman, Elmer Bradway, Patrick McIntyre, Leris Guernon. Warren — Buck, Joseph St. George, Alexander Gendron, Timothy Lyons, Charles E. Wilson, George R. Coster, Harold Davis, Roy Johnson, Chester P. McAdam; doe, W. C. Hoyle, Roy Reim, Fred Legault, Robert Hyde, Herbert Healy. A few additional animals were reported shot yesterday, bringing the number up to 53. The prize deer of this entire section is reported to have been killed in Brimfield yesterday by Frank Stone of Springfield, a buck weighing 455 pounds.

In addition to the above a large number of deer have been killed in this section of which report has been made elsewhere, the animals having been taken away by automobile, train and team.

A number of amusing incidents are reported in connection with the week's hunting. A Brimfield man is said to have come upon a herd of six fine deer and fired at one; all ran away, and the hunter was so excited that he ran after them calling, "Wait a minute; wait a minute!" It is not recorded that they accommodated him. In Monson a young lad shot a deer and being anxious to comply with all requirements of the law as to notifying the game warden, left the carcass while he went to telephone his good luck. Returning in a few moments he found four Springfield men taking the animal away; they claimed that they had shot it and knew nothing about any other animal. Another youngster is reported to have knocked down a deer, and while waiting for its struggles to cease a grown man approached, sized up the situation and shot the deer's ear off, then claimed the game; as he was larger than the lad he had his way. Two Palmer men had hard luck near North Wilbraham early Monday morning. They had badly wounded a deer, the charge going through the neck and leaving the animal with just strength enough to get across the river. Before they could reach it however a party of Springfield men claimed it and refused to give it up. D. V. Fogarty of Three Rivers is reported to have in his possession the tail of a deer which he shot off in an attempt to get the entire animal.

Comment has been freely made this week of the unusually heavy blasting Sunday on the Hampden railroad. There were several blasts during the day, those of the early morning being particularly heavy and shaking buildings in this village as never before.

TOLD IN JAPANESE ENGLISH

Comprehensive Essay on the British, as Written by Small Subject of the Mikado.

There is a large missionary school in Tokio, Japan, where the teaching is in English. One of the pupils recently wrote a composition on "England," and we append some choice extracts:

"The England which occupied of the largest and greatest dominion which rarely can be. The Englishman always works with a very powerful hands and the long legs, and even the eminenced mind and his chin is so strong as deserved iron. Being spread out from Europe to Australia to America his dominion is dreadfully extensive, so that his countrymen boastfully says 'the sun are never sets on our dominion.' The testimony of English say that 'he that lost the common sense, he never had any benefit, though he had gained a complete world.' The English are cunning mention to establish a great empire of the paradise. As the Englishman always confide the object of the pure and the order to be holy and they reproach him if any of them are killed to death with the contention of other men."

Not Really Naval Stores.

The terming of turpentine, tar, pitch and rosin as naval stores is a misnomer. It originated many years ago, when tar and pitch first were used to coat the bottoms of vessels to make them watertight and to cover the rigging of ships to preserve it from the action of the weather. All ships carried always a supply of tar among their stores, and hence the original of the term "naval stores." It was used only by ship builders and ship owners and others who had to do directly with shipping, and was a nautical term only. Then, when the products of the gum of the long-leaf pine came into general commercial importance, the term was accepted as a fitting one for all articles of commerce manufactured from that substance, and is maintained to this day, although the uses that created it have little to do with the interests of the trade.

CLING TO OLD DESIGNATIONS

Sporting Language That Was Used in the Middle Ages Is Still Good Form Today.

Much of the language used in various sports is our inheritance from the middle ages. Different kinds of beasts when in companies were distinguished by their own particular epithet, which was supposed to be in some manner descriptive of the habits of the animals. To use the wrong form of these words subjected the would-be sportsman to ridicule.

Many of these terms have passed away, but some of them are still retained. This list from the middle ages is still good usage today. A "pride of lions," a "lope" of leopards, a "herd" of harts and of all sorts of deer; a "bevy" of roses, a "sloth" of bears, a "singular" of boars, a "sounder" of wild swine, a "route" of wolves, a "harras" of horses, a "say" of colts, a "stud" of mares, a "pace" of asses, a "barren" of mules, a "team" of oxen, a "drove" of kine, a "flock" of sheep, a "trite" of goats, a "skulk" of foxes, a "down" of hares, a "nest" of rabbits, a "clowder" of cats, a "shrewdness" of apes and a "labor" of moles.

Also of animals when they retired to rest, a hart was said to be "harbored," a roebuck "bedded," a hare "formed," a rabbit "set." Two greyhounds were called a "brace," but two harriers were called a "couple." There was also a "mute" of hounds for a number, a "kennel" of raches, a "litter" of whelps and a "cowardice" of curs.

This kind of descriptive phraseology was not confined to birds and beasts, but was extended to the human species and the various propensities, natures and callings.

Personal Investigation.

An old woman walked into a bank in Inverness, threw down her deposit-book, and said she wished to draw all her money. Having got it, she retired to a corner of the room and counted it. She then marched up to the teller, and exclaimed: "Ay, that'll doe, ma man; jist pit it back again. I only wanted to see if it was a' richt."—Dundee News.

PATRIOTISM THAT WINS IN THE END

By BELLE K. MANIATES.

"I wonder if I am an ex-patriot" soliloquized May Hampton, as she looked up from the perusal of a letter from home, remonstrating with her for her prolonged absence.

It was two years now since she had come to this land of sunny skies to study music and Italian for six months. At the end of that time, the people with whom she had come returned home, but May had formed the acquaintance of an English family who had taken up residence in Florence, and they offered to take her in charge. Her parents reluctantly consented to a continuance of her sojourn, and she was now more loath than ever to return. The charm of sunny Italy had worked its spell, and then, too, her voice was developing so marvelously that she began to have visions of grand opera. Memories of home ties were becoming dimmed, and three months ago she had broken her engagement with Tom Rowden. She could never have done this except by letter, for there had been a fascination about Tom, and her resolutions generally weakened in his presence.

The letter twitting her of being expatriated was from her father, who so rarely wrote to her. He had launched into a eulogy over the United States, and her duty to her family.

With a sigh Kate laid down the letter and began to dress for dinner. Her friends, the Gordons, were having some repairs made to their house, and in the meantime they were all staying at a boarding place.

She was roused from her reflections of the stars and stripes by the entrance of Gwendolen Gordon.

"There is a countryman of yours below, May, who has just arrived straight from the states."

"Really?" asked May interestedly. "It's so long since I have seen anyone 'just over.'"

"You will doubtless meet him at dinner. He is tall, well-formed, good color, bright eyes, well-tubbed. Really he might almost pass for an Englishman."

And May was not yet so "expatriated" as not to experience a tinge of resentment at Gwendolen's inference that his passing for an Englishman was the highest compliment she could pay an American. The description reminded her of Tom, and memories of Tom always brought a vague discomfort. He had merely acknowledged the receipt of the ring she had returned, and had formally regretted her "change of heart." After the long, friendly letter she had written him explaining her "career" she had certainly looked for more notice than that. She had anticipated opposition, remonstrance or a beseeching letter from him, possibly a visit from him. Maybe he, too, had "changed." And there had been an unaccountable silence on the part of her family, who adored Tom. Her father, whose views on "honor" and the keeping of a promise were so implacable, had never mentioned or hinted at her action—simply indited an oration on her country.

She went down to dinner with a thrill of anticipation at the thought of meeting a "live man" again, for she had secretly disdained the Italians and the men she had met at the Gordons. She was doomed to disappointment. No stranger appeared, though she prolonged the meal as much as possible.

Later in the evening she was sitting on the balcony of her sitting room when she heard the piano below. There were a few random chords, and then there fell grandly on the air a deep baritone voice rendering the "Star Spangled Banner."

"Oh!" she cried with indrawn breath. By the thrill of ecstacy she knew she was not an alien from her native shores.

She hastened down to the salon which was crowded with American tourists drawn thence by the magic of the home song. At the end of the second verse, May was suffering all the pangs of nostalgia. There was something familiar in the voice, and she worked her way nearer the piano for a glimpse of the musician. She was a little faint when she recognized George Amsden, Tom's particular friend. The sight of him brought vivid recollections of home, home friends and Tom.

She slipped into an adjoining little room to compose and adjust her thoughts before meeting him. In vain she tried to stifle her emotions.

She crossed the room which was unoccupied, and stepped out to the balcony.

A man turned, and in the golden-rayed moonlight she saw Tom, eager and flushed.

"May;" he cried.

"Tom!" she said with a little sob, "I am homesick!"

"Your father sent me to bring you home, May. Will you go back with me?"

At the underlying tenderness in his tone, all her footlight aspirations dropped from her.

"Yes, Tom," she said meekly.

Three months later when Gwendolen Gordon read the account of May's wedding, she commented:

"How very American it was to come down the aisle to martial music!"

Elephant Most Intelligent.

The elephant is by a long shot the most intelligent animal under man. Some horses know a great deal, some dogs are exceedingly bright, but for real sound sense and all-around long-headedness the elephant heads the list. He is not only bright, he is a deep thinker and profound philosopher, and has been known to do things that apparently required nothing less than human intelligence. Read the books that have to do with animal intelligence, with the wonderful things that our dumb fellow-beings have done, and while you will find much to the credit of the dog, horse and other animals, you will be impressed with the fact that next to man, the brain-power [illegible] is the great[illegible]

Excellent Reason.

"I suppose you know why you are here?" asked the magistrate severely. "Yes, sir," answered the cheerful prisoner, "I woz brung 'ere."

Public Schools.

In antiquity the masses of the people grew up in ignorance of things literary. Public education—the education that exists for the masses of the people—began, practically, with John Calvin's rule in Geneva, from which time popular education had steadily gained ground. The free school system had its beginning in Great Britain, about the year 1780, with Robert Raikes and his Sunday school movement. It was not until 1860, however, that the free public schools began to get itself firmly rooted in the British Isles. In this country from the start the idea of universal education was championed by Jefferson and other leaders among us, and the idea has never ceased to be fundamental with us, as absolutely necessary to the prevention of the liberty on which the government is founded.

Mothers of Men.

Men are what their mothers make them.—Ralph Waldo Emerson.

FAILED TO WIN.

"Scribb told me that he once wrote a $20,000 prize story."

"And did he get the $20,000?"

"No. The girl wrote and told him she had accepted his rival."

Benefits of Royal Academy.

A membership of the Royal academy of London carries with it numerous advantages. In a word the academy is a benefit society founded on a very generous scale. The pension fund of Burlington house is a splendid one. Any Royal Academician who falls upon hard times or who is prevented by ill health from following his profession may claim a pension, and the pension sometimes runs into as much as $2,000 a year.

The Royal Academician who dies in straitened circumstances and leaves his widow and children insufficiently provided for is not thought any the less of for his ill fortune. The Royal academy shows its sympathy by generously allowing those who were dependent on him a liberal sum for their maintenance. And the wife and the children of a deceased Royal Academician receive many kindnesses and acts of charity from the hands of the living Royal Academicians, which are quite distinct from those given by this academy.—National Magazine.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only Constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

TYRANNY OF HER DAUGHTER-IN-LAW

"If you'll promise not to tell a soul, Charlotte," said Mrs. Darlington to her hostess, "I'll admit that I'm suffering from an overdose of daughter-in-law. A certain amount is a mental stimulus—too much simply stultifies.

"Frances, my son Arthur's wife, came to visit me just at the time all well regulate housekeepers think they have to go through the deadening process known as housecleaning," she went on. "Now, don't breathe it to a soul, but I never clean house. I certainly try to keep things nice and comfortable, but my natural instinct is to avoid dirt. My attitude is that if it will leave me alone I will leave it alone.

"Who minds a little dust under the beds and in the closets? I will answer my own conundrum by telling you that Frances does. She is perfectly intolerant about it. She is constantly talking about germs and microbes. Since I am confessing all my shortcomings, I will admit that I don't believe in microbes, anyway. They're far too small. Frances does, though. Oh, dear, yes, she does.

"She simply can't sit down and read happily unless the house has been thoroughly swept and garnished. I can do it without a tremor. I can leave dishes unwashed until every dish in the house has been used and not feel a qualm. Frances has the dishes rounded up and washed so quickly after they have been used that she leaves you with a defrauded feeling, as though you had been done out of part of your meal.

"The morning after she came I saw her eying the living room curtains, which I must confess were not immaculate.

"'Don't look at those curtains, Frances,' I said, in my merry, light-hearted way. 'I know they're not very clean, but I'm going to have the laundress wash and iron them Monday.'

"Frances half opened her mouth, then shut it again. I wondered at the time why she didn't say whatever it was she had on her mind, but later in the day I found out.

"'Mother,' she said, tactfully—Francis is very tactful—that afternoon when we were sitting in the living room having what I considered a cozy little chat, 'I've been wondering if it wouldn't be nicer if we should get some curtain stretchers and stretch the curtains on them instead of having the laundress wash and iron them.'

"To make a long story short, she dragged me downtown that very afternoon and we bought curtain stretchers. The next morning, with her own hands, she washed those curtains, Oh, there is no doubt that she is wonderful. I stand in the greatest awe of any one who can wash things clean. I never could. They're always much worse when I finish with them than when I began.

"After the curtains were arranged to suit her I happened to mention that I had some material which I intended to make into comforters when the spirit moved me. Again speaking metaphorically, she fell upon that material tooth and nail. Then for days she and I struggled and perspired amid billows of cotton.

"When one morning she accidentally opened the door of the chamber of horrors I thought she was going to faint. The chamber of horrors, by the way, is the room into which it is the time honored custom of the family to pitch everything that the family wishes to rid itself of. Personally, I get along very nicely by simply shutting my eyes, opening the door slightly and shying in the article. Then after the door is shut I have no further qualms. But Frances got quite white when she looked in. She made me feel—she did it tactfully—that no decent, self-respecting woman could exist in a house with a chamber of horrors. So together we pulled and hauled and worked and suffered and threw things away and had a perfectly horrible time generally, but we finely emerged in that pathetic and despicable condition called "as neat as a pin.'

"It took us days to do it and we were both nearly dead when we got through. But the very next morning after we finished, if you can believe me, I found her with her head out of the window and the air of a hound that is just getting the scent. She was listening to a vacuum cleaner that was chugging across the street!

"'Oh, mother,' she said, 'I'm going out to see if those men can't come tomorrow.'

"Frances,' I said, 'you will do nothing of the kind. I positively refuse to be any cleaner than I am. From now to the end of your visit I intend to have my kind of a good time even if there isn't a floor swept or a dish washed.'

"I did it," said Mrs. Darlington, gloatingly. "I kept Frances whirling in a perfect vortex of matinees and luncheons and afternoon teas and I had a beautiful time. But I relented the day before she went away and let her clean up the house for me.

"Frances is a dear girl," Mrs. Darlington declared finally, "but she certainly has a weird idea of having a good time!"—Chicago Daily News.

Poultry Diseases.

More diseases are contracted by poultry between June and September than during any other part of the year. In summer one is apt to become more or less careless in their attention to the fleck, and thus lose heavily. Guard against this condition by giving them a little extra care.

Time Change on B. and A.

Will Go Into Effect Sunday. Poor Accommodations Afternoons.

The winter change of time will go into effect on the Boston and Albany railroad next Sunday. The changes at Palmer are unimportant with one exception. The New York train now leaving for Springfield at 1.39 is put forward an hour to 12.39, and thereby will inconvenience a whole lot of people in Ware and the villages. They have been accustomed to come into Palmer on the electrics at 15 minutes past the hour and take the 1.39 to Springfield; under the new schedule they will miss this train unless they arrive at 12.15, which is impossible on Saturdays, at any rate, and there is no other Springfield train until 3.49. The steam road gets an average of 25 passengers a day on this train now, with a much larger number Saturdays. There is likely to be an emphatic protest on this change.

The Palmer changes are: Going west,—the 7.11 a. m. train is changed to 7.10; the 1.39 p. m express to 12.39; in the evening the 6.58 is changed to 6.54; the early morning train leaves at 1.46 a. m. instead of 1.41. Going east—the 10.52 a. m. express is changed to 10.53; the 1.08 p. m. is changed to 1.09 and the 3.37 to 3.36, the 6.20 express being set forward to 6.05.

To Start Water Wheel Next Week.

The work of reconstruction at the power plant of the Central Massachusetts Electric company has so far progressed that it is expected one of the new water wheels will be started next Tuesday. This will give ample power and the company expects to be able to give an entirely satisfactory service in a very short time. The two other water wheels are expected to be in use in the near future.

Union Thanksgiving Services.

A union service will be held next Sunday evening in the Baptist church, and will take the place of the usual Tanksgiving service. The sermon will be by Rev. F. S. Brewer of the Congregational church, subject, "Religious uses of memory." The Baptist choir will furnish music. All are invited.

Who Owns the Dog?

Boston and Albany Baggage Room Has a Spare One on Hand.

Baggage Master Charles G. Thomas at the Boston and Albany passenger station has a fine Shepherd dog which he would like to find an owner for. The animal was checked from Hartford to Palmer on October 10,—six weeks ago yesterday,—and reached its destination at 3.36 in the afternoon. No one appeared to claim the dog that day and it was fed and cared for. And this has been the daily routine ever since, for the owner of the dog has not yet appeared to claim it. In the meantime storage charges and board bill are running up, and if the owner ever shows up he will have to think a lot of the animal if he digs up the price to regain possession of it.

R. B. Francis is to move next week into his new house on Pine street.

Miss Rose Duffy of South Main street was the guest of friends in Holyoke over Sunday.

Mrs. Joseph Irwin and son of Ardmore, Pa., are guests of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Buck of North Main street.

Miss Alta Burgess of the Wesson hospital, Springfield, attended the second wedding anniversary celebration of her sister, Mrs. F. G. Lindstrom, Tuesday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis Jones of Park street were out of town yesterday for the purpose of overseeing the removal of the remains of her father, sister and nephew from the Prescott cemetery to Greenwich, where her mother is buried.

An effort is being made to organize a basketball team in town, players in the vicinity of the carpet mill having taken the matter up. The great difficulty is to secure a place in which to practice. There is said to be plenty of good players from which a strong team might be selected.

The Men's League of the Congregational church will hold a Big Brothers meeting to-night, to which every man is invited; all who attend are asked to bring some boy with them. The principal address will be by E. H. Kessler, of the Holyoke Y. M. C. A., and it is expected that there will be other speakers as well.

The subject of the address which Rev. Wilbur F. Crafts is to give in the opera house next Friday evening has been changed to "Battles won and battles on in Congress." It will be a social service address and will treat especially of reforms now pending before Congress. The time is 8 o'clock in the evening and the address is free, everybody being invited.

Rev. Willis A. Moore of Meriden, Ct., formerly pastor of St. Paul's Universalist church in Palmer, has accepted a call to a large church in Detroit, Mich., and will leave for his new field of labor January 1. He succeeds Dr. Lee S. McCollister, who has been made dean of Tufts divinity school. Mr. Moore has very many warm friends in Palmer who will be glad to learn of his advancement.

"GALLERY GOD" SPOILED IT

Why Maurice Barrymore Conceived Dislike for His "Heart of Maryland" Part.

All the good stories which the late Maurice Barrymore, father of Ethel, Lionel and John Barrymore, told on himself never have been published and probably never will be. Barrymore was in Kansas City just prior to his final collapse and here is a story he told:

Barrymore was Mrs. Leslie Carter's leading support when that celebrated actress appeared in Belasco's production of "The Heart of Maryland." In the big third act Barrymore, the hero, was in the hands of the designing villain, who had caught him off guard. Two rookies bound Barrymore's hands and the villain, left alone with his prey, taunted the hero. It was Barrymore's "business" to squirm and to wail.

"Oh, if my hands were free," he would repeat several times, as he tried vainly to break the rope which held him fast. The villain would approach and snap his fingers right under Barrymore's nose.

"Loosen my hands, you devil!" Barrymore would exclaim.

One night at this great and exciting moment in the scene Barrymore had just finished his dare to the villain to loosen his hands when the traditional gallery god yelled out in sharp, clear voice:

"Why don't you kick him in the shins, Barry; your feet ain't tied."

Barrymore cursed the part from that moment until his dying day.

Writing Pad.

A compact traveling case is a book-shaped writing pad which folds over flatly, and when opened reveals compartments for all the correspondence necessities, as well as a calendar and narrow slides holding memorandum slips. One of these fits nicely into a handbag.

UNKIND.

Had One Resemblance.

One night, in a Texas town, John McCullough's company was playing "Ingomar," and young Sothern was to be the leader of the barbarian army. During the day he and his companions-in-arms ransacked the town for fur coverings in which to appear on the stage. They secured some skins which had been imperfectly cured. In the scene where the barbarians rushed on McCullough the tragedian stood aghast and almost forgot his lines. When the curtain fell he turned to the fur-covered battalion and said: "Boys, you don't look like a barbarian army, but I'm d——d if you don't s——"

SHE COULD NOT REMEMBER

Absent-Minded Woman's Peculiar Reason for Wanting to Be Rung Up on the 'Phone.

Absent-minded persons sorely try the patience of girls in the New Rochelle telephone office. Not long ago a woman confessed herself subject to extreme forgetfulness and requested the day operator on her exchange to ring her up every morning at 9 o'clock. A week later she said:

"Central, what was it I wanted you to call me for at 9 o'clock?"

"I don't know," said the girl. "You didn't tell me. You just asked me to call at 9 o'clock."

"Too bad," said the woman. "I know there was something I wanted to do every morning at 9 o'clock, but I can't for the life of me think what it was."

The 9 o'clock calls continued, however, and several days later the woman took central into her confidence again.

"I have found out why I wanted to be called," she said. "A friend had given me a canary and I wanted to make sure of remembering to feed it. The poor little thing is nearly starved. Hereafter when you ring won't you just say, 'Feed the bird,' and I'll go straight and do it?"

Central promised, and the neglected canary is now a plump and contented bird.—New York Times.

The Otter a Wanderer.

Of all the beasts in the world, the otter, that fierce outlaw, is the greatest wanderer. It is as if he were afflicted with a curse that forbids him to be still, that forces him ever to push on—on—on! Rest, as rest, he knows not. ## JEANNETTE'S JIMMIE A "PLAIN" HUSBAND

By ELSIE GUNLER.

Jeannette, looking very mournful and wearing a long face, came and threw herself on the grass at my feet.

"What's the matter now, child?" I inquired, as I bit off the end of a thread that simply would not go through the needle's eye.

She did not answer me for a minute or two; just leaned her head against my knee and let her clasped hands fall in her lap, and then:

"Cousin Bess, do you think Jimmie is awfully plain?"

"Plain? Jimmie awfully plain? Why, what on earth do you mean?"

That time the thread did go in the eye of my needle, but I stuck both needle and thread in my work, for I knew it was useless to try to sew when Jeannette wanted to talk to me aboue Jimmie. But this was the limit. Jimmie plain!

"No, indeed, I don't think him plain. Whatever made you ask such a foolish question, child? You are not getting tired of Jimmie, I hope!"

"Tired of Jimmie—oh, Cousin Bess, you know I'm not; I love him with all my heart, and, of course, I think him handsome; but Edith Samuels said she didn't see how I ever came to marry such a plain man."

"Well, what did you tell her?"

"I didn't answer. I was too angry I just turned away from her and went over to Mrs. Simpson and helped her make tea; but I can't help wondering if all the girls think Jimmie is a 'plain' man."

"My darling little coz," and here I leaned over and kissed her shining golden hair. "You know as well as I do that Jimmie could hardly be called a beauty. His nose is too long and too large for that. His ears do stand out a trifle too much and his mouth is perhaps a bit too wide for perfect symmetry; but—well, even if he is a bit plain in looks, what does it matter? Is he not a kind husband and a good man?"

"Yes, indeed, Cousin Bess; but sometimes I wish he was better looking!"

"Now, see here, Jeannette, all women are beauty lovers and idealists. Where the eye adores the heart is very apt to follow—for a time. But when it comes to choosing a husband, a life partner, most women are wise enough to place more value on other qualities than beauty in a man, and well for them that they do. Beauty in a man, as a rule, does not make for the traits of character that insure a success of married life."

"Yes, I know. But, oh, I hate to have other people think Jimmie plain."

"Stop saying it, you foolish child. Stop thinking it, even; put it out of your hear. Your friend Miss Samuels has not been able to get a husband of her own, most likely for the reason that she says disagreeable things about other girls' husbands. Sour grapes, I call it."

"But, Cousin Bess—"

"Not a word, I will not listen to another word. It is the homely qualities hidden behind the homely features that bring happiness to the man's lucky wife. You know Jimmie tries to make you happy."

"Yes, he does. He's kind and sweet and good to me."

"Handsome features too often spoil a man, or at least the amount of feminine attention they attract does that for him. The strikingly good-looking husband is very often a failure. When he mingles with men and women, especially the women, he will nearly always put on airs, like a proud old peacock, for the benefit of strange eyes, and his poor little wife is left neglected in a corner.

"Jimmie takes the best of care of you, dear. He provides you with every comfort in life and a few of the luxuries. He is a clean-thinking, upright man; a good citizen, possessing far more than ordinary intellectual ability; gentle in manner and speech and, best of all, loving his little wife with all the great love in his manly heart. Jimmie may be 'plain' looking, but he will not remain that way, long. His good qualities will prevent that."

"Oh, Cousin Bess, I'm so glad I told you what Edith said. It has worried me. worried me. But now I see it all so differently. You always do help me, dear, no matter what my trouble is. Jimmie is not plain. His soul is positively beautiful, and I shall always see that shining through his dear eyes.

The little lady kissed me, and, with a happy laugh, ran back to her household duties, while I resumed my sewing, thinking how little physical beauty counted in this busy world.

California Woman's Good Shot.

While walking through the woods near Cohasset, Cal., Mrs. W. H. Pillsbury of Chico shot a large brown bear that measured six feet from tip to tip.

Mr. and Mrs. Pillsbury were walking from their summer home near Cohasset to the "Promontory," a high point from which an excellent view of the whole valley can be had. Mrs. Pillsbury had a 30-30 carbine. Suddenly she saw a large bear coming down the hill about forty yards away. "It's a bear, shall I shoot it?" she shouted to her hsuband. Pillsbury answered in the affirmative, and his wife asked: "Where shall I shoot him?" "In the head," came the answer. With deliberate aim the woman fired, hitting the animal square in the right eye, killing him instantly.

The hide weighed 70 pounds and the weight of the carcass was estimated at three hundred pounds.

Even conscience may be overworked.

Ministerial Economy.

Considering his meagre salary, it was a mystery to economical parishioners how the minister could afford to contribute so liberally to the church's social affairs, but another financial expert finally explained that it was a good investment.

"The money he contributes makes these entertainments so attractive," he said, "that the young people fall in love and marry, and he makes it back many times over on the wedding fees."

Doctors Use This for Eczema

Dr. Evans, Ex-Commissioner of Health, says: "There is almost no relation between skin diseases and the blood." The skin must be cured through the skin. The germs must be washed out, and so salves have long ago been found worthless. The most advanced physicians of this country are now agreed on this, and are prescribing a wash of wintergreen, thymol and other ingredients for eczema and all other skin diseases. This compound is known as D.D.D. Prescription for Eczema.

Dr. Holmes, the well known skin specialist writes: "I am convinced that the D.D.D. Prescription is as much a specific for eczema as quinine for malaria. I have been prescribing the D.D.D. remedy for years." It will take away the itch the instant you apply it.

In fact, we are so sure of what D.D.D. will do for you that we will be glad to let you have a $1 bottle on our guarantee that it will cost you nothing unless you find that it does the work.

AMERICAN SOLDIER THE BEST

World's Records for Marksmanship All His, and He Is Trained to Act on His Own Initiative.

If there is one big, distinguishing trait of the United States regular, it is individuality. In every one of the great foreign military nations, particularly Germany and Japan, batallion and company officers and enlisted men are carefully trained not to think for themselves. They are used as mere chess pieces under the guidance of a master mind. In this country, where our melting pot has yielded us an extraordinary self-reliant, cool thinking, intensive initiative product, it is only natural that our soldiers should be trained as are our civilians.

The United States army spends annually on rifle target practice five times the sum spent by any other army of an equal number of men. This applies, too, to our field and coast artillery. As a result, no better marksmen can be found than the American soldier and his cousin, the national guardsman, who is trained along the same lines. Every world's fire control and accuracy record with rifle and big gun is today held by the American soldier.

The United States army is small, in accordance with the will of the people not to support a large standing military establishment. But what we have is almost 100 per cent. efficient, the splendid nucleus of the big army of regulars, militia and volunteers which we should place in the field if occasion required. It is only in equipment — quartermaster, commissary, medicine and particularly ordnance stores—that our army is lacking.—Leslie's.

Luminous Metal Discovered.

For generations the peasants of Cornwall have handed down a legend that at night there may be seen a faintly luminous metal among the rocks brought from the mines of the county. A British scientist has proved that this story is by no means based on imagination. A specimen of the mineral autunite, which is also found in Wales, was sent to him from Portugal because of its shining character. He finds that it closely resembles artificially prepared salts of uranium, and that its luminosity is due to spontaneous radio-activity. The light it sheds is stronger than that of nitrate of uranium. Upon parting with its water of crystallization the metal loses its luminosity.

SLEDS USED IN THE YUKON

Not Constructed Along Lines of Beauty, but for Hard Work They Are Perfection.

The Yukon sled, while not a thing of beauty, is built to stand all kinds of hard wear, or, as the Irishman said, "It will last forever, and after that can be used for firewood." The sled is about eight feet long, is made of any kind of hard wood, lies close to the ground, costs from $10 to $14, and makes a trail sixteen inches in width. Another pattern is known as the basket sleigh, and it is to the Yukon sleigh what a three-masted schooner is to a coal barge. In length it is from eight to fifteen feet, is made of birch, oak or hickory, cuts a trail twenty-two inches in width, costs from $40 to $200, is raised a foot or more from the runners, and, in the best examples, is lashed together with rawhide. The basket sleigh, as its name implies, is fitted with a basket, into which the load is placed, and from the back of the basket a pair of handles project, to be used in guiding the sled on the trail. It often happens that a Yukon sled will be fitted with a home-made basket, in imitation of its more aristocratic brother. In very cold weather wooden runners are best, but in ordinary circumstances steel or brass runners are used.—Wide World Magazine.

The Dancer.

"His little slanting eyes followed the butterfly movements of Lan-Tin here and there, the free toss of her little head and the graceful abandon of her arms as she flung them over her head, and again brought them down with a sweeping bend to the very ground. Lan-Tin forgot the mandarin and all his regal magnificence. She was playing a pretty little game of make-believe. She was the wind blowing through the plum tree. Tossing and twirling, bending low as did the drooping branches, waving slowly, rushing fiercely like a tiny whirlwind. With flushed cheeks and glowing eyes she was the spirit of the wind.

"Then a funny thing happened. From outside the windows that opened on the perfumed Chinese night came the sound of loud hand-clapping and deep, strange voice shouting 'Brava!' She dropped down on a cushion, no longer a wind fairy, but a little wilted flower."—From "The Tale of Little Lan-Tin," by Flo Hingler.

ANGELA DECIDES TO CHANGE HER MIND

By MOLLY McMASTER.

"No Philip," Angelia's lips were set firmly, "I simply will not make up my mind just now to marry you. My literary path is beginning to unwind before me and I do not want it to get all tangled up with matrimonial duties."

"You have told me you love me, Angela," Philip Dorlan said gravely; "your decision hardly proves it."

Angela flushed. "I do not see why you should be so unreasonable," she said with some heat. "I only want a year or so in order to get my name firmly established and then—"

"Yes, then," broke in Phillip with more dignity than hurt, "when you have worn yourself out burning the midnight oil and indulging in all the silly Bohemian fads—you will marry me. Thanks," he said somewhat bitterly, "I do not care to have my love tossed aside like an old glove and picked up only after your evidently greater love for writing has wearied you."

Angela cast a swift glance at this new, unyielding Philip. She had never before felt his power so keenly yet she braced herself against his love.

"If you cared enough about me you would be glad that I have other interests and a talent for writing," she said half in appeal.

"Not when the interests come before me," Philip told her with his honest blue eyes fixed unrelentingly upon her. "Nor do I want my wife to indulge her temperament so far as to work herself into mild forms of hysteria through her too vivid imagination. You know, because we have spoken frequently of it, that I want you to develop the talent which you undoubtedly possess, but I certainly do not want you to ruin your nerves and those of your husband, in its pursuit."

"Very well!" Angela burst forth with her nose very high in the air, "we will take no risks with your delicate nerves. Here is your ring! I hope you will find a girl who has neither a nerve nor an ounce of temperament in her whole marble body—perhaps she can make you happy! I have decided to be happy myself!" Angela turned and went swiftly out of the room leaving a trail of delicate aroma which was all that was left to Philip Dorlan.

He went out of the house and down the steps nor did he know whether he was walking.

"Hello Phil! She has turned you down, hasn't she?" It was the charming Evelyn Marsh who had blocked his way with her melodious voice. "Poor boy—and you do love her, don't you?" Evelyn had turned and put her arm affectionately into his.

"No," said Philip contrary to his sense of honesty. "No."

Evelyn Marsh smiled and a flush rose and remained in her cheeks. She drew a trifle nearer and unconsciously Philip's footsteps were guided by the pressure of her arm.

During the following weeks, and caught on the rebound, Philip found himself constantly with Evelyn.

And Angela from her little studio at the top of the house looked down with slowly breaking heart to the captivity of Philip.

Because she had a sudden feeling of loneliness and because she had caught sight of Philip and Evelyn out there in the village street Angela called up Tom Raynor on the telephone.

"Can I change my mind about going to the dance with you tonight, Tom?" she asked when she heard Tom's voice over the telephone. "I do not deserve it but may I? You are a dear. Yes, pink—that is sweet of you. Daddy will drive us over in the car if you like. All right, by-by."

Angela rejoiced that her courage had permitted her to attend a dance at which she was sure to meet Philip and Evelyn Marsh.

She looked unusually beautiful in her delicate pink gown and with no ornament in her hair save one of the pink rosebuds that Tom had sent her.

When Philip saw her his heart gave a great bound. "May I have a dance—for old times sake?" he asked trying to hide his jealousy at sight of Tom Raynor's roses.

"Two if you like, Philip," she made answer in a voice sweet and without the strain of emotion.

When their first dance came Philip approached Angela with a slightly unsteady step. He put his arm firmly about her and when she was once more within the circle of his arm he drew a great breath of relief and contentment.

As for Angela, she only sighed softly. Because they had danced so much together they swung into perfect rhythm.

"Angela," he said suddenly. "I have come to the cross-roads. I want you to be your old sweet self to me tonight and decide something for me Will you—dear?"

Philip's eyes were shining with a love she had never seen there before.

"I have much to decide tonight Philip," she said quickly. "Some one is going to make me answer him tonight but I will be glad to help you if I can." Angela rejoiced in the quick clasp of Philip's arm as if he would hold her from any other man.

"I am either going to risk my life's happiness and propose to Evelyn or," Philip looked hungrily down at Angela, "I am going to risk another refusal from you. Which shall it be?"

"I do not think Evelyn loves you," Angela said shyly, with a deep flush glowing in her cheeks, "and I do."

It is little things that count.

UNSTUDIED EFFORTS OF ANANIAS AND SAPPHIRA

Ananias and Sapphire clumped up the back steps of the neighbor's house, whooping joyously as they clumped. Outside the screen door they paused for a friendly scuffle. The neighbor pushed the door open and they catapulted through the opening.

"Well, said the neighbor, "what do you want?"

"We want a drink. Give us a dring," they chorused.

"You do, do you?" inquired the neighbor. "What do you say when you want people to do things for you?"

The well-mannered Sapphira looked up at her with big, pleading eyes. "I say please," she cooed.

"So do I. So do I," shrieked Ananias. "Please give us a drink."

The neighbor doled out the water with a sparing hand.

"What do you have the water in a bottle for?" inquired Sapphira. "Why don't you give us the water that runs out of the spout?"

"It might make you ill," returned the neighbor. "It has microbes in it."

"Has it?" Ananias asked, eagerly. "Give me some. I just love 'em. My mother gives me lots of them. And once she gave me some water out of the spout and it had snakes in it and I drank them."

The neighbor hastily retired into the pantry.

"My mother gave me some out of the spout," said Sapphira ruminatingly when the neighbor had returned, "and it had a—it had a—potato in it. Give me some more, please," she added. "I want it full up."

"Oh, you don't want any more," the neighbor asured her. "You've had all you need. You couldn't drink any more."

"Once," said Sapphira, fixing her eyes dreamily on nothing, "I drank a whole bottle full without stopping a minute, with my eyes shut."

"I drank a whole pond full once," boasted Ananias, "with—with—my mouth shut."

After this crowning effort he went and sat down upon the fireless cooker.

"Is this a fireless cooker?" he asked.

"Yes," said the neighbor.

"We've got one at home just like it, only forty times as big. It's big enough to hold a pig. Once we cooked a cow in it."

"We cooked a nelephunt in ours," Sapphira chimed in. "A great big pink nelephunt."

"How remarkable," said the neighbor, impressed. "I don't see how you got him in."

"We just shooed him in," said Sapphira, airily. "And he was a great big nelephunt."

"We've got a great big tremendous tiger," Ananias said, briskly, "and we keep him in the dishpan and he has a green tail and a blue head and purple feet."

"Our tiger" said Sapphira, casually, "is a lion and we keep him in the flour bin, and he wears yellow trousers. Can I have a pianna?"

"A piano?" repeated the neighbor, looking puzzled. "I haven't one to give you."

"Yes, you have," insisted Sapphira. "Those yellow ones on the table."

The neighbor took up one of the bananas and looked at it. "I think it's too green for you to eat," she said.

"I love them when they're green," responded Sapphira. "Why, mother gives me six piannis every day and they're just as green as that grass out there."

"My father," said Ananias reflectively, "makes my mother eat four, six, eleven, eight piannas every day. green ones with red and white and blue spots on, and they make her awfully sick, but he makes her eat them."

The neighbor opened the screen door. "Shoo!" she said inhospitably "Run along home. You're making me lose all my moral sense."

Ananias and Sapphira tumbled out of the door as cheerfully as they had tumbled in.

"We'll come again tomorrow and get another drink," they assured the neighbor kindly as she sped the parting guests.—Chicago Daily News.

At a London Wedding.

Passing through the east end of London, a tourist observed a great crowd of costers watching a young couple entering a church, obviously with the intention of committing matrimony.

Feeling inquisitive and wondering who the couple were to command the presence of so many of their clan the countryman turned to an urchin nearby.

"Sonny," said he, "who is it being married?"

The small boy solemnly scratched his head for a full minute, as though contemplating his reply.

"Well, Gov'nor," he remarked at length, "I ain't puffectly sure, but I find it's the bloke and the gal wot's dressed up like 'am bones."—London Opinion.

His Wife Too Pretty.

A man who applied for a divorce in California told the judge that his wife was "too pretty for a poor man." She knew that she was pretty and did her best to make her clothes worthy of her beauty, which was more than her husband could afford. He modestly declared that he was earning too small a salary to satisfy her extravagances. The judge declared that he could do nothing to modify a vain woman's vanity and allowed the decree.

APPEALED TO HOTEL CLERK

Fair Guest Applied for Object Not Usually Supplied by Hostelries, but She Got It.

To be a successful hotel clerk you must have an even temper. There is no man under the sun who has so much to try his temper as a hotel clerk. The night clerk of a certain Baltimore hotel is a young man with the most polished manners. He is especially polite to the ladies, but a few evenings ago he nearly lost his equilibrium when a pretty guest asked him to loan her an alarm clock.

"I must get up very early tomorrow morning," said the fair guest; "can't you loan me an alarm clock—one that I can depend on?"

"I will have you called at any hour you wish," replied the clerk.

"That won't do. You might forget it, and besides, I have no watch, and if I wake up during the night I like to know the time."

The clerk suggested that there was a telephone in the room, but that would not do, so he called the housekeeper, who loaned the fair guest an alarm clock.

WIFE'S HEALTH RESTORED

Husband Declared Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Would Restore Her Health, And It Did.

Ashland, Ky. — "Four years ago I seemed to have everything the matter with me. I had female and kidney trouble and was so bad off I could hardly rest day or night. My husband said it would restore my health and it has."—Mrs. MAY WYATT, Ashland, Ky.

BRIMFIELD.

Death of Mrs. R. V. Sawin.

Mrs. Nettie E. Sawin, 52, wife of Dr. R. V. Sawin, died at her home last week Thursday evening. She had been in ill health a number of years, but was confined to her room only 10 days during her final illness of Bright's disease. Mrs. Sawin was Miss Nettie E. Washburn, and was born in Plympton December 6, 1860, the daughter of Oscar Ellis and Louise (Briggs) Washburn. Most of her girlhood was passed in Plymouth, whose schools she attended, including the high school. The removal of her family to Brockton when she was a young woman made that city afterwards the place of her parental home. She was married to Robert V. Sawin July 2, 1883, and came with him to Brimfield in 1886, when Dr. Sawin opened practice there. For a quarter of a century, as the wife of a physician whose practice has extended throughout the countryside, Mrs. Sawin had come into peculiarly close relations with the people of the town and section, and there are very many families that have known her quick sympathy, thoughtful remembrance and personal help. She was a woman of strong and attractive personality, possessing quick perceptions, a warm, bright, social nature and a vivacious disposition. Her leading characteristic was her interest in others and especially young people and their enjoyments. She kept up her interest in people and the affairs of th. day till the last, and had found great solace in reading, throughout the years of her failing health. Her charitable disposition was shown in word and deed, and her sympathies went out to all alike. The spirit with which she overcame the discouragement and depression attendant upon weakness and suffering for years, and her efforts to brighten the lives of those around her indicated her fortitude of character and unselfish disposition. Up to her last illness the home was a center of hospitality enjoyed by the friends of her children. About the last of her attendance upon any public occasion was her visit at Smith College during the exercises of commencement week last June, when her daughter graduated, and the association of these events brightened the last year of her life. She leaves, besides her husband, a daughter, Alice, and a son Robert; also a brother, William W. Washburn of Brockton.

The funeral was held Saturday afternoon, Rev. William Jennings officiating, assisted by Rev. F. S. Brewer of Palmer. Mrs. A. D. Norcross of Monson sang three selections. There was a large attendance from Brimfield and neighboring towns, including physicians who have been closely associated with Dr. Sawin in his profession. The Brimfield grange, of which Mrs. Sawin was a member, and which Dr. Sawin has served as master, attended in a body. The class of boys in Sunday school of which as a social organization Robert Sawin is president, and in which Mrs. Sawin was greatly interested, also attended together. The great number of floral offerings covered the casket and banked the side of the staircase in the hall where it lay. Besides tributes from friends there were flowers given by the grange, by the ladies' auxiliary of that organization, by the ladies' benevolent society, by the class of boys in the Sunday school and by the teachers and pupils of the Hitchcock free academy of which Dr. Sawin is a trustee and Miss Alice Sawin a member of the faculty. The body was taken to Worcester by special car for burial in the Sawin family lot in Hope cemetery.

Hotel Is Sold.

MILLPOND FISHERMAN'S FIRST SALT WATER BASS

Hank was from the upper middle section of the state, where the streams are small and run one way all the time. Until the day of this adventure he had never seen a bigger body of water than a millpond, nor had he ever caught a fish that was as large as his hand.

Scale fish, in Hank's native section were about as rare as gold coins on a church contribution plate. The standard fish was a little "finger" cat, black and despicable in the purview of the coast fisherman; but Hank and his friends back home thought catching them was rare sport, and that they were really "game" fish.

Hank was a fisherman at heart. When he came to the city to "take a position" in one of the stores he continually bragged about how he used to "yank 'em out," and what fine ones they were. The boys stood Hank's palaver for a time, until they got tired of it, and then they resolved to show him what real "fishing" was like. That is how it came about that a party was made up to go for channel bass off Bloody Point, with Hank as the guest of honor.

Conditions apparently favorable for bass. Wind, weather and tide were precisely right, and the bait was fine and fresh enough to tempt the appetite of a fisherman, much less a fish. But there was noting doing in the line of scale fish. Channel catfish and gaff-topsails and stingarees there were in plenty, but never the sign of a scale. In half an hour the bottom of the boat was covered with cats and stingarees. Usually these despised "critters" are killed and thrown overboard as soon as caught, but Hank, as the guest of honor, and knowing only catfish, was proud of the big gaff-topsails and wanted to count the catch.

As the other fellows were proposing to pull up the killick and go home, Robbins got a strike, and it was a heavy one. Now, Robbins is a hand-line man, and does not believe in playing his fish. He wants to see the quarry landed in the shortest possible space of time. "What's the use foolin'," says Robbins; "you come after the fish; why not get 'em and go?"

When Robbins got the strike, therefore, the line came in hand over hand, and in a jiffy a great floundering shape of silver and drab, long as a man's body, and half his legs, was pounding on the gunwale and beating the green water into a heavy shower that fell over the whole boat's crew.

Hank was electrified. With a cry like a wild Indian, he sprang from his seat upon the thwart, grabbed the big fish around the throat, lifted it inboard and went down with it among the catfish and stingarees.

The balance of the company looked on in literal fear and trembling. There were no less than forty of the sea devils of the poisonous spines in the bottom of the boat, and there was that blithering idiot from the millponds writhing and wrestling and twisting with a forty-pound sea bass right in the midst of them! It seemed inevitable that Hank must be "finned," but the more the men shouted to him the wilder Hank raved in his delirium of the kill. "He's plumb crazy," said Little Finky, the skipper.

As quickly as he could manage it without sticking Hank with the knife Robbins cut the fish's throat. In two minutes more it was still.

Then Hank got up. He was as white as a ghost. There was not the color of blood in his lips. His cheeks were like chalk, his eyes were glassy and his knees were shaking. Tottering astern, he collapsed, with head and arms over the gunway.

"I knowed it," said Little Finky; "he's got it good and hard, in a dozen places; the blamed eejit! Serves him right. What'je bring a millponner on salt water fer, anyhow?"

"Aw, cut that," growled Robbins. "Can't you see the man's in great suffering? Get the peroxide while we and the other boys strip his clothes off and find the punctures."

No sooner said than done. The strippers had got almost down to nature when Hank revived enough to say in a weak voice:

"Leave me alone, you dang fools. I ain't bit nor stung nor nothin'; just swallowed my chaw of tobacco."

And that was the size of it. The Providence that protects little children and imbeciles and drunken men had steered that "millponner" safely and unscathed through what appeared to be a hopeless array of catfish and stingaree spines while he wrestled with the big bass.

Quaint Oaths.

The first appearance in an English divorce court of the Chinese form of oath by breaking a saucer recalls other quaint forms of swearing.

In Assam the oath is taken by standing within a rope circle, to imply a wish to rot as the rope does if the swearer does not tell the truth. In lawsuits between Russians and the Ostiaks of Siberia a bear's head is brought into court, and the Ostiak, making the gesture of eating, calls on the bear to devour him if he lies.

There are tribes of India that swear by the head of a tiger, while others chop a dog in two as emblematic of the fate of the perjurer. But the simplest method is that of the Quaker, who swears not at all, but just tells what he thinks.

THIEF NOT ALTOGETHER BAD

Proved He Had at Least Some Consideration for Victim He Had Wronged.

In the mail of a local sporting goods dealer, recently, was a letter which indicated that the writer was considerate, even though he failed to back up his consideration with square dealing in its entirety, relates the Indianapolis News. The letter bore a Peoria (Ill.) postmark and read in substance as follows:

"Peoria, Ill. Gentlemen—I am inclosing you a pawn check for $4.50 on the —— loan office in your city. The check is for an Arrow bicycle, which I know you sell. It was stolen in Indianapolis. By referring to your records and comparing the number on the wheel with your books you will be able to find the owner. No doubt he will be willing to present inclosed check with $4.50 in exchange for his wheel, I am, yours truly."

The writer neglected to sign his name, but the store was able to find the owner and the wheel was redeemed.

A petition asking for the relocation of Mechanic street at the junction of High street is being circulated among the residents of that section. The boundary of the street as it is now being used is in the middle of the road. The officials are desirous of putting in concrete walk the entire length of the street, and the residents of the street disapprove of the walk being put out of line; therefore they desire that the street be relocated and that the new lines conform as nearly as possible to the road as it is now being used.

GIRLS ARE CURIOUS, SO ARE SOME BOYS

"There is some mighty cur'us girls in the world," said the young man with the celluloid collar and the ready made tie, addressing the other young men at the boarding house table.

"Is that an original discovery, or did somebody tell you?" politely inquired the young man who sells gas engines.

"Maybe he dreamed it," hazarded the young man who works in an architect's office.

"No," explained the young man with the celluloid collar, as he reached out and gathered in the last slice of bread with one of his large red hands, "there didn't nobody tell me, an' I didn't dream it. I ain't like some of these ducks you meet in a boardin' house. When I go to bed I go to bed tired enough to sleep. I leave all them dream things for some o' these ducks that don't work hard enough to git tired. What I was talkin' about was girls. An' it's just like I says—some of 'em is mighty cur'us. I found it out for myself."

"You found it out for yourself?"

"I certainly did."

"Some originality to that discovery, all right," said the young man who works in an architect's office, addressing the young man who sells gas engines. The latter nodded in hearty agreement.

"Maybe there is and maybe there ain't but it's true," declared the young man with the celluloid collar.

"Why don't you get it patented?"

"I can't. You're joshin' me."

"Who, I? Perish the thought. And you think girls are really curious?"

"I know it."

"All of them?"

"Some of 'em is cur'user than others, of course."

"How do you know?"

"I seen one out walkin' in the park with you last Sunday, an' I don't think all of 'em would go out walkin' with you."

"Don't laugh at your own attempts to be funny. Then you think some girls are curious because they wouldn't go out to the park with me? Thank you."

"No, you don't get my idea at all. I meant it the other way."

"You know a lot about girls, don't you? Anybody can see that."

"Well, I don't know such a lot, but I know some."

"Some girls?"

"Yes, some girls, an' some about girls."

"Wise man!"

"Oh, I ain't so wise; but it takes a wise girl to fool me any to speak of."

"Would it be showing undue curiosity if I should ask you, for the benefit of myself and these others whom your remarkable discovery has aroused to a pitch of intense excitement, what particular incident of the present day has caused you to remark on the curious qualities of girls?"

"I just happened to think of it, noticin' Miss Keyboard as she left the table."

"Is Miss Keyboard one of the curious ones?"

"She certainly is."

"She never went to the park with me."

"An' maybe that ain't because you never asked her to, neither."

"To avoid argument, I will concede that it is not. In what way does Miss Keyboard strike you as being curious?"

"Well, three weeks ago I asked her to go to the theater with me an' she wouldn't because she had an engagement."

"Nothing curious about that."

"No, but listen. Two weeks ago I asked her again to go to the theater with me. An' she wouldn't because she had a headache."

"Nothing curious about that."

"No, I know there ain't. But the other day I asked her to go again—"

"Persistent youth!"

"And she didn't have no engagement."

"No?"

"No, an' she didn't have no headache."

"No?"

"No; an' still she wouldn't go. Now, wasn't that curious?"

"That was decidedly curious. But you know so much about girls that it should not seem curious to you, regardless of how it seems to the rest of us. You ought to know why she wouldn't go with you to the theater the last time you asked her."

"I ought to know why?"

"That's what I said."

"Maybe you can tell."

"I can. She doesn't want to go with you."

"By ding! I bet that was it?" exclaimed the young man with the celluloid collar. "And I never thought of it."

"Of course, that was it," declared the young man who sells gas engines.

"Oh, well, she don't need to be so haughty. I was only trying to be nice."

"And she was only trying to stay nice."

"You needn't try to get funny. I guess there's a lot of girls would be glad to go with me to the theater."

"Yes, as you say, girls are cur'us."

"Ain't they? An' she's the cur'usest one I've met."—Chicago Daily News.

EUROPEAN TRIP A RELIEF FROM CARE

For years the Browns had planned a European trip, but every year something happened to prevent their getting away. First the children were ill and then Mrs. Brown invited guests for a short time, who stayed several months, preventing the Browns, by the dwindling of the bank account, from going abroad that year. Thus things went on.

Finally Brown declared as an absolute certainty that Europe would see them the following year. All their friends were notified and everything was done to make it impossible for their trip to be prevented.

When all was ready, however, Brown was ordered by his firm to secure a particularly desirable contract at any cost. It meant a lot to the firm and to Brown, but it also meant months of untiring effort—effort that could not be put forth in Europe.

Brown, however, had made his vow and he refused to let his business interfere with his family's plans. The family could go to Europe even if he couldn't. They had relatives abroad, and, besides, he could send them with a party. So he packed them on the train and looked as cheerful as possible when it pulled out.

When he returned home, however, he began to realize how lonesome it was there. It got on his nerves finally and he resolved to board during his bachelorhood. So he moved to a hotel.

Then the thought came to him to rent his house for the months that it would be vacant unless he rented it. There was no earthly use in letting it stand and gather dust, which was the same as throwing away a goodly sum of money each month. Some one would be only too glad of the opportunity to live in a well furnished house in a fashionable suburb, with all the benefits of the Browns' home comforts. Some one, no doubt, was searching eagerly for such an opportunity So Brown hastened to advertise the treat in store for some one.

The number of replies he received was highly gratifying to him. After picking out the letter written on the best appearing stationery he clinched the bargain over the telephone. Of course, the tenants refused to pay nearly what he thought his house was worth, but on reflection he concluded that they were really caretakers for him who would look after his property generally. He even began to feel under obligations to them for their willingness to take his house and he urged them to make themselves perfectly at home, assuring them that everything in the house was theirs to use as they desired.

When he hung up the receiver he heaved a sigh of relief and content. He needn't even think of the house again until his family were about to return. It was really a great idea of his to have some one take care of the property for him; now he could devote his entire time to the task of getting that important contract.

It was about a week later that over the telephone he listened to a very indignant feminine voice commanding his immediate presence at his home. Fearing no less calamity than a fire, Brown hastened to catch the first train to the familiar suburb.

"What's the matter?" he asked of the woman who opened the door after he had established his identity.

"Why," she replied, without inviting him in, "I wanted to ask you where I can find the potato knife and the carving set. And when you rented us this place you gave us to understand that it was completely furnished! Well, ever since we moved in we've been unable to find things we ought to have! There are no oyster forks nor individual butter knives! And the table linen is a disgrace—we could never invite guests to dine with us with such linen!

"And the water froze the first night we were here, so we had to have a plumber, and that was $7. He says your drains are in a terribly insanitary condition, and if we get typhoid we shall certainly charge our doctor bills to you! You've no business advertising a perfect home—it's getting money under false pretenses!

"We've had to buy lots of little things. Your brooms are dreadful, and some of your kitchen utensils were absolutely worn out. We'll just take the cost out of the rent—for, of course, the things will belong to the house."

Brown had ceased to listen. He was contemplating the gown worn by his tenant—a dainty house dress of Mrs. Brown's. His wife had left much of her wardrobe at home, he knew. In the doorway, to receive the first footprints of the incomers, was the Browns' most valuable rug, treasured as very gold! He wondered what might lie beyond his vision!

He stuttered helplessly, trying to express his dissatisfaction, but the glare of righteous indignation in his tenant's eyes rendered him inarticulate.

"All the rent for the first month is already paid out," said the woman. "When the plumber's bill comes in shall we send it to you, or shall we pay it out of next month's rent?"

"There—there won't be another month!" exploded Brown, turning on his heel to prevent himself from making further unseemly remarks. But as he stamped along the street he recalled that the objectionable occupants of his home had a lease to fortify them against his wrath.—Chicago Daily News.

Rousseau's Etiquette of Love.

Before Rousseau, love was a highly refined form of social intercourse, a species of gallantry conducted with self-restraint, and all the formalities of special etiquette; any extravagancy, whether in feeling, in speech, or in action, was banished. But when Saint-Preux, oppressed by his high-strung passions, came to the rock at Meilliere to pour forth in solitude the flood of his sentimental tears, all the witty refinements of eighteenth century gallantry, for good or for evil, were finally swept away; extravagancy was free to lay down the law in love. It was Rousseau who enabled Mirabeau, in his first letter to Julie Danvers (whom he had never seen), to declare, "I, also, am a lover, have emptied the cup of sensibility to the dregs, and could give a thousand lives for what I love." It was Rousseau who laid down a new etiquette of love which every petty poet and novelist still adheres to.—Atlantic Monthly.

Drinking Water With Food.

It is a trifle disconcerting to be told that when the thrifty housewife expends from 20 to 28 cents per pound for the best cuts of beef about 60 per cent of the sum is being paid for water. Yet such is the case, about 60 per cent of the bulk of uncooked beef or mutton being water. . . . The flesh of pigeons is about 70 per cent water, that of fowls and ducks 65 per cent, while a really fat goose may have as little as 38 per cent of water in its composition. The flesh of fish varies considerably in the quantity of water contained, the figures ranging according to the kinds of fish, from 40 to 80 per cent.—Popular Mechanics.

Cantines Maternelles.

There are five dining-rooms in Paris where from fifty to eighty nursing mothers daily receive free meals. Cantines Maternelles these restaurants were called when they were started eight years ago by Mme. Henry Coullet of Paris. At first the only passport needed was the possession of a baby, but owing to the development of a confusing habit of borrowing babies so as to procure a meal, the rule was altered, and the provision of free meals is now dependent upon regular attendance at an adjoining baby clinic.

The bride was attired in a brown broadcloth tailored suit, with a large brown velvet hat and carried a gold chain and topaz rosary, the gift of her niece, Miss Catherine U. Fenton. The bridesmaid was also gowned in brown, and wore a large picture hat of brown velvet, and carried an arm bouquet of pink chrysanthemums. The bride presented her maid with a ring set with sapphires, while the gift of the groom to his best man was a platinum scarf pin. Immediately after the ceremony the bridal party repaired to the home of the bride's parents, where a reception and breakfast was served to the immediate relatives and friends of the contracting parties. Mr. and Mrs. Rowan left during the afternoon on a wedding tour, which will include New York and Atlantic City, and upon their return will make their home in Bondsville for the present. ## THREE RIVERS.

Poems by a Local Student.

Following are two poems taken from the Holy Cross "Purple;" they are written by Daniel E. Horgan of this place, a graduate of the Palmer high school, class of 1911:

Croon at Eventide.

Out from the dusky haunts of time,
From the caverns of the deep,
Down through the starry avenues
Of space, you lie asleep
My baby dear.
I care not whence you came—
Ah! you are here.

Here is your darling dimpled chin,
Your eyes of amethyst,
Your parted cherub lips, your cheek
By the star drifts kissed
My baby dear
When on the long, long road from God to here.

Here is your little smiling face
Washed by the fragrant dew:
Lit by the twinkling of the stars,
Stolen as you came through.
Here lie and rest:
Here lie and shine upon your mother's breast.

The million twigs of every tree,
Each point to God a different way:
Each tiny wavelet of the sea
Has its own sweet thing to say.

To God's great artistry attests.
Sere leaves, that by the winds are tossed,
More truthful are than palimpsests:
Each dainty diagram of frost

This stone an altar is to Him,
The daffodils are to his eyes
The lighted candles; cherubim,
The gauzy-winged dragon-flies.

—Laus Deo.

Useful Accomplishments.

Every woman wants a cozy corner all her own—be that corner humble or handsome.

Every woman who does not have the home longing is abnormal. Home is made up of little things.

One of the largest of these little things is the ability to cook wholesome food.

Sewing and music are next. A woman might be as homely as can be, but if she can cook a good dinner, make a dress, and let her moods slip out of her finger tips on a piano, that woman will have a chance for a truly happy home a thousand per cent. better than her beautiful neighbor who cannot make even an apron, and who cooks badly for her family.

So I say to mothers, whether you have money or not, teach your daughters all the useful and necessary things in life, so that they will make good, homelike wives and mothers.

PROTESTS POWER PLAN.

Central Mass. Co. Opposes New Power Co's. Franchise.

WILL APPEAL TO STATE COMMISSION.

Claims New Plant Will be Duplication of Capital with No Reduction in the Rates.

Although the Warren Power Company has been granted a pole franchise in the town of Palmer, it will not be permitted to go on with the project without opposition. This will be by the Central Massachusetts Electric Company, already doing business in the town, and objection will be made to the electric light and gas commission. There is a stipulated time after the granting of the franchise within which protest must be made, and it will not be allowed to go by default. The Palmer company has no disposition to oppose the passage of the other company through the town to do business elsewhere, but objects to its working in Palmer. What the result may be remains to be seen, but it is the policy of the state to protect electric and gas companies against duplication of plants if the original company is giving a reasonable service.

The Warren Power Company owns a water privilege at West Warren, capable of developing about 500-horse power. This it proposes to put in operation and market the electricity in Palmer, Ludlow, West Springfield and Springfield. If there is sufficient demand for power there will be further development. This will be accomplished by the erection of another dam about a mile further down the stream. Here a dam 29 feet high will be built, from which a penstock will run still further downstream to a point where the towns of Brimfield and Palmer adjoin. There a big plant will be constructed, capable of generating from 25,000 to 30,000-horse power. The buildings will be in the town of Palmer. The company states that it is prepared to furnish ample capital for the project.

There is nothing the matter with the plan as outlined, but the records show that for an average of two months in each year—in the summer—there is very little water in the Quaboag river. Should the demands for the company's power be anything like the capacity of the plant, there will need to be steam auxiliary to take care of it in the time of low water, and this will mean the additional investment of a large sum.

In voicing its opposition to the plan of the new company to invade Palmer the Central Massachusetts Electric company points out that it has, since the first of March, spent about $350,000 in reconstructing its plant and installing modern machinery and apparatus. It will have a direct connection with the Connecticut River Power Company and with another power company, from which it can at any time derive all the power which can be used in Palmer. The Central Massachusetts company states that its rates are as low as in other places of similar size, and that it expects to make a reduction soon. Under the circumstances it points out that no other company can, with the large expenditure of money necessary to operate, furnish power at less rates than it can. Should it be allowed to do business in the town it would mean an expensive duplication of plants and capital, from which no real good can be derived.

This is in accord with the theory on which the state protects the electric light and gas companies. The benefits to be derived from competition, lowest possible rates and efficient service, are subject to the orders of the gas and electric light commission. That board has authority to regulate both rates and service. Any citizen, having ground for complaint against such a company, may take his grievance to the board for investigation. The companies are required to make reports to the state quite different from those required of business corporations and these reports give the state officials complete information as to costs of all kinds, rates and amount of service. Under these conditions it seems probable that the new company may yet have difficulty in securing a right to solicit business in Palmer.

In addition to Palmer, the Warren Company applied for franchises in Ludlow, Chicopee and West Springfield. The Amherst Power Company also applied in Chicopee and West Springfield. West Springfield has granted a franchise to both companies, and Ludlow this week gave one to the Warren Company.

Sons of St. George.

Institution of New Lodge and Installation of Officers.

Saturday evening those who have been working for the formation of a lodge of Sons of St. George saw the realization of their efforts. Masonic hall, Palmer, which will be the headquarters of the Hampden lodge, was the scene of much activity on Saturday afternoon, the members being busily preparing for their guests. Seven o'clock was the hour fixed for the opening exercises, but owing to some delay on the road the large Springfield contingent did not arrive till that hour. Some 60 or 70 brethren from Leopold lodge, Springfield, which included the degree team of 20, under the leadership of Bro. William Chetham, members from the Lord Nelson lodge of Ansonia, Ct., from the Waredale lodge, South Barre, and also from Thompsonville, were present, supporting the grand lodge officers, among whom were Harry Coaley, Boston, grand president, E. J. Crowther, Holyoke, grand vice president, and John W. C. Sargent, Westminster, grand secretary. Leopold lodge of Springfield presented the lodge with a handsome engraved Bible and Lord Nelson lodge, Ansonia, Ct., a pair of gavels. After the lodge had been instituted by the grand president, the members from Lord Nelson lodge filling the official chairs for the purpose, 21 members were initiated. Some very fine floor work was given at the close by the degree team, which elicited rounds of applause. The following officers were installed: Worthy past president, Grover C. Goodes; worthy president, Samuel Brooks; worthy vice president, Harry W. Saunders; worthy secretary, Walter H. Worth; worthy treasurer, G. W. Sumner; worthy messenger, J. C. Picking; worthy assistant secretary, H. J. Evans; trustees for 6, 12 and 18 months respectively, Alfred Jackson, Charles F. Kenworthy and Charles Johnson. The newly-elected president then appointed the following subordinate officers: Assistant messenger, E. C. Harrington; chaplain, Charles F. Kenworthy; inside sentinel, Albert Dearden; outside sentinel, Joseph Jackson. Stirring addresses were given by the grand president, grand vice president and grand secretary; also by Brothers Chetham, Seaton, Cooper and Leggo, and the president and vice president of the new lodge. An invitation was received from Leopold lodge, Springfield, to attend the installation of officers on Dec. 2d, which was accepted. A collation was served at the close. The next meeting will be Dec. 5.

Bad Auto Accident.

Car Collides with Bridge Abutment at North Wilbraham.

The underpass at North Wilbraham witnessed another nasty auto accident last Friday evening, when a big seven-passenger banged into the side wall. The car was going west at a good rate of speed and the driver, who was unfamiliar with the road, did not see the right-angle turn until close upon it. In attempting to negotiate the turn the machine skidded and struck the wall. The right front wheel of the auto was brushed and the mudguard and body of the car somewhat dented, and a rear spring broken. The wrecked car lay on the street railway track, and cars were blocked for some time, passengers being transferred around the wreck until about 9 o'clock. The damaged auto was taken to Springfield by a truck about 11 o'clock. Numerous accidents have taken place at this point. The highway, after paralleling the railroad tracks for some distance, passes under them with a sharp turn. A slight reverse curve just before reaching the turn prevents the lights of an auto from showing the turn until close upon it. As the road approaching the spot is of the best, drivers are quite likely to approach at a lively clip, which in the evening is apt to result disastrously.

Salmon Shipped To Boston.

Fish From Forest Hatchery. Bass To Be Raised Next Year.

A consignment of salmon raised at the Forest Lake hatchery in Palmer was taken to Boston on Monday by Deputy J. F. Luman and placed in the new aquarium which is owned by the City of Boston and which was opened to the public for the first time yesterday. The aquarium is one of the finest in the country and was erected at a cost of $125,000.

Work at the Forest Lake hatchery, where a new cement dam is being constructed, also ponds for rearing bass, is progressing rapidly, preparatory to rearing this specie of fish the coming spring. The Goodreau property recently taken over by the state, in which Superintendent Otis Monroe is to reside with his family, is being thoroughly remodeled.

DETERMINED TO DIE.

Ware Man Tries Three Times to End His Existence.

DRANK GASOLINE AS FIRST EFFORT.

Then Strangling With Shirt. All Endeavors Foiled. Fined $50 for Carrying Gun.

George La Riviere,—or Rivers, as the family is more commonly known, — of Ware, attempted to commit suicide Monday night following the wedding of his sister, Annie, and Arthur Noel of Indian Orchard. He drank gasoline, but his plans to enter the next world were frustrated by Dr. H. D. Gaffney, who was hastily summoned. Tuesday morning he again attempted to make himself defunct, but this time Chief of Police Buckley was summoned and he placed the man in the lockup. Rivers had not been in the cell long when the chief found him attempting to strangle himself with a rope made from his shirt, which he had torn into strips. A guard was placed over him and he was brought into the district court Wednesday morning, when he pleaded guilty to a charge of carrying a loaded revolver and paid a fine of $50.

Belchertown Man Had Watered Milk.

Harold Brown of Belchertown, a milk dealer, paid a fine of $60 in the district court in Northampton Wednesday for having watered milk in his possession. The complaint was made by Inspector Lombard of the state dairy bureau.

PARCELS POST RULES.

New Service Which is to Be Inaugurated January 1.

SPECIAL STAMPS ONLY ON PARCELS.

Name of the Sender Must Also Be On. Zones Vary From 50 to 1800 Miles. Rates Low.

Persons who may have occasion to use the new parcels post which the post office department is to establish soon will do well to acquaint themselves on the rules and regulations if they expect parcels to reach their destination. The general regulations have been known for some little time, but the rates of postage have only been received by the postmasters this week.

The service will begin January 1, when all matter which is now sent as merchandise at a rate of one cent an ounce for any distance, will be sent under the new regulations at varying prices according to the distance. The limit of weight is also increased from four pounds to eleven pounds. Packages mailed under this classification must, however, bear a special stamp which will be provided; if other stamps are placed on it the package will not be forwarded, no matter how much postage may be affixed; ordinary stamps will not be good on the packages. On the special stamps will be a place for the name and address of the sender, to provide for return if it cannot be delivered, and if these are missing the package will also be held up.

Palmer 7th Grade Still in the Lead.

A Perfect Attendance Record for Three Months. Three Rivers and Palmer Grades a Close Second. General Average Better.

The attendance statistics for the third term of the present school year are given below.

The percentage of attendance for all of the schools is 96.12. The percentage for the same month last year was 94.48.

The number of the tardy cases registered is 32, against 73 for the same month last year, a decrease of 56 per cent, a noticeable decrease in the tardy cases being made every month. For the three school months of this year there have been 83 cases, while for the three corresponding months of last year there were 210. The decrease of this year over last year is 127, or 60 per cent.

The attendance has been fairly good the past month, considering the fact that diphtheria has been somewhat prevalent in some schools. Grade 7 in the Palmer building again has a perfect attendance. They have had this record for the past three months. This is an unusually good showing. Grades 8 and 9 in the Three Rivers Grammar school have a percentage of 99.4. Grade 8 of Palmer has a percentage of 99.11, and grades 5 and 6, Palmer, 99. Out of an enrollment of 1502 children 1057 have been neither absent nor tardy. This means that practically two-thirds of the entire enrollment have been perfect in attendance for the entire month.

The schools are making an unusually good record in attendance and if nothing unforeseen prevents the record for the entire year in percentage of attendance and in the number of tardy cases will be unusually good.

The high school and districts are improving steadily upon the showing they made last year in the matter of tardiness. The high school registered only three cases this month against 14 for the same month last year. The districts registered one case this month against 32 for the same month last year.

Bazar is a Big Success.

Big Crowds at Thorndike Nightly. Mayor Fitzgerald Present.

The six nights' bazar of St. Mary's church, Thorndike, which opened in Union Hall in that place Monday evening, has been well patronized and the attendants have been given the worth of their money in good times.

Tuesday evening the attendance was unusually large, the advertised attraction being Mayor Fitzgerald of Boston. There were many predictions that it was all a "fake" and that he would not be there, but he arrived with his wife in good time. He was greeted with a hearty welcome on entering the hall, the audience singing the chorus of his favorite song, "Sweet Adaline." Mayor Fitzgerald was introduced by Rev. P. J. Griffin, pastor of St. Mary's church, and spoke for about 20 minutes. Just before the address he was presented with a handsome bouquet of flowers by little Miss Mary Kelley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Kelley. At the close of his remarks Mayor Fitzgerald mingled with the crowd on the floor, and with his wife was introduced to many present. After a time he went to the parochial residence as a guest of Fr. Griffin, and at a late hour started on the return trip to Boston.

The attractions of the several evenings have been of a pleasing nature, the several numbers being well rendered and enthusiastically received. Space prevents personal mention of each, but it can well be said that all were of a high order of merit. The music by Wilder's orchestra, which has played each evening, has added much to the enjoyment of the event.

This evening will be A. O. H. night, and the program will be furnished by that order. To-morrow, the closing evening of the bazar, will be Temperance night. In addition to the stage performance the Sacred Heart drum corps of Springfield will be present.

The awards will be made at this time. All connected with the affair have worked hard to make it the success which it has attained, and the result will be a generous sum to be added to the remodeling fund of the church and the installation of the new pipe organ.

The rates of postage are determined by zones, varying from 50 miles to 1800 miles. For a package weighing a pound, for which the present rate is 16 cents for any distance, the new rates will be: Local rate and 50-mile zone, 5 cents; 50 to 150 miles, 6 cents; 150 to 300 miles, 7 cents; 300 to 600 miles, 8 cents; 600 to 1000 miles, 9 cents; 1000 to 1400 miles, 10 cents; 1400 to 1800 miles, 11 cents; over 1800 miles, 12 cents. A five-pound package starts at 9 cents for local delivery and 17 cents in the 50-mile zone, and ranges up to 60 cents as a maximum. A package weighing 11 pounds—the limit—is delivered for 15 cents local and 35 cents within the 50-mile zone, the cost ranging up to $1.32 for the longest distance. In addition to a weight limit of 11 pounds there is a size limit of not more than "seventy-two inches in length and girth combined." Parcels will be delivered at all free-delivery offices and on rural delivery routes. They may be registered and also sent by special delivery on payment of the usual fees for these services, and may be insured for their actual value up to $25, on the payment of five cents.

It is expected that the inauguration of this service will entail a large amount of additional work on the post office department, and that additional clerks will be necessary in many places. The Palmer post office has not yet received maps of the zones applicable to this office, but they are expected in a few days.

HORSE THIEF AT WORK.

Horse Hired Last Saturday Has Not Been Returned.

W. F. DUNN OF PALMER THE VICTIM.

Well Dressed Stranger Wanted to Drive to Wilbraham Academy. No Traces Found.

Landlord William F. Dunn of the Elms House is mourning the loss of a horse and buggy which was "hired" by a stranger Saturday morning ostensibly for a short ride. Neither the man nor the team have been heard from since.

About 10.30 Saturday morning a stranger inquired at the Nassowanno House where he could get a conveyance to drive to Wilbraham Academy. He was directed to the Elms House. The proprietor happened to be out, and the stableman gave him a horse and Concord buggy, and he drove off. Apparently he did not reach Wilbraham; at any rate no trace of him can be found there. The animal was a black mare weighing about 1050 pounds; the buggy was an open Moyer, leather trimmed. On the horse was a rubber-trimmed harness, nearly new. In the carriage was a yellow striped lap robe lined with black, and a brown street blanket. The man wore a black overcoat and dark suit, and a black derby hat. His hair and moustache were both black. On Saturday a horse and buggy were seen going through North Wilbraham with two in the vehicle; the horse showed hard driving, and the outfit was headed toward Springfield. It was at first thought that some "drunk" had driven to some other locality, but no trace of the team has been found and it is apparently a clear case of horse stealing. Cards describing the lost property have been mailed to the police officers of towns in a wide section.

Church Wedding at Thorndike.

Miss Maud Louise Parker Becomes Bride of Montana Man.

The Congregational church in Thorndike was the scene of a pretty wedding Tuesday afternoon, when Miss Maud Louise Parker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew J. Parker, was married to George Eber Stratton of Montana. A large number were present, and the church was beautifully decorated for the occasion.

The bride walked to the altar accompanied by her parents, and was given away by her father. Rev. J. Inman of Fall River was the officiating clergyman. The wedding march was played by Miss Alice Clark, pianist, and C. Arthur Hanson, violinist; Miss Blanche Upham and Mr. Gordon sang. A reception followed the ceremony, and in the evening Mr. and Mrs. Stratton left for their home in Montana.

Miss Parker's childhood was spent in Thorndike, and she was an attendant at the Palmer high school. Later she fitted herself for teaching deaf mutes and proved a most successful instructor. She held positions in Boston, Philadelphia, and was last engaged in New York, where she taught the only class of hearing deaf mutes in the world. Mr. Stratton is a graduate of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, but is a Western man. He is in the government reclaimation service and has been appointed to a post in Glasgow, Montana.

Among the wedding guests were the Misses McFarlane of New York city, formerly of Thorndike, and very well known in that village. There were also guests from New York and from Boston and from Shelburne Falls.

Wife Fined; Husband Let Go.

He Paid His Fare on Car, But She Made Too Much Disturbance.

The attention of the district court was taken up Monday morning with an unusual case. Ignacts Prasnol was charged with evading his fare on an electric car on the Ware line, and his wife Finola was alleged to have severely fractured the peace on the trip from Palmer; it was also charged that she was intoxicated. Prasnol was found not guilty and discharged, but his wife was fined $10 for disturbing the peace. The drunkenness case was placed on file.

Roman Doboski of Wilbraham appeared with his head considerably cut up and claimed that Ignacz Nalepa had done it. The evidence showed that the work had been done with a bottle in the hands of Nalepa, and he was sent up for one year for assault. Then Roman Noboski and John Nowark were found guilty of disturbing the peace and fined $10 each.

Edgar Brown, who with a single shot killed the largest doe secured in this vicinity, it tipping the scales at 200 pounds.

The Brimfield Hotel has opened under new management. Edgar J. Towne, formerly of Holyoke, is the proprietor. Mr. Towne has recently sold out the business of the "Holyoke lunch." Previous to that time Mr. Towne was a traveling saleman for 25 years, employed most of the time by the National Biscuit Company.

Schoolhouse Broken Into.

District No. 6 schoolhouse was found to have been broken into some time between 5 o'clock Thursday night and Friday morning. Entrance was gained by breaking a pane of glass and unhooking the catch and raising a window. No other damage of importance was done. The school committee was notified and Officer A. F. Friend was sent out to investigate. It is thought that the break is the work of pedestrians, possibly hunters, in search of a warm place to spend the night.

HIS SYMPATHIES WITH ELK

Somewhat Natural, Since Animal Rescued Engineer From Extremely Awkward Position.

A curious story of adventure comes from Montana. While a freight train was lying over at a small mountain station, the engineer borrowed a shotgun and started out for a short hunt. Finding nothing, he was returning to the train when a cow came running at him, and before he realized his danger, she tossed him in the air.

Getting to his feet as quickly as possible, he dodged behind a tree, and then, to his dismay, found that the gun barrel was bent so as to be useless. The next ten minutes were very lively ones, while the cow chased the engineer round and round the tree. Just when he was about to succumb from fatigue, an angry snort was heard, and a big elk appeared upon the scene, head down and prepared for a fight.

So was the cow, and in another moment the two animals dashed at each other. The engineer watched the combat for a few minutes, until prudence suggested that he should make a retreat as soon as he could. He regained the train in safety, and never knew the outcome of the battle, but he hopes the elk was the victor.

Patented Articles Must Be Marked.

We are all accustomed to see a patented article marked "Patented," with the date of the patent. It is doubtful, however, whether one in a hundred, or in five hundred, who notices the mark realizes its importance to the patentee. The statute on the subject makes it the duty of all patentees or those holding under or making the patented article for them to apply the mark "Patented," together with the day and year the patent was granted, and the same statute provides as a penalty for not marking that "in any suit for infringement by the party failing to so mark no damages shall be recovered by the plaintiff, except on proof that the defendant was duly notified of the infringement, and continued, after such notice, to make, use or vend the article so patented."—Scientific American.

POOR AS A CHURCH MOUSE

Since Confetti Came Into Use, the Saying Has More Meaning Than at Former Times.

The sexton of a fashionable New York church was sweeping into a large mound the bright purple, red and yellow discs of confetti which littered the church entrance and steps.

"This month," he said, "I have had already 35 weddings in my church. And at every one of these weddings paper confetti was thrown at the bride instead of rice.

"The confetti fashion is very welcome to us sextons. When rice was used our churches were overrun with mice. The saying, 'As poor as a church mouse,' was then meaningless. Why, in my church, where weddings are so popular, several hundreds of mice—fat chaps they were, too—found an ample food supply in the rice that was sprinkled over the brides.

"Now that rice has been abandoned for paper confetti, these mice have all disappeared. They were starved out. They couldn't live on paper."

Bending with difficulty to collect a few obstinate pieces of the bright paper confetti that stuck to the floor, the old sexton added:

"Of course, these bits of paper are much more awkward for me to sweep up than rice. But, even so, I hope the confetti fashion has come to stay."

First to Use Chloroform.

Chloroform an as anaesthetic was first used on the 30th of September, 1846, by Dr. W. T. G. Morton, a dentist, of Boston, in a case of tooth extraction, and thereafter by him in many difficult operations. The news of the discovery reached England in December, 1846, and British dentists immediately began to use it. Sir James Simpson, a Scotch physician (1811-1870) was the first to use it in hospital practice and this he did in 1847. His discovery was considered independent of that by the Boston dentist and in 1866 he was knighted. He had a public funeral when he died and a statue of him in bronze stands in Edinburgh.

THRILLING ADVENTURE OF BUSINESS WOMAN

(The plain busines woman and her sister, who has ben pressed into service for the occasion, enter the millinery section of a large department store).

Busines woman (plaintively)—"It does seem to me that I am never free from the thrall of the hat. Just after Christmas it begins to hang over me like a pall, and when the spring hats really begin to sprout in the windows I get perfectly morbid." (Speaks very humbly to haughty saleswoman.) "If you could wait on us, please, it would be so kind of you. Something small, if you please." (To sister while haughty saleswoman departs in search of hat). "Dear me! I wish I didn't get so positively abject on these occasions. I know some people who really get a bitter satisfaction out of sailing into exclusive millinery establishments, where the hats are dreams of beauty and becomingness, and demanding to be shown confections whose prices send the cold chills down one's back, and then departing with a dissatisfied shake of the head. But not so I. I fell impudent when I cast even a glance at the wonderful things."

(Haughty saleswoman returns balancing a hat on her hand. She looks bored to extinction. Business woman removes her much battered, squashy and obviously home made headgear and hands it to her sister. She looks doubtfully at the hat in the saleswoman's hand).

Business woman—"It looks awfully big."

Saleswoman—"It's the smallest hat in the house, madam. Small hats are not worn at all."

Business woman (hastily)—"Oh, of course, I know the hats are all big. But you see my face is so small that when I get one of these large things on I look just like a monkey. I really don't think it's worth while for me to try it on. I'm sorry to trouble you, but if you could find something that wouldn't sit quite so far down on my head, I'd be so much obliged." (She smiles pathetically and the saleswoman flounces away).

Sister (disgustedly)—"You're worse than abject, Sarah. You're perfectly maudlin."

(Haughty saleswoman returns and suddenly engulfs business woman in a hat about two feet high and with a crown like a scrubbing pail).

Business woman (gasps)—"Oh, dear! Where am I? Why, really, don't you think this one is bigger than the other?"

Saleswoman—"No, madam; it is not."

Business woman (looking forlornly and apologetically toward showcase)—"But some of those hats are smaller, aren't they? I think I'll just step over and look at them." (She gathers up her belongings with the air of a detected sneakthief and sidles over to the showcase. Haughty saleswoman turns away with an air of deep disdain.)

Business woman (almost in tears)—"Why won't they be nice to me? If they only realized it, I'm such an—an easy mark. A kind person could sell me anything."

Sister (impatiently)—"Oh, have a little backbone. I'm perfectly ashamed of you. Now, there's a pretty hat and a little one at that. Ask that girl over there to take it out and show it to you."

Business woman (after bracing herself to the effort of addressing another goddess of the millinery world, fades away in deep humiliation upon being told that the price of the hat in question is $25)—"She could tell by the quiver in my voice that it was not for the likes of me."

Sister—"Why didn't you make her take it out and show it to you, anyway? That's what they're here for."

Business woman (after vainly traveling up and down and around and around counters and showcases)—"Do you suppose if I wore one of these I would lose my job?"

Sister—"Here, try this one. Now, if you had a big bandeau so that you would look a little as if you had on a hat and not a necklace.

Business woman (gratefully)—"How cheering you are! (She peers out from under the hat with the air of a startled rabbit.) Would you mind asking one of the saleswomen if they have bandeaus?"

Sister (after pursuing saleswoman around the counter and finally bringing her to bay)—"I want a large bandeau. One that will hold a hat up off the head."

Saleswoman (languidly and without offering to move)—"You mean a halo No, we don't carry them. They're not worn." (She resumes her important occupation of gazing dreamily into space. Sister returns to business woman, who is still in a millinery eclipse. She regards business woman thoughtfully for a moment. Then a triumphant light suddenly comes into her eyes. She fairly snatches the hat from the business woman's head).

Sister (gleefully)—"They don't have halos. But—" (She seizes the old hat, and stuffs it inside the other one, then replaces the new hat on business woman's head, where it perches in a most sprightly, if somewhat precarious, way).

Business woman (regarding herself with more or less satisfaction in the mirror)—"You're a genius!" (Wheedlingly). "You're so awfully clever and so very, very brave! In fact, I don't think I ever knew such a clever, brave person. Won't you go and see if you can, with honeyed words and sweet smiles, persuade somebody to sell this hat to me?"—Chicago Daily News.

Do your Christmas shopping early. By so doing you'll accomplish three things—Have a better assortment to select from, save yourself the annoyance of the crowds later, and make it easier for the clerks. Shop early.

A CORRESPONDENT in Collier's Weekly suggests that to Col. Roosevelt be applied the sentiment placed on the grave-marker of a Westerner who attempted a hazardous undertaking but failed:

"He did his damdest,
Angels could do no more."

NEW YORK city wants to eliminate the common towel from the public schools, but finds that it will cost $72,000 to buy enough towels to allow one for each child, and will cost $217,000 a year to have them washed. The cost of paper towels would be $300,334 a year. Gee, but it costs to keep a kid clean!

WILL Massachusetts go into the railroad business? Henry C. Long of Cambridge wishes it to in the purchase of the Boston and Maine road, and has filed with the clerk of the House of Representatives a bill to that effect. His proposition is to have the state issue $50,000,000 of 25-year four per cent bonds.

FEW people who have not traveled on them have a realizing sense of the magnitude of the great lakes, thinking of them in a general way as a cluster of fresh water bodies of no very great size. However, one of the newest vessels just launched for use on the lakes—a side-wheel steamer—is a close second to the big ocean liner. This vessel is 500 feet in length and nearly 100 feet wide, and carry 6000 passengers besides 1500 tons of freight. The speed will be 22 miles an hour.

INVESTIGATION of the wreck at Westport, Ct., Oct. 3 on the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad, which cost the lives of eight persons, shows that it was due to a short crossover between two tracks, and the Connecticut public utilities commission has now ordered the road to install longer and safer crossovers on all its tracks. A similar wreck occurred at Bridgeport July 11, 1911, and the commission at that time recommended what it now orders. Had the recommendation been followed there would have been no Westport wreck. Will the order now be carried out? And will the threatened prosecution of the responsible railroad officials materialize? There should be only one answer.

IT IS said that "Politics makes strange bedfellows," but it remains for the tradesunion bacillus to inoculate its victims with still stranger views at times. In Chicago recently formal complaint was made to the federation of labor because a violinist in the musicians' union was playing an instrument which did not bear the union label. The violin complained of was a "Strad" which had cost $750, and the owner declined to discard it simply because it lacked a union label. One delegate insisted that "music from a tin pan would sound sweet if the union label were on the pan." Wonder how much of an audience he could gather to hear an orchestra of 100 pieces play on union-labelled tin pans.

THE Massachusetts supreme court has this week decided—four to three—that a street car is a "vehicle" within the meaning of the law which was passed in 1820, and that autos passing cars going in the same direction shall pass to the left, as stipulated by the law concerning the passing of vehicles in the highway. The majority report admits the danger involved in such a practice, but says that such is the law and it is for the Legislature to provide a remedy. The minority take into consideration the serious problems involved if vehicles are compelled, in passing cars standing in the streets, to turn to the left into the face of the traffic stream coming from the other way, and declare that a statute should not be interpreted so that it cannot be obeyed. The majority opinion may be good law but it will be impossible to put it in operation, and it is a sure thing that no attempt will be made to do so. The absurdity of such an effort is apparent to all. The decision grew out of a suit against an auto owner by a man who was hit as he was crossing the street after alighting from a trolley car.

PALMER NEWS.

Fire Signals Twisted.

Palmer Men on Jump Because of Incorrect Three Rivers Call.

About 20 of the firemen hustled up to the engine house Wednesday afternoon on a 55 ring on the alarm; then it rang an additional five and stopped. Box 55 is at the corner of Central and Park streets, in the center of a section which contains much valuable residence property, in addition to St. Paul's Universalist church, and the boys were anxious to get ahead of the blaze. The additional 5 dissipated their fears of a fire fight, but made them say a few things which wouldn't appear well in print; in addition to this they thought other things. For the 555 which was rung as plainly as anything could be was an attempt to ring three 14's in Three Rivers by means of the striker; lack of proper spacing of the strokes turned 14 into 5 and made all the trouble. As the two systems are connected, a call in one village is rung in the other, but the two sets of signals are so arranged that, if rung properly there is no confusion. There is no box 555 in Palmer—in fact no box is numbered over 100—and no call which is three times 14, but a 14 made into a five and repeated gets Palmer on the jump. It is probable that when the Three Rivers officials have had a little more experience there will be no difficulty in getting the right signals. Wednesday was the third time this week for the Palmer men under similar circumstances.

Main Street Blocks Sold.

Feeney Property, On Main and Central Streets, Changes Hands.

The business blocks on the corner of Main and Central streets, which have for many years been in the possession of the Feeney family, have been sold to Charles Cordially, proprietor of the Palmer Fruit company, and his brother-in-law, C. Bartolomie of Webster. The papers have not been passed, but the new owners expect to take possession December 15.

The property comprises the stores occupied by H. C. Ellithorpe, boots and shoes; the Palmer Fruit company; Duncan's barber shop and Gale Bros'. cigar store, with the tenements over them. The sale also includes the property of the Feeney estate on Central street between Main and the opera house, on which there is a two-story-and-basement building which has been used as a restaurant and boarding house for a long time.

The new owners have no particular plans in view, and will make no changes for the present, at least. The property has attracted out-of-town real estate several times in the past year and negotiations for its purchase have been entered into, but have always fallen through until now. It is understood that the new owners made the purchase to protect the Palmer Fruit company, as others were contemplating acquiring it.

Death of Mrs. F. M. Eager.

End Came at Her Home on Walnut Street Wednesday Afternoon.

Mrs. Elizabeth Mills Eager, wife of Frank M. Eager, died at her home on Walnut street at 1 o'clock Wednesday afternoon at the advanced age of 81 years. Death came from a complication of diseases after an illness of several weeks.

Mrs. Eager was born in Monson December 15, 1830, the daughter of Jeremiah and Edith Bumstead. She was married in Stafford, Ct., November 3, 1851, to Frank Eager, who survives her. Two children were born to them, both of whom are living, Dr. Frank L. Eager of Waterbury, Ct., and Mrs. Jennie Rokenbaugh of New York. Mr. and Mrs. Eager came to Palmer in 1867, where they have since lived, Mr. Eager being engaged in the manufacture of boots and shoes until this summer, when he retired from active labor. Mrs. Eager was a member of the Baptist church and one of its most active workers as long as her strength permitted. Funeral services were held from the home this afternoon at 2.30, Rev. J. H. Dr. Hodskins has accepted an appointment as adjunct professor of neuro-pathology in the University of Vermont, and has also acquired an interest in a sanitorium at Burlington, which he will manage personally. Dr. Hodskins' departure from the Monson hospital is deeply regretted by the administration and by many of the patients, by whom he was held in high regard. During his stay he also made a host of friends in Palmer who will regret that he has left this section but will wish him the highest success in his new field.

Starts New Enterprise.

Pero Variety Store Opened For Business Tuesday Morning.

The Pero variety store in the new Holbrook block was opened to the public Tuesday morning, and the crowds which have thronged it daily seem to justify the belief of the proprietors that a store of this kind would find plenty of patrons from this section. The stock already shown is large and varied, but the manager, Mr. N. Pero, states that many goods are not on the shelves for lack of room and time in which to get them unpacked. Among the numerous lines carried are glassware, crockery, tin and enamel ware, 5 and 10-cent counters, an unusually large assortment of low-priced but wholesome candies, and notions almost innumerable. A special sale of fancy cakes and cookies was the attraction Tuesday. The store is well lighted, and an attractive addition to the business places of the town. The proprietors bring with them ample business experience gained in the conduct of similar stores in other places, and may be expected to keep the Palmer branch fully up to any other in this vicinity in the same line.

Poinsettia Fair.

The ladies of St. Paul's church will hold their annual fair December 10 and 11. It will be known as the "Poinsettia Fair," and will be a noteworthy event in every particular. A turkey supper will be served Tuesday evening at the usual hour. Wednesday evening an entertainment entitled "Mrs. Black's Pink Tea" will be given. There will be booths for fancy articles, aprons and candy and there will be a real grab bag. Punch will be served Tuesday and afternoon tea Wednesday in the lunch booth. Articles for the grab bag are requested to be sent to Mrs. A. H. Parker.

Lecture on New England Indians.

The Palmer Historical society will hold its meeting next Tuesday evening in the vestry of the Congregational church. Arrangments have been made with Prof. J. T. Browne of Springfield to give his illustrated lecture on "Real Indians of New England," illustrated by stereopticon. Prof. Browne is a master of his subject, and his lecture will be not only instructive but educational. Local people who have had the privilege of hearing it pronounce it highly entertaining. The lecture is free, and the public is cordially invited.

Pool Tournament Opens.

The first game in the winter pool tournament arranged by the Palmer Business and Social club was played Wednesday evening. Practically every member of the club has been chosen by the two captains, and the games are for 100 points each; that is, until 100 balls have been pocketed. The number secured by each player is then noted and the record carefully kept. The result at the end of the tournament is determined by the total number of points. The first game was won by the narrow margin of four balls, as follows:

| C. R. LeGro. | | P. H. McKelligott. |
|---|---|---|
| C. J. Rathbone, | 52 | Dr. J. P. Schneider, 48 |

Among the Churches.

The business meeting of the Congregational church Tuesday evening was adjourned until next Thursday evening, when the support of the church and the benevolences will be considered.

Sunday school at the Advent chapel Sunday afternoon at 2. Preaching at 3; subject, "Life on God's plan." Wednesday evening prayer meeting at 7.30: subject, "Seven times around Jericho."

The subject of the sermon at St. Paul's church Sunday morning will be "Men have changed their minds." The Century class will discuss during December "Marriage and divorce." Communion will be celebrated Sunday morning and several candidates will be given the right hand of fellowship. Y. P. C. U. topic "Everywoman, the play—a transcript of life;" leader, Rev. Otto S. Raspe.

At the Congregational church the pastor will begin Sunday evening a series of addresses on "The coming of Jesus," to be given during Advent; the subject Sunday evening will be, "Bethlehem, the place of the Advent." The subject of the morning sermon will be, "Doing things well the condition of success"; Sunday school at 12; Christian Endeavor meeting at 6, a missionary meeting led by the missionary committee.

Myra May, the year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Merrick, died at their home on Spring street Saturday morning of heart failure. The funeral was held Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock and burial was in the Four Corners cemetery.

A regular meeting of the Mission Circle of St. Paul's church will be held with Mrs. E. C. Gould Monday evening at 7.30; subject, "Philanthropies of our church"; speaker, Rev. O. S. Raspe; watchword service.

Raymond Kelley of Greenwich, civil engineer and architect, has opened an office in the Holden block on Main street. Mr. Kelley was graduated from Worcester Tech in 1910, and has since held positions in Santa Domingo, Porto Rico and Ludlow.

The masquerade ball, to which invitations have been issued by a number of the young people, will be held this evening in the opera house. The patronesses are Mrs. L. E. Chandler, Mrs. H. W. Holbrook, Mrs. G. S. Holden, Mrs. C. A. LeGro and Mrs. Theodore Norman.

The Palmer Woman's club will meet next Friday afternoon with Mrs. F. S. Brewer of Pleasant street. It will be a "Reciprocity" meeting in charge of Mrs. H. C. Cheney. Papers will be read by members of the Wilbraham and Stafford Springs clubs, and there will be a musical program. Afternoon tea will be served.

The lecture by Rev. Wilbur F. Crafts of Washington on "Battles on and battles won in Congress," will be delivered this evening in the Congregational church instead of the opera house as previously announced. Mr. Crafts is an entertaining speaker and will be well worth hearing. The lecture is free and everybody is invited.

The following were entertained yesterday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Cummings of Pine street; Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Farrar of South Manchester, Ct., Rev. C. H. Davis and wife of Portland, Me., Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Morris and Miss Hope Morris of Boston, Miss Mary E. Davis of Bedford, Mr. and Mrs. P. S. Moore and two children of Greenfield.

The first snow of the season made its appearance Monday morning. It was not in great quantity however, and the atmosphere was so warm that it melted almost as soon as it found a lodging place. Yesterday forenoon there was more of it—about half an inch—and, as the weather was colder, it provided coasting in some places for the younger of the youngsters.

There have been rumors the past week that the street railway waiting room is not to be moved to the new Holbrook block on the south side of Main street, as has been announced. This has been ascertained to be an error however. The date of removal is not definitely determined upon, but will be either December 15 or January 1, with chances in favor of the former.

It has been decided not to fill the vacancy in the board of overseers of the poor, caused by the recent death of H. T. Bishop, before the annual town election in March, as a new member if one were chosen now, would be present at only two or three meetings before election. There will be two members of the board to be elected next spring, one to fill Mr. Bishop's place and another to fill the vacancy caused earlier by the death of Patrick Crowley, which was filled at that time by the appointment of P. J. Fitzgerald of Bondsville.

Dog Policeman Travels Beat.

An Irish terrier named Jerry, which has developed a wonderful capacity for police work, is now stationed at Surbiton, England. The terrier, owned by a sergeant of the Metropolitan police, knows all the "beats" in the district, and always accompanies his master when making patrol by cycle. Jerry's "speciality" is in the capturing of stray dogs. These he lures in a friendly manner to the police station, and then mounts guard at the gate until the derelict receives official attention.

LOOK HERE FOR IT

Many a Journal Reader Will be Interested

When people read about the cures made by a medicine endorsed from far away, is it surprising that they wonder if the statements are true? But when they read of cases right here at home, positive proof is within their reach, for close investigation is an easy matter. Read Palmer endorsement of Doan's Kidney Pills.

Mrs. J. M. Barton, 307 S. Main St., Palmer, Mass., Says: "My faith in Doan's Kidney Pills is just as strong today as it was when I publicly recommended them in 1898. For a long time I was troubled a great deal by severe pains through my loins when going up or down stairs. If I sat in one position for any length of time or did any extra work, my suffering was acute. I finally began using Doan's Kidney Pills and received great relief from the first. I continued taking them and it was not long before all symptoms of kidney trouble had disappeared."

THANKSGIVING VISIT TO UNCLE'S FARM

Mother, who went out to Uncle John's farm to pass Sunday before Thanksgiving day, telephoned Tuesday that she would not be home for Thanksgiving because one of the children was sick and Aunt Anna needed her.

"Why don't you run out for the day?" I asked father. "We can get on nicely here and perhaps I can invite somebody in to share our turkey."

"The difficulty is that I've already asked a guest," answered father. "Blakely is in town, and as I knew he'd be pretty lonely at a hotel, I told him that he must come up here Thursday, and now your mother's away!"

Poor father looked so doleful that I felt sorry for him in spite of the fact that he had spoiled a plan of mine for Thanksgiving day. So I assured him that I would do my best to take mother's place.

"You needn't put on any extra frills for Blakely," said father. "He's the sort of man who likes good old-fashioned home cooking."

"I smiled at this, for I knew that Mr. Blakely lives at one of those exclusive New York clubs, where bachelors become more and more pampered and fastidious. I silently determined to have a dinner that would do credit to the family.

"You know, Lucile," said Cousin Fannie, when I told her that we ther never likes to have the edge of should begin the dinner with Cotuit oyster and bouillon, "that your fahis appetite taken off by anything before the turkey."

"But," I replied, "it would be impossible to begin with turkey. Mr. Blakely would think himself in the backwoods."

Cousin Fannie made no more objections to my plans, but she looked surprised when I said, having found her taking two pies out of the oven Wednesday afternoon, "Oh, we can't have pie! That's really a little too bucolic. A delicate dessert is much more appropriate after a heavy turkey dinner. I'd make that delicious creme renversee with vanilla sauce which I used to eat so often in Paris. Luckily I have a recipe for it."

As we sat down to the Thanksgiving dinner father said: "Now, Blakely, you won't find any of your fancy club dishes here. I knew you'd much prefer an old-fashioned dinner."

"Yes, indeed," agreed Mr. Blakely heartily, for of course he could say nothing else.

"What! Oysters?" exclaimed father. Then he looked at me again in surprise when Tilly brought in the soup, but I merely smiled. Then after he had carved the turkey he asked me for the cranberry sauce.

"I thought you'd like this better," I said, pointing to the pretty pink ice Tilly was bringing in sherbet cups.

"Well, I never ate Thanksgiving turkey before without cranberry sauce," he said, trying to laugh, but looking rather grumpy.

"I'm sure the ice is very refreshing," said Mr. Blakely, pleasantly, but I was surprised to see him make a wry face after tasting it.

"Lucile, it's salty!" exclaimed father.

I suppose I must have dipped into the salt jar instead of the sugar keg when I mixed it for Tilly. It's stupid to have salt and sugar on the same shelf. I should think mother would arrange the pantry better.

Mr. Blakely laughed and told a story about a man at the club who, thinking his bouillon was tea, spoiled it with sugar and cream. Cousin Fannie appeared so amused by this ancient yarn that he was encouraged to tell others of equal date. So the dinner passed off pleasantly until Tilly brought in the creme renversee. Father looked at me so reproachfully that I said, "Now, daddy dear, I made this French dessert myself, and I shall be hurt if you don't like it."

With a martyred air father took a spoonful of it and Mr. Blakely began eating his at the same instant. To my astonishment they both gasped and choked. Had not father been so dreadfully angry it would have been almost laughable to see them so red in the face and with tears in their eyes.

"Good heavens, Lucile! This is the hottest stuff I ever got into my mouth," exclaimed father, as soon as he could speak. "It seems to be made of Jamaica ginger."

"Oh, Cousin Fannie," I cried, "you must have told me the wrong bottle when I asked you where the vanila was. Isn't that too bad?"

"Too bad that we didn't have the regulation pumpkin and mince pies that I promised Mr. Blakely," broke in father, almost savagely.

"Miss Fannie, she baked some," spoke up Tilly, who never can learn that she is not expected to join in the family conversation.

"By George, I'm glad of it," said father. "Bring them on, Tilly. Fannie, you're always on deck at the right moment. You have saved the day, my dear."

Cousin Fannie looked pleased and she grew pink when Mr. Blakely, with rather heavy-footed gallantry, asked her pointedly if she had ever read Patmore's "The Angel in the House." I should not have thought she would care for a compliment from a silly old bachelor like Mr. Blakely. He is not so interesting as I had at first thought him.

It seems to me that after all my trouble in getting up the dinner father might have shown some appreciation instead of saying, after our guest was gone: "Well, Lucile, we won't try to entertain company again when your mother's away."

FATAL ACCIDENT.

Man Killed By Electric Car On South Main Street.

STUMBLED AND FELL ON THE TRACK

Thought Spare Car Was Regular and Wished to Go to Monson.

Elisha Holmes, 75, a veteran of the Civil war, was struck and fatally injured by an electric car on South Main street about 1.15 yesterday afternoon. He received a fractured skull and other injuries.

Mr. Holmes for the past few weeks had been living with Fred Sherman on his farm near State Line, in the lower part of Monson. Yesterday he came to Palmer to sign his pension papers. He was about town during the middle of the day and a little after 1 in the afternoon was on South Main street when a spare electric car was being taken to the car barn. Evidently thinking that it was a Monson car, he stepped into the street to hail it. The car did not slacken speed, and as it came close to Holmes he stumbled and pitched directly in front of the car; he was so close that there was no possibility of stopping it.

Dr. H. C. Cheney was summoned and Holmes was taken to the home of his daughter, Mrs. Ernest Dewey, opposite the lower end of the agricultural grounds, where he died about 10 o'clock at night.

Dynamo Goes On Strike.

And Street Lights Are Minus In Consequence. Cars Held Up.

There was a bit of hard luck at the electric power station Monday afternoon, when one of the big generators jacked up its job and left the company with a scarcity of electricity for the street railway service. The trouble occurred at the time of heaviest travel, and caused no little inconvenience. The load on all the machinery at the time of the day was an unusual one, as it was an unusually dark day and lights were being frequently used wherever they were installed. In the afternoon and for the first of the night the street lights were cut out, and a man stationed at the switchboard to disconnect some street railway circuit when the load on the wires approached the danger point. Passengers on several lines were annoyed by being left without power for a few moments at a time, but all lines managed to get through after some delay. The situation was rendered double disagreeable because of the severe rain storm of the evening. As one of the new water wheels has been put into operation since that time, a repetition of the trouble is not expected.

School Dental Inspection.

Teeth of All Pupils to be Examined in the Near Future.

The school committee has arranged, following the example of many of the schools hereabouts, to have the teeth of the pupils of the public schools examined by experts, and reports made to the parents of the conditions found. A letter is being prepared which will be sent to the parents of every pupil in the schools, explaining what it is proposed to do, so that the matter will be thoroughly understood. If the parent does not wish to have the inspection made it will not be done if he so requests. The carrying out of the plan is expected to be productive of much good, both now and in the future.

The school committee has also adopted new rules concerning the medical inspection of the pupils.

Killed at North Wilbraham.

Richard Ashe Struck by Boston and Albany Freight Train.

Richard Ashe, 55, of North Wilbraham was instantly killed Saturday evening by being struck by a Boston and Albany freight train while crossing the railroad tracks near the North Wilbraham station. The body was picked up by the crew of the train and taken to the station, where it was viewed by Medical Examiner S. J. Russell of Springfield.

The identity of the man was at first unknown, and Dr. Russell ordered the body removed to Sampson's parlors in Springfield, where it was identified early Sunday morning.

Mr. Ashe was born in Ireland, coming to this county when a young man. For some time he was employed in the paper mills in Holyoke and for a few years preceding his death was employed in the various mills in North Wilbraham. He leaves besides his widow, a sister, Mrs. Anna Stack of Bridgeport, Ct.

Historical Society Meeting.

Interesting Lecture On the Real Indian Of New England.

The meeting of the Historical society Tuesday evening was devoted to an illustrated lecture by Prof. J. T. Bowne of Springfield on the real Indian of New England, which was both interesting and educational. Prof. Bowne has made a special study of the primitive condition of the Indians of New England and elsewhere in America for many years, and was able to embody in his lecture many things which were corrective of erroneous opinions which had obtained in regard to them. For instance, the primitive Indian never cut down a tree with a stone axe, but burned them down, and burned out the trunks of trees to form the dugout or tree canoe; stone was never used for spear heads, but the spear was formed of sharpeded stick, hardened in the fire and smoothed to a point by rubbing down with a stone. They had no domestic animals of any kind. They never had metallic money, but about the time the white man came wampum formed from shells was used as a substitute. The lecturer made a statement which is new to most people, viz:—That the Indian had no clear idea of the nature of the deed which he gave to the white man. He evidently supposed that it was simply a permit for the white man to occupy the land in connection with the Indians, for in the early deeds so given, the Indians reserved the right to fish, hunt and plant corn as he ever had done. The pictures thrown on the screen by the lecturer were copies of rare and unique drawings made by Champlain and other early navigators more than 400 years ago, illustrative of Indian customs and costumes, which were very interesting. The lecture was also illustrated by some beautiful specimens of stone relics of Indian production, borrowed for the occasion from the Historical society. A hearty vote of thanks was given Professor Bowne for his instructive lecture; also to Mr. Newell of Three Rivers for the use of his stereopticon.

Shot Calf For Deer.

West Springfield Hunter Makes Mistake In Belchertown.

A certain engineer on the Boston and Albany railroad, with West Springfield as his place of residence, found the recent deer season a most unprofitable one. He sallied forth to Belchertown, confident of getting a fine specimen. After tramping the woods for several hours, he was about to give up when he heard a rustle in a nearby bush. He made sure that his target was a quadruped and fired. Upon investigation, however, he discovered that the animal was a fine heifer, and after settling with the owner he was minus about $50. It is stated that he has no further desire to hunt deer.

THIEVES MAKE A RAID.

Break Into Edmunds' Restaurant Saturday Night.

BUT GET LITTLE FOR THEIR PAINS.

Break Window to Get In. Eat Pie and Smash Eggs. Frightened Away. There is No Clue.

Thieves — evidently amateurs at the business of "breaking and entering" made a raid on the bakery and restaurant of Thomas Edmunds on Main street Saturday night, but beyond mussing things up to some extent and taking a small amount of valuables, did no serious damage. Entrance was effected by breaking two panes of glass in a rear window and crawling through the hole. A cash register was broken open, but there was little money to reward them for their trouble and danger. A lot of eggs which were in the kitchen were broken, and a box of cigars was taken away. Apparently the intruders had an appetite for pie, for they had sampled various kinds. A package of silverware wrapped up to take away was left behind, showing that the thieves were evidently frightened by something. They went through a rear door, which was left open in their hurry. There is no clue as to who they were.

Warren Company Files Bond.

Puts Up $100,000 Security to Do Business in West Springfield.

The Warren Power company, which is extremely solicitous to sell electricity in Palmer, Ludlow, Chicopee and West Springfield, after generating it in West Warren, has filed a bond of $100,000 with the town of West Springfield as a guarantee that it will have "juice" there within nine months, this being one of the considerations on which the franchise was granted in that town. The company has been given a franchise in Palmer, but the conditions have not yet been named by the selectmen.

AGRICULTURAL ANNUAL.

Fair of 1912 Shows Balance on Right Side of Ledger.

NEW SECRETARY AND NEW TREASURER

L. E. Chandler Retires After Eleven Years of Service. List of Officers Elected.

The annual meeting of the Eastern Hampden Agricultural society was held in the district court room Monday afternoon. There was a small attendance, only 33 being present.

The treasurer reported that the receipts of the year had been $7881 and the expenses $7744; there is $138 in the treasury, and a net amount of about $250 yet to come. The net profits of this year's fair were estimated at $2000 or over, out of which the indebtedness of the society was reduced $1600; interest charges and unpaid bills of last year used up the balance. The indebtedness of the society is about $7000.

These officers were elected: President, O. E. Bradway of Monson; vice presidents, H. D. Vaille of Monson and J. T. Geer of Three Rivers; secretary, H. C. Ellithorpe of Palmer; treasurer, G. E. Clough of Palmer; directors, C. H. Keith, F. L. Jones, F. J. Hamilton, J. O. Hamilton, James Summers, L. E. Chandler of Palmer; F. D. Rogers, W. M. Tucker, F. A. Moore, G. C. Flynt, A. H. Burdick of Monson; Orrin Hicks of Brimfield, J. K. Butler and A. H. Edson of North Wilbraham; C. P. Bolles of Wilbraham, G. A. Chapin of Hampden, F. C. Burton of East Longmeadow, E. Howard of Belchertown; auditor, W. M. Tucker of Monson; L. E. Chandler, who has served 11 years as secretary, refused a re-election.

It was voted to leave the renting of the fair grounds, for any purposes, including the privileges at the annual fair next fall, in the care of Mr. Chandler, who has successfully handled the privileges during the time he has held the office of secretary. The amount received from privileges this year was the largest in the history of the society, over $1000. The matter of a "Bee" or more than one, by members to do some of the repairs about the grounds and so save expense, was discussed, and left with Mr. Chandler with full power to make needed arrangements. It seemed to be the sentiment of those present that the plan could be worked to good advantage.

Protest Against Franchise.

Central Mass. Electric Co. Objects to Warren Co. in Palmer.

As predicted in the Journal last week, the Central Massachusetts Electric company has made objection to the granting of a franchise in the town of Palmer to the Warren Power company to set poles and install wires for the purpose of selling electricity in the town, the company being well within the time in which, after the granting of the franchise, the protest must be made to be considered. The state board of gas and electric light commissioners yesterday received such a petition from the Central Massachusetts company.

Under the law the state board can, if it deems it advisable, annul the action of the Palmer selectmen in giving the second company authority to come into the town, and it is this action that the Central Massachusetts company wishes the commission to take.

The commission will give a public hearing on the matter before taking any action in the case, and at this hearing anyone wishing to be heard will be given an opportunity to express his views. The date of this public hearing has not been decided upon.

Electric Co.'s New Power.

One of the Three New Water Wheels Now Working Full Time.

One of the three new water wheels which the Central Massachusetts Electric company has been installing at its power plant at Blanchardville the past summer is now busy at work generating "juice" for the company's customers. It was given a six-hours' hard test Wednesday afternoon, and at midnight the commercial load was given to it to handle, and it has been continuously on the job since. It furnishes power for the house and street light systems, and barring accidents there should be an ample supply of power on these lines from now on. The other two wheels are expected to be in operation soon. The operation of the new wheel will enable the company to give about 500-horse power additional to the street railway.

Federal Grand Trunk Probe.

Now Under Way. What a New York Paper Thinks of Mellen.

The federal grand jury began Tuesday in New York an investigation of the traffic agreement between the Grand Trunk and the New Haven roads. It is this agreement which is alleged to have been responsible for the stoppage of work on the Southern New England branch between Palmer and Providence. The inquiry was begun November 21, but was postponed to allow the railroads to submit their books and records, which they agreed to do.

In this connection the following, which appeared in a recent issue of the New York Globe and Commercial Advertiser, and was sent to the Journal by a New York man owning property in Brimfield as expressing his sentiments, will be found interesting reading:

There's a good old story of a negro who entered an office one summer's day to see for the first time an electric fan in full action. He watched it uneasily. By and by he said to the chief clerk:

"'Scuse me, suhr; but ef yo' all doan tek that squirrel outen that cage, he gwine bust his heart."

Consider New England the squirrel and Charles Sanger Mellen's various lines of transportation the cage, and you have a fair idea of what is going on in the granite states. New England has already worked up a fair case of palpitation—and Mr. Mellen won't let it out. For the purposes of this narrative Attorney-General Wickersham may be billed as the old negro, who is watching the proceedings with an interest bordering on alarm. Grand jury proceedings are threatened to examine into the manner in which Mr. Mellen is keeping out of New England the competition threatened by the Grand Trunk road. And Mr. Mellen's temperature remains about as usual—which is a cellar below subnormal.

To do this he has fought almost every man in New England he hasn't hired. He has been in constant hot water in the legislatures and courts. He has closed some of New England's most prosperous ports, and boosted commuting rates, and intimated that the bankers of Boston did a strictly retail business. Merchants along his lines have been in a continual ferment to the railway commissions. The only weak spot on his map was along the line of the Central Vermont, which pursued a wandering course to New London. It was under lease to the Grand Trunk, but until the city of Providence began to moan in its sleep when it dreamed of Mellen the Canadian road paid little attention to its possession. Providence induced the Grand Trunk to build a fourteen mile branch from Palmer and tap that rich territory. When the Grand Trunk began to build Mellen began to fight.

He fought that fourteen-mile link from the Legislatures and the courts and the banks and every other ambush a more than ordinarily fertile mind could find. A few months ago it looked as though the Grand Trunk would win. It had expended millions of dollars and had whipped Mellen at every point of contact. The unfortunate thing about Mellen is that he doesn't stay whipped. The Department of Justice now fears that he has coaxed the Grand Trunk into a twenty-five-year-long bag—and has sewed that bag so tight that it is law-proof. Mellen's bland readiness to turn over his records to Mr. Wickersham's examiners gives legs to this fear. The Department of Justice thinks it would take an autopsy to find the Grand Trunk's canary. Mellen's New England monopoly is complete.

It is sufficiently apparent that when Mr. J. Pierpoint Morgan called Mellen to the presidency of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad he had a ready-made plan by which he hoped to secure an actual monopoly of the freight and passenger traffic of the five New England states. He picked Mellen because Mellen had come home with the chestnuts before. He is not a stock market dabbler. He isn't startling rich. But he is one of the great railroad operators of the United States—that statement holding good in spite of the New Haven's appalling list of accidents in the past few years. In ten years Mellen has driven the Vanderbilts out of New England by forcing them to agree to a practical partnership through a traffic agreement in the Boston and Albany road. He has seized every steamboat line that was worth having and bankrupted the others and grabbed all the trolleys. He has secured control of all the docks, and of every steam road except one. It looked as though he had New England in a bundle and the string tied.

SUICIDE BY HANGING.

Palmer Man Found Dead in His Shop Monday Afternoon.

LIFE HAD BEEN EXTINCT SOME TIME

Ira F. Brown, in a Fit of Despondency, Takes His Life in Peculiar Manner.

Ira F. Brown committed suicide by hanging in his shop over the blacksmith shop of James Summers on Thorndike street Monday. It is not known just what time the deed was done, but it is supposed to have been about 11 in the morning. He was last seen alive about that time, and at 1 in the afternoon, when found, had been dead for some time.

The work was done in an unusual manner. A window cord had been made fast by both ends to a beam in the ceiling, and a noose tied in the loop of the lower end. The noose had then been placed about the throat and the body was suspended by it, the knees touching the floor. A low chair stood on one side and a barrel on the other, but it is not known if either were used in the preparations, though the man might have sat on either and slid off after adjusting the noose. Death was caused by strangulation, and there were no evidences of a struggle. The absence of any such signs and the position of the body evidenced a determination to end his life. The body was discovered by F. D. Thompson of South Main street, a blacksmith, who had some business with Brown and went to see him about it. He summoned help and the body was taken down and Medical Examiner J. P. Schneider summoned. He ordered the body removed to Phillips' undertaking rooms.

Brown was a sign and carriage painter and a carpenter; recently he has had a shop over Summers' blacksmith shop. He was an unusually fine workman when sober, but for years had been addicted to intemperance and suffered a consequent loss of business. When under the influence of liquor he was irritable and morose, and it is supposed his action was taken because of mental depression, as those who saw him Monday forenoon noted that he was not sober. He had not been living with his family for some time.

He was born in Brimfield 43 years ago, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank I. Brown of Springfield, recently of Palmer. He is survived by a widow, two sons and one daughter. He also leaves a father and mother and three sisters. The funeral was held Wednesday afternoon from Phillips' undertaking rooms, Rev. Otto S. Raspe of the Universalist church officiating; burial was in the Oak Knoll cemetery.

Night School Opened.

School Committee Grants Use of Two Rooms in Three Rivers.

At the request of citizens of Three Rivers the school committee has granted the use of two rooms in the grammar school building in that village for use for evening school purposes. The action was taken after consultation with the State Board of Education and the town counsel. The grant is made subject to such restrictions as may be imposed by the Palmer superintendent of schools. The evening school has been in operation about two weeks and numbers about 70 members, principally men who are interested in perfecting themselves so as to be able to secure naturalization papers.

Clothesline Thieves Working.

Police Notified, But Find Hard Work Getting Any Clues.

That clothesline thieves are at work again is made apparent from several complaints made recently to the police of losses in different sections of the town. In no case has the loss been material, but the thefts have been annoying and there is a natural dislike to part with perfectly good wearing apparel needlessly. Clothes which have been left over night have disappeared, and no clues have been discoverable as to the identity of the offenders. There will be a time of reckoning, however, if they are caught.

Early Morning Train Doesn't Stop.

With the change of time on the Boston and Albany railroad a few days ago, an additional train now goes through Palmer without stopping, the 2.02 a. m. express for New York. It has been the custom to stop this train at Palmer if there were passengers for New York, but now any such must take an earlier train to Springfield.

WINNING OF DOLLY

Thrilling Encounter With Bandits Puts Pompous Italian Count to Rout.

By H. S. CANFIELD, JR.

Arnold was already heartily tired of the disguise. It was his nature to do all things openly and above board; and it irked him to have to stoop to subterfuge, even in the struggle for the hand of the woman he held above all. Besides, for a man who had never answered to the call or the craze of the petrol, goggles, high-collared coat and bunglesome cap formed a discomfitting rampart behind which to hide features and form. With a growling imprecation against stubborn fathers and fate, who kept him fighting for his share of the world's goods instead of endowing him with such at short notice, Arnold swept the big, rakish-looking car in a viciously short curve and brought it to a panting standstill before the Leonard mansion in the Upper Drive.

To his associates and enemies alike on 'Change, "Old Bull" Leonard was the personification of what all good mothers warn their sons against growing up into. He was just as merciless and cruel as his rise to fortune was sudden and spectacular. The one soft spot in his heart was for Dolly, and her request for an imported car of fabulous horsepower and an instructor in its ways and tricks of locomotion, was granted readily. The recognition of struggling young Arnold had been the one request against which the old broker had hardened his heart. The influence of a young man, well liked for his personal qualities, is sometimes as far reaching as that of an old man well munitioned with gold, and Arnold had experienced no difficulty in landing the place as instructor in auto driving to the beautiful Dolly Leonard.

Arnold had no chance to step from the car after it had stopped. His heart warmed and his face flushed happily at the suddenness with which Dolly threw open the doors and almost ran to the curbing in response to the "honk, honk" of the horn. Dolly had admitted her love for him when Arnold had first poured forth his story of his passion for her; and she was not ashamed to show that she had been awaiting him just as eagerly as he had whisked the big car along over the boulevards. It was the lesson in love, all the better for the subterfuge and evasion of authority, which appealed to the girl, not the dry, technical explanations of this and that part of the steering gear, through the impartation of which Arnold was supposed to be earning the dollars of her father.

Dolly was ravishing in her auto toggery. The carelessly drawn veil hid just enough of the pink ear nearest the begoggled Arnold to make him long to press his lips just below it, a desire which imperiled both occupants of the car as they sped along. Incidentally, Dolly learned that such a thing as a clutch existed somewhere about the brightly new machine and that certain twists of the wheel did certain things; also that the gear box wasn't under the hood. She soon forgot even these vague intimations of mechanical knowledge upon the part of her lover. But the things she did not forget were the long, sweet silences following short, half whispered sentences as Arnold brought the machine to a snail's pace along the cool country roads and slipped one arm around her waist and half up about her shoulder so that she might lean her head close to his.

Through the long summer the rides continued. It was not until in the splendid autumn that the Count Rivoli put in his appearance, in search of some fair American girl with whom went a handsome dot to repair the financial standing of his family.

With the advent of the Italian, impecunious as his rival, Arnold's pains and pangs began. The evident pleasure evinced by Leonard pere in having a nobleman as a suitor in his daughter's train acted not as a balm for the wounds of the young broker. It was bad enough for him to know that it was the Count Rivoli who almost nightly enjoyed the hospitality of the Leonard mansion or occupied a seat in a box beside the charming Dolly, without having insult added to injury by the presence of the Italian fortune seeker as one of the motoring party. As the afternoons passed in speeding over the roads, with Arnold bound by the restrictions which surround ordinary chauffeurs, while the Count sat snuggled up with Dolly and insisted upon murmuring his tender speeches for her ears alone, the situation became almost unbearable to the American. At times the muscles in his shoulders became taut and strained against the power of his self restraint as some few words of the Italian's reached his ears.

Once, when Rivoli took it upon himself to give the orders for the party in a tone and manner insulting to even the most regularly employed chauffeur, it was a hurried, surreptitious touch on his arm from Dolly's slender fingers that kept him from striking out with his clinched hand and knocking the arrogantly sneering foreigner to the ground. He seldom caught a word with Dolly now since her titled suitor, under parental sponsorship, had monopolized her every leisure hour. Dolly cared not a whit for the Count; she liked his companionship even less; but the workings of the young lady's mind were many and involved and she knew where was drawn the line over which she must not step in openly opposing the wishes of her father.

It was Count Rivoli who proposed motoring to the inn far out along the lake shore, supping there and returning late by moonlight. To Dolly, psychologically, was conveyed the Italian's intention to put his future happiness—or financial standing—to the test; Arnold had become too grumpy and saturnine to be open even to the most openly intimated purpose upon the part of his rival. Self aggrandizement was not the least important topic to which Rivoli devoted his musical voice and captivating accent. The Italian was a splendid talker, when his words reached only the ears of women, and with an air of modesty cloaking his utterances, he contrived to dwell at length and at all times upon his heroic achievements. According to the Count Rivoli, the courage of the Count Rivoli knew no bounds; for Mees Doll-ee he would dare any danger, go to any length to win a smile from her lips. So it was as the three, Dolly, the Count and Arnold, sped back over the roads, white in the soft moonlight. Dolly had ceased to answer even in monosyllables, allowing the Italian to run on, building up the pedestal upon which he was to take his stand.

"I am glad that you have no brigands here, Mees Doll-ee," he was saying in a tone which promised reminiscence. "But when one comes right down to it, it is not good to have no opportunities for excitement save for dodging death in these terrible streets of yours. Just before I left my home in Italy, I myself escaped death or capture at the hands of what you call hold-up men. Had I not been so prompt and cool of action, shot one man where he stood and put the others to flight, I would have—"

A growling curse burst from Arnold. He threw on the brakes with grinding force and Dolly and the Count were abruptly huddled together by the gear-tearing stop of the car. With an impatient, explosive Italian word, Rivoli sprang up. Suddenly, with his face gone to a sickly pallor, his jaw dropping till his mouth gaped open, he sank back weakly upon the cushions.

"Ah-ah-ah-ah—" he mumbled unintelligibly, and then sat in quaking silence.

"Come on there, the three of you—up with your paws!" came the rasping command. Three men, the weird moonlight making their faces pale where they showed below the masks, stepped close to the wheels of the panting car.

Rivoli's hands went weakly trembling above his head. Dolly in quiet fear, never taking her eyes from Arnold's profile, showing as he half turned, obediently raised her daintily gloved hands. Arnold fumbled for a moment somewhere about the car, and then too shot up his arms.

A terse order sent two of the men to the sides of Arnold and the Count. The leader turned his attention to Dolly. The girl obediently stripped off her gloves. For the first time she seemed to notice Rivoli and a glance of contempt was his share.

The first bright ring came off without difficulty, but the second brought forth an oath and a cruel wrench. Involuntarily a little cry escaped from between Dolly's clenched teeth.

Quick as a flash Arnold's hand came down; quicker still he turned back to where the leader tugged at the girl's delicate fingers. The cry of warning from one of the men in the white rad came too late. The girl remembered ever after the fierceness of the cold rage in Arnold's face. The heavy wrench flashed up bright in the moonlight and then came crashing down. The leader sank down without a groan. With a feeling of sickening revulsion Dolly heard the cry of almost feminine terror that escaped Rivoli's lips.

Arnold was out in the road now, grappling desperately. He tore himself free and sent one of his assailants spinning to the macadam. As the two fled, one paused a moment in the shadows. There was a vicious report and Arnold clutched weakly at the air as he turned sick from the shock. Then his knees buckled under him and he sank down in a huddled heap.

It was Dolly who bore the greater part of the burden of lifting the wounded man and propping him up on the cushions in the tonneau. Her hands were the ones that held the wheel in the mad ride back to the city. To policemen who signaled her to slow up the girl gave a significant nod toward the unconscious man beside her in the front seat and let out another notch.

When Arnold awoke, he wondered for a moment at his surroundings. A pressure of something soft in his hand and a suspicious wetness on the back of his fingers cleared away the clouds. With a smile hiding the shooting pain in his shoulder, he turned his head till his eyes could feast on Dolly. Neither cared to speak. Arnold understood that she had brought him home, to her home.

"A-a-ahem!" broke in the pompous, warning cough of "Old Bull" Leonard. Arnold tried to free his hand; but Dolly held to it with gentle firmness. Her father pretended not to see "Something of a fighter; yes, something of a fighter," rumbled the voice of Leonard pere, and he actually smiled down upon the astonished Arnold.

"Young man, I am looking for fighters to aid me," he rumbled on. "I need young blood to brace up the old in my struggles. But, of course, you will not be fit for some time. Take your time, my boy, take your time."

With an absence of his habitual frown, he ignored the creeping of Dolly's other hand into Arnold's free one and walked quietly from the room.

THEIR INVITED GUESTS AT SUBURBAN HOME

When Perkins, without consulting Mrs. Perkins, invited Hinchett to spend a week end with him and his wife at their suburban home, he made the error of failing to pry into Hinchett's family affairs as a preliminary move. He realized later that he should have put Hinchett through the third degree of the census bureau before extending the invitation. Thus he would have escaped the confusion that overwhelmed him on the Saturday when Hinchett descended upon the Perkins establishment with one wife, two children and one brindle bulldog.

"I had to bring the dog," explained Hinchett brightly, when Perkins met him at the foot of the steps, "because there is no one in our apartment house that I could trust with him. Good old Bruno! He has to be fed just so or he is unhappy. Mrs. Hinchett," he went on, with a wave of his hand toward his wife, "and the little Hinchetts."

Perkins knew that his wife was watching the reception from behind the living room curtains and that his standing at his domestic hearth depended upon his carrying the matter off with the air of its being quite what he had expected.

"Come right in," exclaimed Perkins, heartily, as the children began pulling the geraniums out of his wife's flower boxes beside the steps. "Glad you brought the dog. He'll be company for our dog. Let me take your suitcases."

"Oh, there's a hammock!" Mrs. Hinchett exclaimed, making a dive for it. "I'm just worn out with the long trip from our place and the railroad drive and then the walk up here in the sun. You won't mind if I lie down a minute, will you?"

"Lillian isn't very strong," Hinchett explained.

"Certainly not!" Perkins told her. "Go right ahead, Mrs. Hinchett, and get rested. That's what we're here for."

She tumbled into the hammock and Hinchett went down into the front yard to encourage Bruno in digging up the pansy bed that Mrs. Perkins had been working over all season. As Perkins walked into the hall with the satchels his wife seized him.

"Why didn't you tell me these people had children?" she hissed into his ear. "I could have gone away or got scarlet fever or something. You know that I've nobody to help me with the housework. And I was planning to make jelly today."

"Hinchett held out on me," murmured Perkins. "He never mentined the kids. For the love of Pete, go and talk to 'em."

"And that woman in the hammock is the one you said would help me make jelly if I let them come today," his wife said witheringly.

"Maybe she will," countered Perkins. "You haven't asked her yet."

Then Mrs. Perkins coaxed up a welcoming smile for the guests and went out to meet them, murmuring words of sympathy for Mrs. Hinchett, whose fatigue threatened to become permanent. About that time the Perkins fox terrier arrived from an excursion into foreign fields. When the two men had pried the bulldog loose from the fox terrier's neck Perkins took his dog into the basement and chained him to the furnace.

While Mrs. Hinchett, from the depths of the hammock, was explaining to Mrs. Perkins how badly she felt most of the time and how quickly she succumbed before exercise of any kind, Perkins took Hinchett down to show him the village hall, and the other sights of which the residents of the suburb are justly proud. He wanted to get away from the atmosphere of the berries, which his wife had stocked up with to make jelly that day. When they returned an hour or so later they found the Hinchett's litboy had set fire to the barn, which had been saved by a remarkable demonstration of energy on the part of his mother, ably assisted by Mrs. Parkins, in pumping water and passing buckets.

Dinner was not exactly a joyous meal, inasmuch as Mrs. Perkins kept thinking of new things to say to her husband after the Hinchetts were gone, and Hinchett whiled a way the hour with a detailed description of his courting days up to the moment when Lillian shyly consented to be his. Then before the men had finished their cigars after dinner the Hinchetts' girl fell out of a cherry tree and broke her collarbone trying to get the only two cherries on the tree.

"I'm afraid we'll have to go home with her," sighed Mrs. Hinchett.

"Oh, must you go?" Mrs. Perkins asked, while Perkins dashed upstairs for the suitcases.

When the guests had been safely placed upon the train Perkins turned to his wife with both hands held aloft.

"Never again!" he said fervently. "That week end thing isn't what it's advertised to be."

His wife smiled grimly. "We'll have to hurry home," she said. "You have a hard day's work ahead of you yet—making jelly."

"But it's late," protested Perkins.

"It will be a great deal later before you get to bed tonight," returned Mrs. Perkins.—Chicago Daily News.

What Makes Snow Warm.

Snow is warm by virtue of its light and woolly texture. But it is also warm on account of its whiteness. Had snow been black, it would have absorbed the heat of the sun and melted quickly. Instead, it reflects heat, and the reflected heat falls upon bodies above the snow, while the warmth of the earth is preserved beneath it.

Old friends are best.

AT THE END OF THE LONG CAR RIDE

By EDMUND MOBERLY.

Whenever he could do so without seeming rude, Kenneth Craig allowed his gaze to rest upon the girl who, like himself, stood waiting for a car. He was spending a few months at home, after several years in the tropics. During those years, he had been able to associate with few of the women of his race, and he now found positive delight in the mere sight of such a radiant, tailor-made vision as the one a few feet from him.

A car came along and they boarded it. It was well filled, and after she had seated herself, there remained but one vacant seat—the place by her side, which he straightaway took. An acquaintance of Kenneth's, thinking he was accompanying the girl, bowed to him, at the same time raising his hat. Kenneth returned the bow, and absent-mindedly followed the other's example as to the hat. In the next instant, he would have given anything to recall his action, for he saw that she had noted it, and construed it as an impertinence.

The conductor approached them, and when Kenneth handed him a dime, he promptly rang up two fares, assuming the pair to be companions, and being in blissful ignorance of the fact that the girl was at that moment delving in her handbag for her purse.

"Your paying my fare was an act of unpardonable presumption," said a cool voice at his side.

"Very well," he replied. "Shall I call the conductor? Or do you prefer to cancel the debt by simply handing me five cents?"

"The latter method will serve," she decided, and again began to search for her purse.

Suddenly she grew red and nervous. "I cannot find my purse; it isn't in my bag," she faltered.

"I'm very sorry," he replied, solicitously polite.

"Oh, it isn't the loss that I mind; it was but a small sum—but now I cannot cancel my obligation to you."

"It is a trifling matter. Let us forget it," he urged.

"Indeed we must not. You must let me know where I may send the money."

"Oh, very well. If you insist, here is my card. It has my address on it."

The car stopped at his street, and when he left it, he was mildly surprised to see that she did the same. He bought a paper, and she passed him. When he started toward his home, he noticed that she was just ahead.

He tramped along, reading the headlines of his paper, and when he reached his home, he was amazed to see her standing on the front porch.

"Are you following me?" she asked defiantly, as he ascended the steps.

"Not in the way you mean," he replied with a smile.

"Then why do you come here?"

"Do you know whose house this is?" he asked, answering question with question.

"Yes."

"Then will you kindly look at the card which you so disdainfully thrust unread into your bag while on the car?"

The card was quickly found. She read it with a gasp. "You are Elsa Craig's brother," she exclaimed, in pretty confusion. "Oh, why didn't I look at this card before?"

"And you are—?" he hinted.

"I'm Barbara Page, Elsa's roommate and chum at college.

Kenneth looked at her intently. "So you are Barbara Page," he said musingly. "Elsa wrote me much about you while I was in Brazil—but, by the way, you weren't expected until tomorrow, were you?"

"No; I am a day ahead. My father was traveling this way today, so I came as far as the city with him, leaving my baggage to follow."

"Elsa won't be home for an hour or two yet," he said, opening the door. "Won't you come in?"

"Will you go to your room, or will you bear me company in the living-room until sister arrives?" he asked as they entered. "Such a pleasure as chatting with a real, live American girl has been almost entirely denied me during the last three years, and in view of the fact that you are indebted to me for the sum of——"

"If you start by mentioning that, I shall assuredly go to my room," she broke in with a laugh, as she entered the living-room.

She sang his favorite songs to him, and played the compositions of his favorite composers.

"Miss Page, did Elsa ever talk to you about me?" he asked, after an hour and a half had slipped by and no Elsa had appeared. "It is a rather strange question, but I have a special reason for asking it."

"Oh, yes," she replied, "but I think I ought to go to my room now."

"Please hear me first," he said. "Last summer, when you and Elsa graduated, she wrote me that she could not bear separation from you, and that if I wished to prove myself a loving brother, I must come home and marry you, so that she could have you for a sister. I—I wish to prove myself a loving brother——"

She started to flee, but found him in her path.

"Please let me pass," she pleaded. "Two hours ago we had never seen each other."

There was a light step on the porch outside and someone entered the hall.

"Is that you, Elsa?" he called.

"Yes, Ken," answered a voice outside the door.

"Come in here and persuade my future wife," he said, "to take me seriously as her future husband."

WHEN MR. PHILBIN WENT ON THE STAGE

By FLORENCE NEYHART.

"Speaking of trials," said Mrs. Philbin in a conversational tone, "Albert has gone on the stage!"

"Not really?" the other women shrieked after they had caught their breaths.

"No," said Mrs. Philbin, "not really—just on the amateur stage. But it's lots worse than real acting. I don't know anything better calculated to make a staid, grown-up man kick up his heels, buy new neckties and generally conduct himself in a kittenish way than a request that he lend his presence to an amateur production. It bolsters him up in his secret conviction that he is a perfect mine of undiscovered genius.

"'Oh, no!' he said at first. 'You don't want me! I never acted in anything in my life and I can't do it! I'd ruin the piece! Get some one else! I'd ruin the piece! Get some one else!' Afterward he told me that he hated to disoblige them but he really couldn't do it. I congratulated him on his good sense, whereupon he looked at me as though he had caught me trying to poison him. He said he regretted to see how little confidence I had in his ability and was pained at my exhibition of jealousy.

"Then he raced to the 'phone and told the committee that just to oblige them and help them out of a hole he'd take the part.

"After that Albert was lost to the family. He passed three whole evenings running his hands through his hair and memorizing his part. If I spoke to him he would stare at me wildly as though he belonged to another sphere and resented my advent into it.

"After he went to the first rehearsal life became very hard at home because Albert took to going over what he called the 'business' of his part. It is disconcerting to have a man, even if he is your husband, rush at you from behind portieres and wander about with the furniture in his hands muttering to himself!

"Mrs. Lemmock called one evening and walked in just as Albert tore through from the dining room into the parlor shaking his fist and yelling, 'I have you now, you moral leper, and your life—your life is not worth an hour's purchase!' You can't blame Mrs. Lemmock for taking it personally, especially as Albert's fist was flourished within an inch of her nose.

"During this time if I remarked to Albert that the cook was going to leave he would stare at me and say, 'So—at last, Montmorency, I have unmasked you!' It was impossible to carry on any conversation with Albert for weeks. He was always bursting out with bits of his part. Finally he insisted on my learning the part that dovetailed with his so that he could practice at home.

"Now, I love my husband and always try to please him, but I consider this my crowning act of self-sacrifice. Of course Albert was working for public applause, but if any one wants to know what is my idea of zero in pleasant pastimes I should mention rehearsing a part that you aren't going to play. Anyhow, it's upsetting to have your own husband lean over you tenderly, gaze into your eyes and make desperate love to you in dime novel style! It makes you feel so queer!

"By the third rehearsal Albert had begun to talk about his art and to speak of well known stage people by their first names. He mentioned the public as though he had it eating out of his hand and he adopted the stage walk. When he stalked downstairs he thudded like a camel and when he stalked upstairs I always thought of elephants. He knocked all the bric-a-brac to pieces parading through the rooms and when he talked he either boomed or hissed. He demanded potatoes in a voice of tragedy and took to standing before mirrors in profile, frowning over his shape. He said the mirrors were old and worn out and gave him a curve out instead of a curve in.

"He got terribly fretful and when I objected he told me that I should make allowances for the artistic temperament and that the stage manager had told him if he had gone on the stage when he was a youth he undoubtedly would have rivaled Mansfield. Albert gloomed and tyrannized and had me jumping six ways at once hunting up his costume and buying grease paint and eyebrow pencils and false hair and letting him repeat his part to me and assuring him that he was entrancing in it.

"When I was worn to shreds the play was given and I had my revenge. I went around into the wings to see if Albert needed any help and fell over a shivering, crouching, chattering individual trying to hide between a canvas tree and a rustic gate. To my amazement it was Albert.

"He grabbed me with two ice cold hands and clung to me for dear life. He said he'd die if he had to get out there before all those people. Oh, he moaned, wouldn't I save him?

"I looked him in the eye and said, 'Albert, this is just another phase of the artistic temperament and I won't flicker an eyelash to help you! And if you fail in your part I—I'll leave home!'

"Albert was ill two days after the play from the nervous strain and when he got up and around he was quite sane again. And I may add, he's a great deal more humble than he used to be!"

VIRGINIA, MESSALINE, AND PANNIER OF ROSEBUDS

"Pink messaline with pannier of rose point and a wee cluster of rosebuds on the ruffle and fichu. In-express-ib-ly sweet!" Kitty was an exclamation point of admiration.

Virginia regarded her younger sister with the expression of a yearning missionary. "Kitty, I wish you'd devote less thought to mere externals," she said.

Undisturbed, Kitty surveyed her sister, immaculate in unruffled, unrumpled, tailored linen. "Of course, Virginia, you're a distinguished settlement angel and all that, but if you don't think more about clothes you'll gradually drop off even the semi-feminine touches and emerge as Dr. Mary Walker," she declared, severely.

"And sis is really a good looker," put in Tom.

Virginia, patient disapproval personified, absent-mindedly salted her breakfast food instead of her egg. "A woman with a sense of her responsibilities," she murmured, "realizes that life is too short to waste on such a trivial consideration. Uplifting humanity—"

Tom said "Excuse me!" and fled.

"Or the pursuit of some equally serious and worthy purpose should occupy her time and thoughts to the exclusion of frivolous, light-headed—"

Kitty rose. "Sorry, Jinny. I'd love to listen. Makes me feel like a little demon, but I'm going to don my ravishing pink batiste and loll over to Dorthy's. Her cousin, fresh from Harvard, arrived yesterday, and I think I'll wake up Bob to the treasure he's won if I chain the welcome stranger to my chariot wheels, first chance."

Virginia was truly shocked. "Kitty! Have you so far forgotten the modesty becoming a young woman newly engaged as to race off in actual pursuit of another young man!"

Kitty flushed, bit a sharp retort in two and came over to rub her hand lovingly over Virginia's glossy curls, brushed into unwilling smoothness. "I can't do Dot's cousin a bit of harm," she said meekly, "because he isn't engaged. I wish you'd get through saving humanity, Jinny, so you could have a good time with me. I've just six more months at home now."

Virginia slipped an arm around her sister. "I only hope I can lead you to a true appreciation of woman's life and work during those six months, Kitty. Why not begin by coming to the club with me this morning? I have a paper, 'The Influence of Woman in Civic Life.'"

Kitty was squinting critically. "I wish I could persuade you to cut off those ugly high collars in this hot weather. You've the prettiest throat of anyone I know, and you bury it under all that chuffy linen. Collarless blouses are so fashionable, too."

Whizzing along in the Maynard's touring car that afternoon, Kitty and Dot's cousin from Harvard were discussing brunettes versus blondes.

"By Jove!" he said enthusiastically, "I saw a splendid brunette on your street this morning. Raving beauty, Italian eyes. Serious as a saint. Tall. Stately. I'm sure she never giggled. in her life."

Kitty wriggled excitedly. "Awfully plain clothes?"

He stammered. "Um-er. Rather reminded me of a nurse's costume. Dot's promised me an introduction, but that's as much as I can get out of her. Do you know her?"

Kitty laughed appreciatively. "She's my sister and a practical humanitarian."

"You don't say!" His face fell. "What'll I have to go in for to impress her? She thinks I'm frightfully rude. I forgot my manners completely and stared at her."

"Dot's going to bring you to dinner tomorrow night," said Kitty, soothingly. "You'd better read up on social settlements."

The next afternoon Kitty was applying powder over cold cream in anticipation of a round of tennis when Virginia appeared at her door, a blouse in one hand, a long pink ribbon and a scrap of lace in the other. Her eyes were perplexed and her face was flushed.

"Kitty, you know so much about fashion, will you advise me? Do you think some lace at the throat would add a pleasing feminine touch to this blouse? And is this pink too bright for a belt?"

In spite of the shock Kitty contrived a coherent commonplace. "Very becoming, Jinny. Shall I tie the ribbon for you?"

Virginia handed it to her with a grateful look. "I wish to be a credit to the club this afternoon because I've been delegated to explain our settlement system to your friend Dorthy's cousin, Mr. Rogers. His aunt introduced him this morning after the kindergarten class. She told me in confidence that he has shown remarkable interest in settlement work."

Kitty choked and coughed hurriedly. "Look at yourself in the glass, sis," she said.

Virginia gasped. "You've improved me wonderfully, Kitty. Perhaps I ought to pay more attention to clothes."—Chicago Daily News.

"I would like to get some plants to put in my kitchen to give it an esthetic touch. What would you recommend?"

"From the looks of the kitchen, madam, I would advise some scrubby plants."

Unique Merchandise The HALL Reputation

Nothing quite like the display of individual things we show here anywhere in America. Think of it! Quite a tribute to Springfield, isn't it?--- but it's a fact.

We buy and have a market for such out of the ordinary things as Hungarian and Balkan fabrics, the wonderful and individual hand carved Italian Walnut Picture Frames, these quaint little toys of Peasant work from the Tyrol, the fascinating Work-bags in Basketware and Brocaded Silk and the Old-fashioned Bohemian Peasant Glass Pieces, just the sort of things that the traveler in Europe picks up eagerly and brings home to give away with the certainty that it will carry pleasure to the recipient.

These are the things we have gathered here from many corners of the world, from which you may choose Christmas presents for your friends. The "one of a kind" sort of thing that is especially pleasing.

We want to tell you a true story. It actually happened last week. A man from Pennsylvania stocked his new Art Shop from our displays. He said he had been to New York and looked all around and could not find the HALL kind of things anywhere.

The Wise Are Doing Their Christmas Shopping NOW at HALL'S

ONE GIRL'S PLUCK

She Out-Generaled a Robber and Saved Her Father's Position.

By H. M. EGBERT.

As the freight train disappeared round the bend into the distance Menzies crouched under the lee of the bank and looked cautiously around him. His clothes were ragged, his shoes displayed a liberal space of unclad ankle; also, he was hungry. "Hard Luck" Menzies, he was called among his fellow yeggs, Hobo by trade, thief as a side line, his sobriquet had hitherto always justified itself. Where others of his kind received a generous meal he would fall foul of a bulldog; and he hardly ever stole a ride but he was spotted and thrown into the cinder-strewn roadbed.

This time, however, fate seemed to have been kind to him. He had laid his plans well. He had ridden from Uniondale upon a freight and leaped off at the precalculated place without detection. He knew that Old Man Keyes, the station agent, was hurrying west upon the night train that ran by Howland Junction, that his daughter took charge during his rare absences, and that there must be two thousand dollars, all told, in the tiny wayside station which stood alone in the center of a vast plain of swamplots.

The night was moonless and this favored him; the chances of capture were almost infinitesimal. Once the money was his he would strike for Uniondale along the pike which paralleled the railroad, and, the five miles completed, what easier than to conceal himself and his hoard among the floating mining population of that little Pennsylvania town?

After a while he rose cautiously from behind the shelter of the bank and, crouching low toward the damp ground, approached the shanty. A single electric light burned within. Against this he could see the profile of a woman seated at a typewriter; he heard as he drew nearer the tap, tap of the keys. At her left hand was a telegraph board; at her right a telephone. His first object, then, must be to withdraw her attention from those two convenient instruments, before he could venture to lay hands upon the comfortable piles of greenbacks which a sure instinct told him lay neatly folded within the drawer of her desk. Five hundred there must be; that and the registered mail—Uniondale transmitted much money to Russia and Bohemia—would give him that two thousand which he had set as the minimum of his aspirations. And the mail had arrived only a half hour before; there it lay, the bags still sealed. Certainly his weeks of planning would not be ineffective.

All at once his eyes fell upon something that set his heart thumping exultantly. It was a revolver, doubtless the girl's father's, which he had left with her for protection in case anybody should choose that night of all others on which to make his attempt. But she had placed it at her back, on a small table—and just within reach of his hand if he could gain the window sill. With the dexterity born of long practice Menzies hoisted himself upon the sill and, reaching in carefully, grasped the weapon by the muzzle and drew it toward him. After that all that he needed would be to make his entrance so swiftly that the girl would not have time to lift the telephone receiver. He balanced himself and prepared to spring.

At that moment the girl suddenly rose, and Menzies, still holding the weapon, crouched back behind the jutting portion of the window frame; in this position he was invisible except in case she should come to the window. The girl took down the receiver. Menzies prepared for flight at her first words. Then, as he remembered that she had made no movement toward the revolver, his courage revived.

Besides, even if she gave the alarm, it was three miles to the nearest station, Crosstown, and he could surely escape, even though this would mean an inconvenient detour through the soggy marshes.

"Hello!" she called. "Crosstown! Is that you, Harry? Yes, this is me. Father had to meet the superintendent at Howland Junction this evening and I'm in charge. No; why should I be afraid? He left me his revolver." Menzies heard her laugh softly. Then, "You're at the telephone tonight?" she continued. "Of course I will if I need anybody, but who's going to break in this evening of all nights in the year?"

A few more words and she hung up the receiver. Turning to resume her seat, the girl came face to face with Menzies, now in the room and covering her with the revolver.

"Sorry to scare you, miss," he volunteered, "but I'm not going to harm you. I want that money in that there drawer—likewise the registered mail."

He grinned with the satisfaction of work well done, for the girl, terrified, first uttered a stifled cry and then sank into her chair, half fainting, staring up at him with a look of abject terror. Menzies looked; the key was actually in the drawer.

"Now if you'll sit perfectly still, miss," said Menzies, "you won't be hurt any. I'll just shift you away from that there telegraph."

He carried her in the chair into the center of the office and then set about his task. Inside the drawer, neatly stacked into separate compartments, were various piles of bills—five fifties, a heap of twenties, and several tens and fives. There must have been more nearly a thousand than five hundred dollars, besides a heap of silver, which Menzies prudenly left behind. He would need to travel lightly that evening.

Afterward with his knife he ripped up the registered mail bag. Here disappointment met him; he had not calculated that it was the day before pay day, and that the mail would be light. He thrust a bundle of the more promising looking letters into his pockets. Meanwhile, evidenly complely cowed and frightened, the girl lay back in the chair, watching him with wide-open, horrified eyes. Menzies anticipated no trouble from her. He rose; he was going to put the telegraph and telephone out of commission. The former enterprise he had already accomplished with a small fire ax which lay conveniently near to hand; but as he approached the latter instrument, considering where to begin, the girl spoke for the first time:

"Won't you do something for me first?" she asked piteously.

"Sure, miss," answered Menzies, grinning. "Except put back them bills".

"No, no, it isn't that," she answered hastily. "It's my father. He'll lose his position for this and he's too old to get employment anywhere else."

Menzies leered at her amiably. "Sorry to get him fired from his job," he said. "Whatcher want me to do? Get him another?"

"No, but—"

"Wish I could help the old gentleman," pursued Menzies. "But I got to skip—"

"He isn't old," returned the girl angrily. "But he's served the company for twenty-two years, and tonight the superintendent sent for him to offer him the post at Howland Junction. He'll be accused of having stolen this money?"

"Well, what kin I do?" Menzies growled. "Divvy up with him?"

"No. I want you to leave a message saying that you took the money. I'll—I'll write it for you on my typewriter," she added with trembling lips, while her heart began beating furiously. "It won't take a moment. And it's his position."

Menzies was tickled by the idea. As a tramp he had acquired the habit of leaving impudent messages on the walls of hostile farm buildings; this struck him as humorous. Besides, nobody knew his scrawl. "Sure, miss," he answered. "Only, you see, my edducation was rather neglected after I left college, and I ain't a first-class speller."

"I only want you to put your name to it," answered the girl. "May I go to the typewriter?"

As Menzies watched her suspiciously, she rose and drew her chair to the front of the machine, in which she inserted a sheet of telegraph paper. The telephone, on which Menzies fixed his eye, ready in case of treachery, stood on a movable arm, placed there for the person at the desk, so that it could be swung back, this obviating the necessity of rising and going to the box on the wall. From the top of the desk projected a pile of ledgers, form books and paper; the girl's eye had quickly noticed that, in pushing back the telephone arm, the hook of the receiver would brush this. By deft manipulation . . .

She pushed it petulantly away, and, as she had hoped, the pile of books caught the hook, so that the receiver was not resting squarely in it. To one unpracticed in the use of the instrument the difference would not have been noticeable; nevertheless the effect was to summon the person at the other end to his receiver. And thus, three miles away, the bell was sounding in Harry Grant's wayside office. He hurried to the receiver.

"Hello!" he called. "Is that you Edna?" He repeated his call twice; and then, in sudden apprehension, listening intently, he heard the faint click-click of the girl's typewriter.

Meanwhile the girl had begun to write her message.

"This is to certify," she wrote, and read, "that I—I?" she looked up inquiringly.

"My monaker, Miss? Menzies—Hard Luck Menzies is what they calls me. I guess we'll let it go at that."

"That I, Hard Luck Menzies, have robbed this office of all the bills that were in the desk, and have likewise stolen the registered mail, during Mr. Keyes' absence." She breathed a huge sigh of relief. Now at all cost she must detain him a few moments. "That means ten years for interfering with the government mails," she said, half incoherently.

"Hell!" answered Menzies irreverently. "Is that all? Go on. 'And I'll meet you all in—heaven.' Now gimme the pen and I'll put my tag to it."

He signed and then, snatching the fire ax, with a few well-directed blows put the telephone out of commission and, buttoning his coat round him, leaped through the window.

As the typewriter ceased and the crash sounded over the wires the man at the other end leaped for his telegraph instrument.

"Robbery at Bainesville," he clicked over the keys. "A woman killed. Telephone Uniondale and all stations." Then he collapsed in his seat and his face went white. But he did not leave his instrument until the answer came.

"How do you know?"

"I got her last message. Morse code on typewriter in front of open 'phone."

That was how "Hard Luck" Menzies came to step into the arms of a posse at Crosstown.

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 6, 1912.

THERE is no lack of candidates for the United States senatorship, and the closed season is not yet.

THE special session of Congress began Monday, and Speaker Clark smashed two gavels in the first 70 minutes of work. Evidently a cracking old time may be expected.

WITH the price of coal still in the vicinity of two figures a ton, there are no very loud expressions of regret at the temperate weather with which we are being favored these last few weeks.

THE proposition of Andrew Carnegie to pension our presidents has resulted in the introduction of a bill into the present session of Congress providing pensions by the United States for ex-presidents, presidents, widows and minor children.

THE Christmas season is upon us. There are only 15 more shopping days before the holiday. To-day's Journal, increased to 12 pages because of the demands of advertisers for space, tells where merchandise of every kind suitable for holiday giving may be found.

FOR several years the Journal has issued a special holiday number the second Friday before Christmas. The 1912 number will be next Friday, and will be full of good things in the reading line, as well as announcements of holiday wares of all sorts. It will be a number well worth perusing.

WHAT has become of the call of the railroad terminals, "Do not leave any articles in the cars," which has been in order for a long time? It is seldom heard now. Are the railroads trying to make it easier for the brakemen, or are they working for a collection for their annual sale of unclaimed baggage?

FROM New York comes the report that, if it is found the Sherman anti-trust law has been violated in the Grand Trunk-New Haven traffic agreement, jail will be the portion of the guilty individuals. Along the line of the abandoned Southern New England it wouldn't be difficult to secure a vote to send the traffic arrangers to jail first and inquire afterward.

A CHANGE which will be welcomed by the business men and banks generally throughout New England is the plan to do away with the collection fee established about eight years ago on checks which pass through the New York clearing house. If plans which have recently been formed materialize Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island and New Jersey checks will be exempt from the 1-10 of 1 per cent collection charges now in force.

SOME clever detective work was done recently in the running down of J. Frank Hickey, who murdered a boy in Lackawanna, N. Y. The lad mysteriously disappeared about a year ago, and no clue was obtained until recently a postal was received stating the body would be found in a certain place and a search disclosed it as stated. The only clue detectives had to go on was the postmark on the postal. Other cards were received, not all from the same place, but on these slender clues the man was hunted down and after arrest confessed to the deed.

REPORTS of election expenses are being made and published, and it is to be noted that the "Poor man's party" — the Bull Moosers — spent $2393.96 in Hampden county, or nearly $800 more than the Republicans and Democrats combined. the former expending $1200 and the latter $400, a total of $1600. The Progressives certainly progressed in this line. The Bull Moose party returns made to the secretary of state show $56,000 spent in Massachusetts in the election. The party also spent money freely in the primaries, and it is currently reported that $400 of Bull Moose money was spent in two small towns in this section of the Commonwealth which have a combined voting strength of less than 500.

The regular meeting of the W. C. T. U. will be held next Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. S. C. Hunt on Pine street. There will be an address by the county president, Mrs. M. L. Kneil of Westfield. A light lunch will be served. A cordial invitation is extended to all interested to attend.

The contents of a couple of chemical fire extinguishers were needed to put out the fire, which was quenched before any serious damage was done, although the top of the car was practically ruined. ## PALMER NEWS.

The Bay State Drug store has been offering a large line of recent novels at the low price of 25 cents each. These are regular $1.50 books, well printed and bound, and are offered at the low price because of a fortunate purchase from a publishing house which had failed in business.

Is is learned by belated reports to the local fish and game authorities that Lewis J. Williscroft of West Brimfield killed a doe and Charles H. Filer a 275-pound buck during the recent open season. Brimfield by the reports from state headquarters was the banner town in district 21.

Highway Commissioner McKelligott is coating the macadam surface of North Main street with a layer of coarse gravel to protect it through the winter. During the cold weather the tar-macadam surface is chipped up by the sharp calks of horses' shoes and does not pack down; the gravel is to prevent this.

The ladies of St. Paul's church will hold a "Poinsettia Fair" next Tuesday and Wednesday. A turkey supper will be served Tuesday evening, and Wednesday evening there will be an entertainment entitled, "Mrs. Black's Pink Tea." There will be booths for fancy articles, aprons and candy and a grab bag. There will also be a lunch booth.

Mrs. Mary E. Woods and daughter, Miss Kathleen M., of Thorndike street were called to Connecticut this week by the death of her brother's wife, Mrs. P. J. O'Donnell. Mr. O'Donnell will be well remembered by many Thorndike people as a ball player and has the sympathy of his many friends in this vicinity in his great loss. Mrs. O'Donnell leaves, besides her husband, four sons and two daughters.

To Keep Ferns Fresh.

Use a soil of about half leaf mold or smooth earth and half fine sand. Give abundant drainage and then plenty of water. About once a month put them in the washtub or bathtub and give a thorough washing, not sparing soap; rinse well, and slightly loosen the soil before returning them to the stand. A bit of fresh beef buried in the soil ocasionally helps.

LAST GIRL COTTAGER RIOTS IN SENTIMENT

"I am rioting in sentiment out here," wrote the last girl cottager at the Michigan resort. "The woods and I have things all to ourselves now and we are having the time of our lives.

"They stand silent in the October sunshine. But it is a silence of a different quality from that of the summer—it is breathless, eager. That is strange, since what they are waiting for is desolation to them—the touch of frost, the sad whirl of the winds. There is a golden quality to the very air, the reflection of the yellow of the beeches, the Indian orange and red of the sassafras, the yellowing brown of the oaks darkening into splashes of rusty crimson and streaks of luminous bronze. There is nothing in the world so like bronze as certain of the oak leaves.

"Occasionally by some roadside, across some clearing, the eye falls on a great conflagration running close to the ground. It is the dwarf sumach, which is a veritable living flame. The goldenrod is all rusty and the wild asters have vanished. The ground is half covered by a patterned carpet from the trees above. Slashing through this riot of tones is something that glitters with an uncanny, rippling brilliance in the soft, steady rays of the sun—it is the inland lake, which was commonplace enough when just blue or gray in the summer. Now it is a sheet of quicksilver pricked by diamond points.

"All through the woods is a rustling and scurrying and chattering, for the squirrels are getting ready for winter and making a great uproar about it. Max, the collie, passes his days in hysterical chases, covering the ground in the splendid, long leaps that only a collie can manage, but always the little red-brown squirrel flashes up a tree just in the nick of time and barks staccato defiance in answer to the dog's yells of disgust and defeat below. Max has been known to dash wildly into the bungalow and drag any handy human being to the tree where some particularly exasperating squirrel was safely ensconced and demand excitedly that his friend get the villain down and deliver him over for punishment. If you speak collie English you can readily understand Max.

"The squirrels are tolerably tame. They will sit within armthrow of you on a branch and eat if you are quiet. Once I saw one clamber up a hemlock with a mushroom that must have weighed a pound, and, sitting up on his haunches, deliberately eat it to the last shred, winking defiance when I insisted that it was a toadstool. There was no dead squirrel under that tree next day, so he must have won the bet.

"The air is full of wings. The bluejays and crows and wrens and blackbirds and woodpeckers are yet in evidence, though the robins are gone. The crows sweep and caw, the blackbirds shrill and chatter and all the tree trunks resound to the woodpeckers' tapping search for insects. A couple of infinitesimal wrens hopping about through the leaves will make a lot of noise. And all day long this feathered army is closing in on one.

"Where the sun is hottest on the yellow grass the crickets still chirp and the green katydids sing from bending stalks. The crickets creep into the bungalow on the logs for the fireplace and chirp from the corners of the room.

"Some morning, when it is particularly golden and still, on your throwing open the doors the world will be filled with a tremendous chatter of birds—not of a few, but apparently of all the birds on earth, all talking at once. Rushing out, you find a dozen trees inky with blackbirds, gathering for their migration. For two or three days this din keeps up and occasionally the thousands will move up to another set of trees with a sweep through the air like waves. Then of a sudden they are gone. You did not see them on their grand flight—nobody ever does catch them at it. They simply were and now are not, so far as you are concerned.

"Every day the leaves drop faster and the paths and walks are hidden under them. The ground is speckled with resinous pine cones and beechnuts and acorns. A sharper frost than usual pinches the last geraniums in your garden and at night the cold creeps up through the living-room and you edge toward the blazing fireplace.

"After the long stretch of quiet, shining, perfect days of Indian summer you notice one evening as you draw the curtains and shut out the last glimpse of the reddened sun dropping back of the black trees into the lake that the wind is rising. It comes fast and hard and imperious. All night the acorns beat on the roof like bullets and there is no wild scamper of squirrels or raccoons above your head—nothing but a steady fall of something crisp and whispering and mysterious.

"In the morning you find as you try to walk against that relentless cold wind whipping the lake into whitecaps that only a few leaves still cling to the naked trees. The bungalow, the ground, the paths are buried in brown leaves. There is an edge in the air that is brutal and you hurry back indoors, for you know it is all over for another year. Winter is in the barren air."

Adopting the Idea.

ROYAL ## BAKING POWDER
ABSOLUTELY PURE

Cooking under modern methods and conveniences is made so attractive the whole family is becoming interested.

"These biscuits are delicious; this cake is excellent," says the father. "I made them," says the daughter, and both father and daughter beam with pleasure.

Royal Baking Powder has made home baking a success, a pleasure and a profit, and the best cooking today the world over is done with its aid.

Clever Fat Men.

It is frequently averred that fat is deadening to the brain, and consequently a foe to intellectual activity. But is this so? Some of the greatest men the world has ever known were plump even to obesity.

Napoleon was decidedly embonpoint. Dr. Johnson was fleshy even to flabbiness. So was his biographical shadow, Boswell. Balzac, the great French novelist, was so stout that it was a day's exercise to walk around him, and he was encircled with bandages as if he were a hogshead. Rossini, the composer, was a regular Jumbo, since for six years he never saw his knees.

Jules Janin, the prince of critics, broke every sofa he ever sat down upon. Lablanche, the great singer, was charged three fares when he traveled. Dumas pere was stout, and Sainte-Beuve carried the stomach of a Falstaff. Eugene Sue had such aversion to his growing corpulency that he drank vinegar to keep it down, and yet he wrote "The Wandering Jew."

A man is not necessarily fat-witted because he has a boundless stomach.

Scholastic Flippancy.

"And now," continued the professor of history, "permit me to mention a tireless worker in the great cause of humanity—" "Attireless worker?" interrupted one of the seniors, "pardon me, professor, but if you are referring to Lady Godiva, she was attired in her luxuriant hair."

End of Golden Nugget Day.

Men have found a mass of native copper weighing 420 tons and they have discovered a chunk of pure silver weighing one and one-half tone, but the largest nugget of gold that has yet been seen weighed only 190 pounds. And gold seekers are informed that larger finds in the future are unlikely.

Earliest Record of Coal in America.

The earliest record of coal in America is by Father Hennepin, in his New Discovery of a Vast Country in America," published in London, 1698. A "cole-mine" had been discovered on the Illinois river near the present city of Ottawa. The first coal working was in the Richmond (Va.) coal fields about 1750.

LORNA MAKES HAY WHILE SUN SHINES

By DOROTHY DOUGLAS.

Lorna gazed blankly at the big ship that was making its way ponderously out to sea. She was stunned with the sudden knowledge that her husband was glad to be leaving her.

They had been married a scant year, and through all those months Lorna had fought against the hints, from kindly neighbors, that her husband had married her out of pique.

But Lorna had believed in her happiness until the moment the ship had pulled away from the wharf with her husband on board. Then, she had looked up suddenly at him as he leaned over the bulwark and was surprised to see an expression of relief, as from a released burden, in his eyes.

She had taken the blow like a little soldier, with smiling lips and a happy waving of farewells. When the boat was well out in the bay the hand that held her handkerchief swept across her eyes and she stood for a moment in blank misery. After that she braced her shoulders and went home.

She knew, first of all, that she had come upon a blank wall in the path of her life.

"I am married to a man who does not love me," she told herself with a peculiar sense of aloofness stealing over her.

So, with her fighting blood aroused and her pride hurt, Lorna probed deep into the heart of things in order to discover the lack, for she knew the lack was in herself.

"I will make hay while the sun shines," she smiled at her own extravagance.

As Lorna descended the stairs the big living room struck her as being dull and toneless. This, too, was her fault.

"I will also make over the rooms." She laughed quite like the old Lorna who had not known David Brooks. "I will buy yards and yards of cretonne with big pink roses in it, and when David comes home he will think the garden has walked into the house."

When Lorna first beheld herself in her new raiment she blushed at her own extravagant beauty. Her hair was fluffed as if from a lover's caresses, and her eyes were aglow.

"But David will not know me," she reminded herself.

Even in her new view of life Lorna was not without her moments of blank dismay. What if David could not stamp the memory of Beth Cornish from his heart? Could it be possible that the gossip she had heard was not true—that merely her own carelessness had made David indifferent?

Fortunately these morbid thoughts were short lived.

As the weeks passed swiftly, Lorna realized that she was indeed improving the hours.

"Perhaps, after all," she reasoned, "it is good for us to come against blank walls in our paths. I might never have known that the biggest things in life were passing me by—perhaps I was really contented with only half of David's love."

So in the end Lorna came to look upon her cross as a blessing. She seemed to have made new friends; she seemed to hold them firmly at her side. She gave one or two dinner parties and found herself branching out in many directions.

Lorna had not ceased to love her husband, but she began to feel independently strong.

When the letter came which mentioned the day of her husband's arrival, Lorna sank down into her big chair and trembled. After all, now that he was coming, she felt strangely weak. There was so much at stake. She knew that she could never again be happy with half his love. She had struggled for the whole and she must have it.

She did not go down to the wharf, but waited for him at home. Lorna had dressed with unusual care. Her gown of traily blue and her little blue slippers peeping from beneath were only the setting for her exquisite beauty. She knew that she was looking well, and the knowledge lent a certain proud carriage to her figure.

David saw her through the French windows before he entered the house. He caught his breath and was conscious of a thrill. Whether it was from surprise or longing he knew not. But certain it was that he quickened his step and took her into his arms with an emotion for which he had not bargained. It left him breathless and a trifle confused.

"Lorna—" he said, and stopped.

"What is it, David?" she asked with a little unsteady laugh. She looked up at him and the glow in her eyes left him dazed.

"You are not the same Lorna—whom I left—I hardly feel that you are really mine—"

"But I am, Davy boy." She smiled, because she knew that she had won. His arms held her in a way that made her knowledge certain. "I have made the house over, though. See!" She turned and swept in the changed surroundings.

David looked over her head, but did not release her. "Lorna!" he put a firm hand under her chin. "Lorna—little wife—look at me. Did you—did you think all this was necessary to—to make me love you?"

She looked up for one fleeting glance, then her head went down on his shoulder.

David's arms closed about her and drew her near to him. He was silent a long moment, and when he spoke his voice was not quite steady.

"I love you, dear," he said simply. "I have always loved you."

Lorna smiled up at him. "That is all I want."

Look before you leap.

WARFARE THAT ENDED MOST UNEXPECTEDLY

By GEORGE F. STAAT.

"Eggs again?"

It was a query, an accusation and a protest.

"Yep," said Tommy Thomas. "Why not? There's more nourishment in a soft-boiled—"

"Feather bed," interrupted his chum. "Truth is, you're too lazy to cook anything else."

"Ooooh, you tell whops! And what, Mr. Simian Wellington, did YOU cook last week?"

Simeon was obliged to take the defensive. "Aw, but I didn't plain-boil and plain-boil till the hens came home. I served those eggs in eight different ways, and you know it."

"Yaas, and with the shells every time. Fact is, Sim, I'm tired of pot-wreslin'. I'll run you a race to the postoffice and back to see who cooks for a month."

"Nay, son. Not being blessed with drumsticks like yours, I'll have to decline your glittering offer. But I'll be sportier than that."

He picked up an egg, held it to the light, listened at each end mysteriously, and then rejected it. He took up another egg and did the same. After diagnosing the third, his face lighted with joy.

"A very strong egg, Tommy. A perfect type of the Roman arch. Now, sir, I can fix this egg so you cannot break it with an iron implement—er, that stove-lid, we'll say."

"Just try me."

"If you do, I'll cook for a month. If you don't I'm to have riz biscuits and hot rolled oats for a month."

"I weep for a poor orphan like you, Sim, but—turn on the blizzard."

Welling took his chosen egg—it was a small one—and stood it in a corner of the room.

It was an ancient trick, almost as old as the Columbus stunt, and Tommy knew he could not hope to break the egg in that position with the circular weapon. But he betrayed no chagrin. He calmly picked up a poker as well as the stove-lid, and proceeded to pry away the partitions forming the corner.

"I say," began Sim, fearsome for the landlady's bill. Then a brilliant idea bumped him.

Pflosh! A moist, warm, soft-boiled egg struck Tommy on his pet cowlick and the effluvium began to cascade into his collar, thence to the back of his vest.

And the battle was on. Tommy jumped to the table and commandeered the plate of cooked eggs. Sim rifled the cupboard of the half-bagful of raw ones. Only a baseball reporter could adequately deal with the doings of those eggs thereafter.

Presently Sim retreated—or Tommy thought he did. He ran downstairs pursued by a "Yah, squealer, come again!" from the apparent victor.

On the first floor was a grocer's shop. A sign read:

FRESH RANCH EGGS,
35c doz.

"Gimme two dozen eggs," cried Sim. "Charge it to Mr. Thomas, as usual."

Ustairs he galloped and began a fusillade from the doorway. Poor Tommy dodged behind the bed. Sim entered and pursued him from his hiding place, punctuating his howls with fresh ranch eggs. Tommy now fled, but grabbed the door key as he ran.

Sim understood. Tommy was coming back with ammunition. He moved bed, oil stove and table against the door. He was in the act of uprooting the stationary wash basin when a balmy, squashy, not-quite-so-guaranteed ranch egg hit him in the bridge of his nose. It had come over the transom.

The next one decorated his shirt front. The third missed him and broke the mirror. Eggs now came thick and fast, two whole dozen, at 35 cents per, pursuing him to the fire escape. With simian agility he made his way down to that corner grocery and asked for more eggs.

But Sim was in too big a hurry to explain. He gathered up all the eggs left in the crate, put them into a huge paper bag and with a "Charge 'em to Mr. Thomas," bounded up those stairs again.

Tommy was nowhere in sight. The barricade had been pushed in.

"But I'll get the rascal," muttered Nemesis-of-the-Ova. "He's gone after more eggs. Score one point for me."

He shut the window to prevent a rear attack, then threw up fortifications in front of the open door.

Steps, soft steps, ascending the stair! A head looming from the semi-darkness, looking inquiringly into the room.

Whizz! Pflosh! An egg cleaving the air and finding its mark.

"Got ye, did I?" yelled Sim, triumphantly, emerging from the rampart with another egg ready for the throw. "Have another?"

A scream. Feminine. Not the landlady's, either. The too-eager egg stifled the scream.

"Sim Wellington, you nasty, good-for-nothing wretch!" The victim was sputtering eggshells with every syllable. "I called to tell you your aunt—but I won't."

And the girl—young, pretty and all that—flounced down the stairs.

It was Sim's sweetheart. But Sim didn't feel like calling her back.

"Polly!" gasped the gallant warrior in awe. "And auntie of the money bags probably coming to see me this very day!"

The way that wins is hard.

ONLY NEEDED TURNING OVER

Remedy Frequently Effective With Small Boy Worked Well With Recalcitrant Mule.

A mule drawing a furniture van down Broadway got tired of the job and lay down. Soon a crowd gathered and ventured all manner of advice to the driver, relates the New York Times.

Louis Scheff, an electrician, of 152 Amsterdam avenue, suggested that twisting the mule's ears would force it to rise, and put his idea into practice, but ineffectually, while the crowd shouted "Whisper in its ear."

Scheff next tried pulling the mule's tail. Mrs. Anna Schott of 304 Omsterdam avenue, a passenger on a Broadway surface car, who is a member of the Humane society, construed the electrician's efforts as cruelty and had Scheff arrested.

Detective Sharp of the West Sixty-eighth Street station, who comes from the south and knows mules, took one look at the fallen mule and said:

"You'll never get that mule up—it's lying on its left side."

"What's that got to do with it?" demanded the driver.

"Everything," replied Sharp.

Ropes were tied to the mule's hoofs, and it was turned over on its right side. Sharp gently kicked the animal in the side and it scrambled to its feet.

Make Use of Scorched Timber.

The great forest fires which unfortunately occur almost every autumn leave vast quantities of "fire killed timber." This is now being used extensively for many purposes, being preferred in some cases to green timber. Fruit growers, for instance, are said to prefer it for packing boxes because it is almost odorless and does not impart an unnatural flavor to the fruit. Telephone poles and railway ties are also made to advantage from fire killed timber.

Uncle Eben's Philosophy.

"I likes to hear a young gemman say he's tryin' to keep up wif de times," said Uncle Eben, "pervided he uses an alarm clock to help him."—Washington Star.

FINE TEST OF CLEAR SPEECH

Conversation with the Blind Will Test One's Power of Making Listeners Understand You.

Let no one boast of his descriptive powers until he has tested them in conversation with a blind person," said the city missionary. "I used to think that I had the knack of making things pretty clear, but after I began to escort the blind on their walks I found that I had not the slightest conception of concise, comprehensive speech. My first experience of the kind was at a naval parade. I guided two blind men down to Riverside to 'see' the ships. I described to the best of my ability what was going on, but I soon found from the questions they asked that I had given them no idea of what the pageant looked like. I reasoned that the fault must be mine. The men had been blind a good while, but they had retentive memories and an active imagination, and with that material to work on I should have achieved better results.

"From that day I began to cultivate the gift of accurate description. Even when out alone I talked to myself trying to put into words the pictures I saw. By degrees I acquired the art of seeing my blind charges see through my eyes. My biggest stumbling block was women's clothes. No woman I met anywhere show a keener avidity to keep up with the fashions than those I take out from the blind asylum, and it requires every one of my newly acquired gifts to convey an adequate idea of the season's styles."

Neat!

A Washington man called upon a charming but homely woman, who had not long before had her portrait painted. The artist had done his work well, from a friendly point of view, and the lady was correspondingly pleased. She was not, however, so blind as not to see that the portrait was, as one might say, a trifle "idealized."

As she exhibited it to her caller she said: "What do you think of it? Has not the artist rather flattered me?"

The visitor looked at the picture, then at the lady, and with an eloquent sigh answered: "Ah, my dear lady, how could a painter sit in your com- [illegible] not flatter you?"

HOUSEKEEPER'S VACATION AND WHAT FOLLOWED

When the hot spell in July came, John insisted that I go to the shore for two weeks. I demurred, not because I didn't want to go—I was so tired of my own table that I would have gone anywhere—but because I didn't like to leave John to Malissy's tender mercies, knowing Malissy as I did.

"I don't see how you could get along, John."

"Oh, Malissy will look after me," said John easily.

"No, she won't," I protested. "If she would, going away would be simple." I knew that Malissy needed supervision to make her of any earthly use. "If I take a vacation, Malissy will take one; then who will get your meals and make up your bed and clean your tub?"

"I will," insisted John, stoutly. "If Malissy goes off. You run on to the shore, and forget Malissy for two weeks. She's getting on your nerves."

John persuaded me into thinking that it was my duty to go. It was a fact that I was completely flattened out by the heat. When I went to market, my brain refused to take in the relative merits of potatoes and beans, peas and spinach. I shut my eye, poked my finger at a vegetable, and took it. It saved planning.

Before I left I had a heart-to-heart talk with Malissy. I told her I was going away and I wanted her to take good care of Mr. Green in my absence. She was to see that his melons were ripe, that his coffee cooked fifteen minutes, that his toast was properly browned, that his mattress was turned every day, and pay heed to various other minute directions, such as a loving wife naturally thinks of in connection with her husband's comfort. Malissy listened respectfully and gave me glib assurances that she would look after Mr. Green, "same as if I wuz peekin' ovah huh shoulder." I pretended to believe her and we parted amicably, though I felt a sinking.

John put me on the train one sizzling afternoon. If my ticket hadn't been paid for, I should have turned back, I felt so guilty leaving John in such heat with only an irresponsible negress to look after him.

The shore was delightfully cool and the "inn" had an excellent table.

For nine days I enjoyed the luxury of loafing. I got sun-burned and fat, and, on the tenth day, panicky. I could feel in John's letters something wrong, though they were pointedly cheerful. Without letting him into the secret, I packed my trunk and came home.

I let myself into a deserted apartment. The rooms had a peculiar, gray look. When I went over to my dressing table, I saw that the dust on it was thick enough to hide the color of the furniture. John's bed had the spread carefully drawn up over two very soiled and wrinkled sheets. Malissy was nowhere around. Judging from the condition of the apartment, she hadn't been anywhere around since I left.

I found myself without a maid, and in a dishearteningly dirty home. The kitchen was full of dirty dishes. I surmised that John had been getting his own breakfast and using clean dishes as long as the supply lasted. Congratulating myself upon the muscle and energy that ten days of tennis and loafing had equipped me with, I called in the janitor, and together we scrubbed and dusted and swept the apartment into a semblance of cleanliness. Ahead of me, however, still stretched several days of hard housecleaning and the task of breaking in a new maid.

When John came home at nine o'clock that night I was in bed, so dead tired I could only chirp a feeble welcome.

"Have a good time, honey?"

"Lovely," I murmured.

"You see, it pays to take a vacation."

I wondered.

Banking as a Grocer's Adjunct.

A grocer, who contemplated starting a branch store, spent a day in the store of the man whom he expected to buy out, investigating neighborhood conditions. In came a little girl for two pounds of sugar, a package of starch, some flour, salt, and coffee. Her purchases came to 87 cents.

"Mother will have a dollar tomorrow," she said, "and she will pay you then."

The grocer nodded.

"And she wants the change now," the child added. "She needs money to buy thread."

Unhesitatingly he counted out 13 cents.

The visitor was amazed.

"Is that the way you do business down here?" he asked.

"Have to," said the neighborhood tradesman. "Can't get along any other way. You have to know the people you can safely extend credit to, but the judgment and the will to carry on a limited banking business without interest is the basis of every grocer's success in this part of town."

The grocer abandoned the new enterprise.

Character Told by Clothes.

Mr. Gutzon Borglum, the sculptor, says in a newspaper article: "When I get an order for a statue of a dead man, I ask his people for a suit of his clothes—not a new suit, but an old one, the oldest suit that may be found. I can tell the man's character by six inches of the legs of his trousers." It is from the way the trousers bag at the knees that Mr. Borglum decides character. This seems to be trespassing on Mr. Sherlock Holmes' preserves.

Disadvantages of Illiteracy.

When a soldier is confined in the guardroom for an offense, a written copy of the crime is invariably handed to the commander of the guard. A corporal having given an order, one of the men seemed disinclined to obey, when, after having rebuked him sharply, he shouted in angry tones: "It's a good job for you, me lad, that I can't spell 'insubordination,' or I'd shove you in the 'clink' (guard-room) sharp."—London Weekly Telegraph.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

A Three Alarm Fire.

Residents at Quarry Get Nervous Over Small Blaze.

A triple alarm from box 26 near Flynt's quarry, about midnight Saturday, unnecessarily alarmed the majority of the residents of the town.

The blaze was in a tenement in the Italian colony at the quarry, owned by Matty Combeneille. The house was burned to the ground before the firemen could reach it. The loss to the building is about $300 and $50 on the contents, neither of which was covered by insurance.

The triple alarm was rung in by an excited person, who thought that some of the surrounding buildings were endangered.

Lighting System Criticised.

There has been much comment of late in regard to the street light service. During the past two weeks on more than one occasion it has been 10 o'clock when the lights were turned on, and the earliest on any occasion was Tuesday evening, when they were turned on at 7.30. The lights are most needed early in the evening, and as a result of the darkness at this time there have been several minor accidents. Wednesday evening Mrs. C. R. Buffington, while walking on Pleasant street, walked off the curbing, which is about two feet above the road at this point, and fell into the road. She was considerably shaken up, but escaped serious injury. Unless there is a marked improvement in the service, more serious accidents are feared.

Church Play Next Week.

A play in two acts—"Our Church Fair"—will be given in the parlors of the Congregational church next Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock, with the following cast:

Mrs. Roberts, who wants to be president, Miss Holmes
Mrs. Henry, young, giddy, fond of novels, Mrs. Soule
Mrs. Jackson, the president of the society, Mrs. Hibbard
Mrs. Burt, on the dinner committee, Mrs. Post
Mrs. Lewis, the minister's wife, Miss Cushman
Mrs. Lawson, plump, Mrs. Kendall
Mrs. Brown, anxious to get new church attendants, Mrs. Wheeler
Mrs. Addison, very inquisitive, Mrs. Clifford
Mrs. Ridgely, sensitive, Mrs. Chickering
Mrs. Otis, on the dinner committee, Mrs. Bennett
Mrs. Thompson, decidedly close, Mrs. Seymour
Mrs. Drew, just married, Miss Starr

Tickets have been on sale this week and have met with a ready demand, as the piece is understood to be very amusing. Ice cream will be offered for sale between the acts.

Runaway Accident.

There was considerable excitement caused on North Main street Tuesday morning, when the horse attached to Moulton's milk wagon became frightened and ran away. The animal had been left standing in front of the Soule block, and for some reason started to run. B. A. Maynard ran out of his meat market and in trying to stop the animal, was knocked down. The wheels of the wagon passed over his body, but fortunately he was not injured. The animal continued to run and was stopped in front of Barnes' market on Main street. There was no damage.

GETTING CLOSE TO NATURE

As One Who Understands It, John Burroughs Writes of the Beauty of the Country.

To take the birds out of my life were the lopping off so many branches from the tree; there is that less surface of leafage to absorb the sunlight and bring my spirits in contact with the vital currents. We cannot pursue any natural study with love and enthusiasm without the object of it becoming a part of our lives. The birds, the flowers, the trees, the rocks, all become linked with our lives and hold the key to our thoughts and emotions.

I certainly have found "God in everything"—in all natural processes and products—not the "good" of the Sunday school books, but the good of natural law and order, the good of that system of things out of which we came and which is the source of our health and strength. It is good that fire should burn, even if it consumes your house; it is good that force should crush, even if it crushes you; it is good that rain should fall, even if it destroys your crops or floods your land.

Plague and pestilence attest the constancy of natural law. They set us to cleaning our relations to outward nature. Only in a live universe could disease and death prevail. Death is a phase of life, a redistributing of the type. Decay is another kind of growth.

The show and splendor of great houses, elaborate furnishings, stately halls, oppress me impose upon me. They fix the attention upon false values, they set up a false standard of beauty; they stand between me and the real feeders of character and thought. A man needs a good roof over his head winter and summer, and a good chimney and a big woodpile in winter. The more open his four walls are the more fresh air he will get, and the longer he will live.—John Burroughs, in the Century.

Dental Training.

Fifteen years from now if I have any teeth left for anybody to fool with I shall hire a certain Chinese boy to do the fooling," a New York salesman said. "He will be grown up then. I saw him the other day down in Chinatown. He was pulling pegs out of a board with his fingers. The pegs had been driven pretty tight into holes in the board, and it took a good deal of strength to get them out.

"'That is a funny game for him to play,' I said to a white man who knows the quarter.

"'Game!' said he. 'That is not a game. The boy is going to be a dentist. His folks have made up their minds about that, and he has commenced early to strengthen his fingers. They train them that way in China because there they pull teeth with the fingers. He will not pull with his fingers here, but the strength and skill will come in handy, just the same."

The Quality of Kinsman Gloves Cannot Be Excelled

The Kinsman Glovery is the place to select your Holiday gifts in this line. Here you'll find gloves from makers whose products we make a specialty. Makers such as Kayser, Trefousse, Centemeri, Marshall Field, and hundreds of pairs of gloves of our own importation. Gloves from a good maker, with their label attached, means security for you and security for us, for a good maker stands back of his products. If they fail to stand up to our claims for them, we are here to make right.

We have gloves in all styles and all the materials of which gloves are being made. No matter what you desire in the way of gloves, first seek them in the Kinsman Glove Section. All our gloves are selected by an expert, after proper investigation, thorough inspection on our part, and they must in all cases give absolute satisfaction in every respect, otherwise they will gain no entrance into our Glove Department.

Kinsman gloves wear in the most satisfactory manner. One reason for this is because our gloves are fitted and sold to you by experts. Fitting of a glove is half its wear. Patrons of our Glovery do not go out with wrinkled badly fitting gloves, as our experts never allow such an occurrence.

Insuring Identification.

"Persons who expect to receive money orders in a strange town take infinite precautions to identify themselves," said a postal clerk. "One way that particularly commends itself is for the stranger to call on the paying teller in the money order department before his own order arrives and present a bunch of correspondence showing pretty clearly who he is. He then explains that he is expecting a money order from a certain person; can the clerk remember him when he presents it for payment?

"After that impressive introduction the clerk usually can remember, and when the order is presented he cashes it."

Philosopher's Tip.

"I was riding in the park with the great Carlyle one morning when his wideawake blew off. A working man very civilly ran and picked it up. Instead of giving the man a pourboire, however meager, Carlyle took the returned hat with a bow, and said: "Thank ye, my man; ye can just say ye've picked up the hat of Thomas Carlyle."—"That Fourth Generation," by Janet Ross.

Mrs. D. H. Barnes, Main St., Monson, Mass., says: "I gladly verify my former endorsement of Doan's Kidney Pills given in 1906. I had considerable trouble from backache, especially when I went up or down stairs. I was very restless and in the morning felt tired and unrefreshed. Reading about Doan's Kidney Pills I decided to give them a trial and the first few doses convinced me that they were a remedy of merit. The contents of two or three boxes removed the pain and lameness and restored me to good health. This remedy has been used by another member of my family and in that case the results were satisfactory."

MEAN OF HIM.

Mrs. Diggs—She's a horrid flirt.
Mr. Diggs—Attractive girls usually are.

Delicate Scales.

In the personal laboratory of Sir William Ramsay, at University college, London, is a new pair of scales so delicately adjusted that they will weigh a seven-millionth part of an ounce. The room is in semi-darkness. So delicate are these wonderful scales that their balance is disturbed by the alteration of temperature caused by the turning on of an electric light at the other end of the room. The operator has to leave them for an hour in darkness—after he has tip-toed from the room so that his footfall should not set up any vibration—and then read them swiftly before any change in the temperature has had time to affect them. The scales, only a few inches long, appears a mere cobweb of glass with its frail supports. It is not made of glass, however, explains Sir William, but of silica, which expands and contracts under the effect of heat far less than glass.

Bear Baiting Popular Sport.

Few sports have had such a great and extended popularity as bear baiting. The Romans imported their bears from Britain, and the sport can be traced in England to the Conquest or beyond. Queen Elizabeth was so fond of the sport that, by an order in council, she prohibited "plays to be performed on Thursdays because bear baiting and such pastimes had usually been practiced."

DESERVEDLY EJECTED.

First Parrot—Willie Owl was put out of the theater last night.
Second Parrot—What for?
First Parrot—Why, he commenced hooting at the villain.

Good Taste.

Good taste is the most delicate and refined philosophy of action and manners, and comes from a high noble mind being acted upon by good breeding in the home, in the first place, and in early good, kind, gentle surroundings. Lincoln was the son of poverty, was a master of good taste, but all his infancy was enfolded in goodness, gentleness and Quaker-like peace. Good taste, like humor, it a great saving salt and is the most delicate product of the times. A great coarse mind may have wit and humor, say, like Aristophanes, but it takes a truly grand, noble mind to have in manners the good taste of Washington, Lincoln and Jackson. The manners of Jackson where women and children were concerned were without compare and this day they loom up as a good light in the greatest republic's history.

Musical Family.

Stiggins—"Are there any musicians in your family?" Wiggins—"Ra-ther! Why, my father is an adept at blowing his own horn, and mother is equally expert at harping on one string; main-law has to play second fiddle, and Aunt Tabitha leads a humdrum existence; grandpa gives a solo on his nasal organ every night, without the stops; uncle spends his time wetting his whistle; Harry is fond of his pipe, and Gerty is forever ringing the changes on her admirers."

One Girl's Face Spoiled a Well-Laid Advertising Scheme.

By H. M. EGBERT.

"You'll never dare to pull that off," sneered Chauncey B. Popoff, English manager of the Popoff Linoleum company, to Harry Burnett, as they sat in the company's offices at Earl's court, England.

"I will dare, and, what's more, I'll carry it through to the bitter end," answered Burnett. "You largely exaggerate the difficulties because you don't understand the English psychology," he continued. "How will they know I'm not a duke in disguise? Besides, it always was done in the olden days, and a mere four or five hundred years are not enough to upset an established precedent in this country."

"Well, Burnett, I wish you luck," answered Popoff sceptically. "Of course if you do—well, anyway, the materials are all downstairs in the shipping yard and the men have gone home. The gray truck horse has had a feed and you'd better get busy."

Burnett rose and, accompanied by the other, went down into the deserted yard. Ringed round by the blank walls of high buildings, it afforded a perfect spot in which to practice evolutions unobserved by curious-minded persons. At one end of the yard a huge gray, of the Flanders breed, stood munching at a few oats remaining in the bottom of his crib. Near by was a great packing case, filled with what looked like iron implements.

"Now help me into the armor, Popoff, and stop your confounded sneering," said Burnett, and together, not without difficulty, they took the pieces from the case. There was a steel helmet, with the vizor attachment, greaves, hauberk, arm-pieces—all the complementary parts of a knight's business suit, and, to complete the outfit, a sectional lance, some 12 feet long, and padded at the point.

"By Barnum's tooth, I'm glad I'm not in your shoes," said Popoff, as he helped the other to don the steel pieces. "You look hot, Burnett. Say, wouldn't Miss Ware throw fits if she could see—"

"See here, Popoff, you cut that out," growled Burnett through the bars of his vizor. "Any more talk of that sort and we part company. Understand?"

Popoff subsided sulkily and helped the trussed knight to adjust the leg and arm pieces. When at last this was done he propped him against a wall and proceeded to attire the horse in chest-piece and head armor. As this protection was more for show than for utility, he found it easy to carry and adjust the steel pieces, though the gray showed considerable restlessness during the operation. Finally, with a prodigious effort, he placed Burnett upon the horse's back and, having taken his lance, Burnett passed round the yard at a ponderous canter, from time to time testing the accuracy of his aim against a circle chalked on a wall. After some half hour of this performance the perspiring knight was unharnessed, the armor packed away, and the steed was given a drink of water and a fresh feed.

Five days later the celebrated tournament was to be held in the Earl's Court grounds, at which the nobility of English and many who were not noble were to participate in a grand revival of the medieval sport. Burnett, who had recently gone to England in the interests of the Popoff firm, had been an authority on the tournament; he had written a thesis on "Medieval Armor" which had attracted some attention among archeologists. When his father, obsessed by the belief that a commercial existence was indispensable for a young man, had given him the alternative between entering the employment of the Popoffs and being stricken out of his will, Burnett had rather sulkily gone to England, as advertising manager, to find the whole country agog over the forthcoming pageant. And the wild idea had come to him of engaging in the tournament.

"I'm a pretty fair rider, Popoff," he argued. "I didn't often get thrown when I was bronco-busting in Wyoming—and I kept my seat on the greased rail at Coney last year, during the carnival, and won a pewter challenge cup. Why shouldn't I enter as an unknown knight and meet the nobility on equal terms?"

"Because the cops will stop you before you can get in," said Popoff.

"We'll see," responded Burnett confidently. "I guess it will take some cops to stop me when I'm in my tourneying togs."

And so, five mornings later, the workmen having received a special holiday on full pay, to enable Burnett to accouter himself unobserved, the young man mounted the sullen gray and passed through the big gates into the busy Earl's court road, to the amazement of the public.

In the distance he saw a white pavilion set in a meadow; as he rode nearer he perceived a circle of tiers of wooden seats, on which were hundreds of spectators; in a roped-off portion was a group of ladies, and, in the center of these, the Queen of Beauty. On either side of a central wall of planks knights were riding toward each other, thrusting with lances.

"Well, if I can't beat that!" muttered Burnett to himself, as he saw one lightly touch the armor of his antagonist, saw the lance splinter, and heard the herald proclaim the victor amid deafening shouts. He adjusted his vizor and sent the gray at an easy lumber toward the knights' pavilion Again the horse was seized by the bridle. Looking down Burnett perceived that a gorgeously clad individual, flanked on each side by a boy bearing a pennant and followed by a trumpeter who looked like the Knave of Hearts, was accosting him.

"Your name, Sir Knight?" demanded this individual, looking a little sheepish. For the question Burnett was prepared.

"Sir, I am a stranger knight," he answered briskly, "and I have ridden hither from overseas to contest for my lady in your tourney and to uphold her name against all comers."

"You cannot contest, Sir, unless your name is on the entrance list," replied the herald, keeping a tight grip of the horse's bridle. "It's against the rules. Hi! Get off the grass, you there! Go round and pay your shilling at the entrance if you want to see the tourney."

But Burnett broke short the colloquy by suddenly spurring the gray again and galloping toward the entrance, where he perceived a bevy of knights upon their steeds awaiting their turn at the jousting. The Master-Of-Arms, seeing him approach, came spurring out toward him.

"Your name, Sir Knight?" he demanded. "Are you an entrant in this tourney, and come to do battle for some lady?"

"No, I'm a stranger," answered Burnett briskly. "But I guess from the little I've seen that there won't be much of a battle when I get busy."

The Master-At-Arms frowned angrily. "Nobody who isn't entered can joust, unless some lady has nominated him," he answered.

The Master-At-Arms carried an ugly-looking face, and there seemed a certain finality in his words. Suddenly Burnett, casting his eyes upward, perceived, looking at him, not twenty yards away—Emmeline Ware!

The shock almost unnerved him. He had been thrown much into her society since his arrival two months before, and had reason to believe that she was not wholly indifferent to him. And now, looking at her, he perceived that she had overheard, and distinctly saw her lips frame the word "yes."

"I'm nominated by Miss Ware—Miss Emmeline Ware. She's my nominator—I mean my lady," stammered Burnett; and then somehow the strangeness of the scene caught the imagination of all and the spectators rose and shouted and the Queen of Beauty smiled—and a moment later Burnett was cantering down on his side of the barrier against a knight whose helmet was encircled with ducal strawberry leaves. And two moments later the duke was galloping past clutching his horse's mane, his shivered lance on the ground, while Burnett found himself the victor.

Again a knight rode out at him, and the sullen gray thundered past; and this time the knight was clanging upon the sanded ground, like an overturned turtle, while Burnett rode past and saluted Miss Emmeline and saw her smile on him. Again—again; he felt sure of himself, knew that he could not be overthrown. And it was remarkably like riding on the greased rail at Cony, but not so hard.

Now the champion was billed to meet him—the Duke of Clydesdale, a wiry, athletic man mounted on a magnificent Norman. He was a splendid figure as he rode down the lists, and the excitement reached its zenith. They stood up, women and men, and shouted and clapped their hands. Burnett thrust, but struck only air, and, reeling in his saddle, he galloped by. At the end of the lists the combatants turned and drew together again. The lances smote true. Each shivered into a dozen fragments. Burnett caught at the bridle and saved himself by the gray's hard-bitted mouth. But when he turned amid the tumultuous acclamations of all, he saw the duke limping out of the sawdust.

The Master-At-Arms was heard above the tumult.

"Unroll your standard, Sir Knight, that the Queen of Beauty may acclaim you victor and crown you with the wreath," he cried. And Burnett, looking up, saw Emmeline Ware's eyes fixed on his and her parted lips, her face, wherein intense emotion strove with dignity. And he knew that if he unrolled his standard he must never see her again.

His scheme had failed, but from that failure something of more worth than success was to spring.

He bent his head, raised his right arm in salutation—and holding the precious standard tightly rolled in his stirrup bucket he galloped off the field. Behind him he heard shouts. Men came running toward him, pulled at his bridle, but he shook them off. Through a nightmare of yells and cries he made his slow way till he reached the gates, passed through, threaded the mazes of the Earl's Court Road, and at last entered the open gates of the factory, which he succeeded in closing fast just as the foremost of his pursuers came up.

"Gee, that was a close shave!" he muttered breathlessly, as he pulled off his helmet and gasped at the fresh air. Then from his stirrup bucket he took the standard and unrolled it. He lit a match and as the flames ate their way through the silken tissues his breath came freely and his heart pulsed quickly with joy. For on the flag were the words:

SALT PUT TO VARIED USES

Invaluable to Mankind Though as a Condiment It Should Be Employed Sparingly.

If food is tasteless without salt, it is ruined with too much. Unappetizing cooking is often due to guesswork. A level teaspoonful of salt is sufficient for a quart of soup, sauce, vegetables.

Salt used once a day is an excellent dentrifrice, tending to keep off tartar. It is said to retard receding gums.

A half teaspoonful of salt added to a cup of hot water—which many persons take each morning—will make it palatable.

Do not gargle with salt water. Throat specialists consider it injurious to the tender mucous membrane of the nose.

Salt water rots the hair, so never fail to rinse with fresh water after sea bathing.

To set color in wash materials and embroidery cottons soak them in strong salt water.

An excellent tonic for nervous people is to take salt rubs twice a day. As sea salt dissolves slowly, some of it can be kept in solution in a glass jar to be ready when needed.

When a child is inclined to bow legs or to have a weak back, rub it night and morning with strong salt water.

A faded carpet is freshened if wiped off with a wet cloth wrung from strong salt water. Sprinkle floor with dampened salt and sweep well.

Bad dyspepsia can be helped by dissolving pinches of salt on the tongue after eating, or when there is a sense of oppression.

NOT ALL FREE.

"Going to the horse show?"
"What do they do at horse shows—break horses?"
"No, break the visitors."

New Directory Wanted.

One directory that New York needs but has not got is the names and addresses of former celebrities who are now running rooming and boarding houses.

Such a volume would be highly appreciated by our nomadic population Many a singer, actress, or writer who formerly held a place in the public eye has now settled down to the prosaic occupation of housing and feeding a small portion of that same public.

Their houses are a magnet for young persons with the artistic temperament. One woman who once enjoyed a fair reputation as a violinist has five furnished apartments which she sublets, room by room, to aspirants for dramatic, operatic, and literary honors. Reflected glory rather than physical comfort is the portion of most of these satellites, but the privilege of hobnobbing with yesterday's greatness compensates for material discomfort.—New York Times.

Strong Yeast Germs.

The germs which make brewers' yeast are stronger alcohol producers than any other yeast.

Suspended Animation.

As we descend in the scale of animal life we find that what kills the higher animals does not injure the lower. Cut a polyp in two, and you have two living polyps instead of one dead polyp. Break off a lobster's claw, and another will grow. You may, it has been said, freeze a fly, but you cannot freeze it to death. There are infusoria called "wheel-animalcules." These rotifers have many curious qualities, among which is that of suspending animation for an indefinite period without ceasing to live.

Colonies of rotifers may be desiccated and rendered apparently lifeless, and in this conditions they may be kept for months and years, and possibly centuries. A single drop of water will restore them to life, and the wheel-bearers will instantly resume their functional activity precisely at the point where it was broken off.—Harper's Weekly.

Is there a Santa Claus?

By Wilbur D. Nesbit

Is there a Santa Claus?"
You with the truth in your eyes,
Bidding me ponder and pause,
You that sift truth from the lies,
You that with faith in your heart
Clamber at night on my knee—
I have no casuist's art;
Truly, the Saint used to be!

Is there a Santa Claus?"
You ask again and again.
Now must I answer, because
You have the trust I had then.
You have the trusting belief
That once my spirit possessed
Ere there came worry and grief
Biding their while in my breast.

Listen! Is there an arm
Holding you close to my heart,
Fending you ever from harm
Holding the darkness apart?
Is there a spirit of love
Waiting with wings ever spread
Beside you, about you, above,
And warding wherever you're led?

If you believe there is—
Aye, and you know it is true!
Truly, that spirit is his Throbbing with kindness to you.
Truly, that influence deep
Echoes the warmth of your smile,
Blesses your dreams when you sleep,
Stays with you all of the while.

Is there a Santa Claus?"
Yes! Little one with your eyes
Bidding me ponder and pause
Ere I tell you that are wise.
Shatter the faith that you hold?
Give you a pang of distress?
Yes, for the young and the old
There is a Santa Claus. Yes!

OLD MAN GIDDLES OBSERVES

The polite lie is often solidified into a Christmas gift.

Henry Tarbuck says that as soon as people begin giving him socks and handkerchiefs exclusively for Christmas he is going to apply for a berth in the old folks' home.

Eli Timmons says he doesn't see the sense of tying up a 25-cent present in 18 cents' worth of ribbon and tissue paper and paying 50 cents to send it to some one.

While you are sorry for the tired salesman, like as not the salesman is thinking sympathetic thoughts of you.

Little Joseph Gillett has been pulled through the Fourth of July, the mumps, a birthday party, the chickenpox and the measles so far this year, and his parents hope he is rugged enough to survive Christmas.

When a man volnteers to play Santa Claus at a Sunday school Christmas tree set it down that in his heart he considers himself a natural-born comedian.

"JUST LOOKING TODAY"

All day doth the Christmas shopper
Rush madly here and there,
And all she spendeth is one dime,
And that is for street car fare.

TAUGHT A MORAL LESSON

Two Christmas Presents, Neither of Which Brought Satisfactory Results.

There once was a rich old uncle who had two poor nephews.

And when Christmas came the two poor nephews were anxious to show the rich old uncle how much they thought of him.

Now the first poor nephew reasoned that he should impress his rich old uncle with the great affection he bore him by some tangible means. So he drew out his savings and purchased for his rich old uncle a magnificent gold watch, and had it neatly engraved. To it he attached a gorgeous chain, put the whole affair in a lavishly decorated box and sent it to his rich old uncle with his best wishes.

The second poor nephew figured that any extreme financial outlay would convince his rich old uncle that he was trying to jolly him a bit too much, so he invested a nickel in a neat but tasty Christmas card, which he mailed to the rich old uncle.

So the rich old uncle received the two remembrances, and said of the first nephew:

"Humph! A man who will spend all he has for a gold watch to give a man who already has all the watches he ever will need hasn't got enough judgment to be trusted with money. I will leave him my blessing and a few words of good advice."

When he looked at the card he nodded his head approvingly and said:

"There's a man after my own heart. He knew I would not care for an expensive gift, and he knew that I would value his good wishes, so he very wisely sent them to me in this inexpensive manner. He shows a marked economical trait and I am sure he will get along in the world without any aid from me."

So he made a new will and left all his money to found an institution for the study of prehistoric manifestations of microbic diseases in fossilized animalculae.

WILBUR D. NESBIT.

The Letter and the Spirit.

Askum—Do you approve of abbreviating "Christmas" to "X-mas?"

Tellum—I wish I could. It usually costs me a "C" or an "L." I'd be willing to abreviate it to "V"-mas if my wife would agree.

POWER PLANT FINISHED.

Electric Co. Has Spent $325,000 Since Spring.

AMPLE POWER NOW FOR EVERYBODY.

In Addition to the Blanchardville Plant, Company Can Get Power From Two Other Sources.

The enormous sum of $325,000 has been spent since the last of March, this year, by the new management of the Central Massachusetts Electric Company, according to the company's public announcement in the press today. Of this large sum of money, practically half has been spent in making permanent changes, improvements and additions at the company's plant in Blanchardville, with the result that this station is now able to give a service that it would be impossible to excel in any part of Massachusetts. The rest of the money has gone to the expense of building new transmission lines and distribution systems in Palmer, Monson, Wilbraham, Warren, West Warren, Brookfield, West Brookfield, North Brookfield, Belchertown, East Longmeadow, Thorndike and Bondsville. These lines cover, in an absolutely thorough manner, practically all the principal residential and business sections of these towns, so that to-day, almost every householder or business block in these towns can readily obtain electricity, not only for light, but for heat and power.

The improvements of the greatest interest, at the present moment, are indisputably those at the company's station at Blanchardville. A visit to this plant reveals an almost complete transformation. Within the few short months that have intervened since the station was taken over by the new management, an entirely new water power plant has been installed, which includes the construction of a modern masonry flume and the setting of three highly efficient water wheels connected directly with three generators, aggregating a capacity of 1200 horse power. In addition to this, there has been installed a Westinghouse turbo electric generator of the very latest type with the capacity of 1300 horse power. This generator, together with the water wheels, gives the station a capacity of 2500 horse power in new machinery. With the remaining old machinery still on hand, the present capacity of the Central Massachusetts Electric Company's power plant is 4000 horse power or nearly the equivalent of the central station used for a city the size of Lynn.

This capacity alone places the station of the Central Massachusetts Electric Company in a position not only to give adequate and excellent service to every customer for lights and power in the territories served, but also to meet considerable growth for some time to come. Not willing, however, to be unprepared in any way for whatever increase may come or whatever demands may be made, the company has completed contract arrangements with the Connecticut River Power Transmission Company and the New England Power Company for the delivery of any amount of electric power that may be required from their hydro electric and auxilliary stations on the Connecticut and Deerfield Rivers. Thus has the Central Massachusetts Electric Company, within nine months, not only established a reliable power nucleus, but it has, in addition, provided its territory and its customers, with an elastic power supply that can be made equal to meet any demand that may be asked of it. However, the company is now able not only to meet the power needs of every manufacturer in its territory, but also those of any new industries that may come here, and in this way, its work represents an invaluable asset in the future building of the territory.

In commenting upon the work done, and improvements accomplished by the company in this period, Manager H. M. Parsons expresses most emphatically his appreciation of the patience and consideration shown by the public during the period of uncertain service that has bothered both the company and its customers. On account of the condition that the station was in at the time the new management took charge and also because of the difficulties arising through the necessity of operating the station during the installation of the new machinery, this poor service has been absolutely unavoidable. The management, of course, realized this fact, but did not expect that the public itself would so generously and reasonably comprehend the situation and bear with this service until it could be bettered. Now that the time has arrived for the establishment of reliable service, Mr. Parsons is greatly pleased to express his appreciation of this spirit of leniency and co-operation on the part of the public.

Manager Parsons, his associates and co-workers deserve great credit not only for the push and energy they have shown in carrying this work to a successful and rapid completion, but also for their desire to keep the public as well informed as possible as to the progress being made. Their task has been a difficult one, and they have succeeded in completing it with exceptional dispatch.

Southern N. E. to be Built.

So it is Now Announced. Some Phases of the Situation.

Among the good news of the holiday season is the report, which bears the stamp of authenticity at least, that the Southern New England railroad—the extension of the Grand Trunk from Palmer to Providence—is to be built. The statement is made by Vice President J. E. Dalrymple of the Grand Trunk, who in New York Tuesday gave out the following:

"The building of the Southern New England, our proposed subsidiary, has not been abandoned. The construction work on this new line has been but temporarily suspended. This suspension was purely due to a stringency in the money market, and the inadvisability to finance the work under prohibitive interest rates both here and abroad. The work will be resumed, but is dependent upon the monetary situation assuming a normal condition."

Of interest in connection with the possible fate of this proposed railroad construction is the petition filed last Saturday with the secretary of state for Gov. Pothier of Rhode Island and Mayor Fletcher of Providence, Attorney General Wright and Henry Barker, all of Rhode Island, for authority to acquire the New England branch of the Grand Trunk. If granted, the plan is for Rhode Island to build the Palmer-Providence line. The matter will come before the next Legislature.

Interesting indeed are the developments of the past week in the Grand Trunk-New Haven imbroglio. From Boston on Saturday came a statement from President Chamberlin of the Grand Trunk that the traffic agreement between the two roads, which was announced only a few days previously as agreed upon and had been sent abroad for ratification by the Grand Trunk's English directors, had been turned down as unsatisfactory. At the same time it was announced—from another source however—that work on the Palmer-Providence line would probably be resumed soon. From New Haven Sunday came a letter from President Mellen of the New Haven lines, asking to be allowed to testify before the federal grand jury which is in New York investigating the deal between the two railroad systems. On Tuesday it was given out by President Chamberlain of the Grand Trunk that there is no traffic agreement between the New Haven and the Grand Trunk, nor even a consideration of one, but that a consideration of better traffic arrangements between the Central Vermont railroad and the New Haven system is under discussion, and has been for the past six months.

In direct contradiction of this statement Vice President E. G. Buckland of the New Haven road, testifying at Washington Wednesday, before the House rules committee, which is considering an investigation of the whole matter, put into evidence a copy of the much-discussed agreement. This agreement begins "The New Haven agrees to open joint rates and through billing in connection with the Grand Trunk lines, all its stations—the division of such joint rates to be committed to B. Campbell, representing the New Haven and J. E. Dalrymple, representing the Grand Trunk" and so on through the whole document.

The public has long since made up its mind whether or not there was a proposed traffic agreement.

Live Stock Killed by Train.

Two yearling calves belonging to the town farm were killed on the Hastings crossing of the Massachusetts Central railroad near Forest Lake Monday night. The animals had been in a pasture in Brimfield all summer and had become very wild, so much so that it was almost impossible to get them near the town farm buildings. Finally they were coaxed into a lot and left there for several days. The approach of any person was signal for them to jump the nearest fence, which they did with as much apparent ease as deer. Monday night they escaped from their enclosure and wandered about until struck by the train.

LAID OUT ALL NIGHT.

Man Found Unconscious in a Ditch Sunday Morning.

REVIVED ONLY AFTER HARD WORK.

Another One Found Wednesday Morning. Man Swam River to Escape His Tormentors.

John Lane, during the winter an inmate of the town farm but during the summer shifting for himself, was found early Sunday morning lying in a ditch on the carpet mill road, where he had remained the greater part of the night at least. He was unconscious when found and it was at first thought that he was dead, as the night had been decidedly frosty. He was taken to the lockup and, after being worked over for several hours, responded to treatment and fully recovered in a day or two. Lane has been working this summer in Thorndike, and was on his way Saturday night to visit friends at the carpet mill.

Sunday afternoon a man who had begun to "see things" which no one else could discern, said apparitions assuming weird and uncanny shapes, swam the river near the wire mill to escape his tormenters and was gathered in by the police as a protection against himself. He was placed in the lockup and a guard kept with him for several hours before it was deemed safe to leave him alone.

Wednesday morning a man was found on Foundry street, lying asleep against the basement wall of the Walcott-Cameron furniture building. The night had not been very cold and the man had been well fortified within to withstand the outside chill, and on being aroused managed to make his way to other parts with little difficulty. The indications were that he had spent the greater part of the night where found.

Fire at West Warren.

Blaze in Mill Sunday Does Little Damage Except to Stock.

A serious fire was narrowly averted Sunday afternoon in the dye-house of the No. 1 mill of the Warren cotton mills in West Warren.

The blaze was discovered at 2.45 by John Rycroft and Charles Hulin, watchmen, who were making their rounds. Mr. Rycroft ran to the engine-house and gave the alarm with the whistle, and Mr. Hulin rushed into the building and grasped the emergency fire hose and almost put out the fire single-handed.

A large amount of stock was in the room, and the fire is supposed to have started from spontaneous combustion in some bags of cotton which had been bleached and treated. Before the fire was all out several bags were thrown out of doors.

There was practically no damage except the loss in labor to make the stock ready for use again. The fire was seen just in time, for the automatic sprinklers had begun to operate and the damage from water soon would have been considerable.

Library For North Wilbraham Possible.

The recent death of Abner E. Bell has released to the town of Wilbraham the Bennett house and lot in North Wilbraham which was bequeathed by Henry Cutler, who died in 1898, to the town for library purposes, subject to the life tenure of Mr. Bell. The property is located on Main street in North Wilbraham and consists of a good lot on which is located a house which can readily be adapted to the purposes of the North Wilbraham library. Nothing has yet been done in regard to the bequest, but it is expected that a move will be made relative to the matter before the annual town meeting.

West Warren Strikers Parade.

About 140 of the strikers from the Warren cotton mills at West Warren paraded through Main street in Warren Wednesday afternoon. One of the men made a speech near the corner of Pine street, in which he tried to explain their grievance, and asked the voters to vote understandingly if they voted for an appropriation for more police. There were over 50 women in line. A special town meeting has been called for next Tuesday evening to see if the town will appropriate a sum of money to be expended by the selectmen for pay of constables and special police, as they see fit.

Freight Wreck on Ware River Road.

There was a freight wreck Wednesday evening on the Ware River branch of the Boston and Albany railroad near the Ware and Palmer line. Four cars left the track, delaying traffic. The contents of several cars were damaged.

OLD RESIDENT DEAD.

John King Knox Passes Away At Age of 88.

HAD LIVED IN PALMER MANY YEARS

Born Here in 1824, He Saw Great Changes During His Lifetime.

John King Knox, 88, died Monday night at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Ward in Springfield. While he had been in failing health for several months, his last sickness was confined to about three weeks.

John King Knox was born in Palmer May 28, 1824, son of Col. Cyrus and Peggy (Shaw) Knox. He was born in the old John King Jr. tavern, then standing on the present site of the bank block on Main street, which was a two-story building built in 1763 and taken down in 1838. At the time of his birth there were five old farm houses from Shearer's Corner to Tenneyville, besides the King tavern and the one-room schoolhouse this side of Tenneyville. The same section was divided into five farms, that of John Shaw's from Shearer's Corner to where the Nassowanno House now stands; from that point to Church street was the John Watson farm, from which point to Dublin street was the Thomas King farm; next came the Rev. Moses Baldwin farm, now owned by Charles E. Fuller, and the next was the Cooley farm at Tenneyville; each of these farms ran from the river to the hilltops east.

Mr. Knox's parents lived for some years in the old King tavern and later in the John Shaw house, which stood on the site of the late John Squier residence. The Shaw house is now a tenement near the foundry. About 1830 Col. Knox built the house where Mr. Buck now resides, where he lived till his death in 1864. Young Knox begun his school days in the one-room schoolhouse before mentioned, and was often taken there during the old time snow storms on an ox sled, through piled-up drifts which filled the highway from fence to fence. About 1840 a two-room schoolhouse was built, which is now the residence of L. A. Conant, in the upper room of which he had the enjoyable privilege of attending school under the charge of Samuel Fleming, a college graduate and a fine teacher. Later he finished his education at the academies of Monson and Amherst.

Mr. Knox lived with his parents until three years after his marriage, when his father bought for him in 1851 the old John McMaster farm, and removing the old house, one of the most ancient in town, he built a new one on the site, where he lived until 1891 and where for 40 years he had dispensed generous hospitality and good cheer. Mr. and Mrs. Knox then changed their abode to Three Rivers, where they lived about a dozen years, then went to live with their daughter in Springfield where they both spent the remainder of their lives. Mr. Knox retained his citizenship in Palmer, and came back each year to vote in the fall elections as long as strength permitted.

At the time of Mr. Knox's birth there was one church in town and two stores; no village save the hamlet at the old Center. He lived to see our four villages evolve with their busy factories, numerous stores, schools and churches for the mental and spiritual elevation of the masses. He saw the invasion of the railroads at every turn, the coming of the telegraph, the telephone and the electric cars and street lights, all undreamed of and deemed impossible when he first saw the light of day. Truly it must have been a joy to have been permitted to live through nearly a century of the most wonderful development of the world's history for one who could appreciate it.

In his declining years, when waning strength prevented him from labor, he enjoyed the privilege of calling up the past with a congenial friend, contrasting the days of his boyhood with the present. He possessed a wealth of genial sunshine in his heart which no adverse circumstances seemed to perturb. He seemed to live in an atmosphere of calm that allowed no intrusive force to change its serenity.

He united with the Second Congregational church of Palmer in 1877, and with his wife remained in full fellowship until his death, both taking an active part in its work while residing in the parish. In politics he was a Republican, and was ever loyal to the best interests of his native town and state. In fine he exhibited in his life the type of the sturdy yoemen that have given New England its enviable place in the Commonwealth of our nation.

Mr. Knox married May 21, 1848, Althena Fay, born in Monson September 22, 1824, who died in Springfield December 6, 1905. To Mr. and Mrs. Knox were born one son, John Marshall, who died in 1892, and two daughters, Sarah E., now Mrs. Irwin G. Ward, and Martha L., now Mrs. Frank A. Ruggles, who survive. He is also survived by eleven grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren; also a brother, James Knox of Palmer.

The funeral was held yesterday at the home of his granddaughter, Mrs. Charles S. Ruggles in Three Rivers, Rev. F. S. Brewer officiating. Burial was in Oak Knoll cemetery.

First Entertainment.

Catherine Ridgeway to Appear in Citizens' Course Next Friday Evening.

The first entertainment in the citizen's course will be given in the opera house next Friday evening — readings by Miss Katherine Ridgeway. Miss Ridgeway has never appeared in the east, but has been a popular entertainer in the middle and far west for a long time, and comes to Palmer direct from a series of engagements as far west as Denver. She is said to be second to none as a public reader.

Holders of reserved seats may exchange them at Kinsley's drug store next Monday morning at 9.15 o'clock and afterward for reserved seat checks good for the entire course. If there are any who have been overlooked in the canvas for tickets, or who desire reserved seat course tickets, they may be had at the same time and place. Single admission tickets to these entertainments will be 50 cents.

The time of beginning has been set at 8.15 and ticketholders wishing to hear the entire program will do well to be in their seats before that time, as the committee in charge has decided that no one will be admitted to the audience room during the rendition of any number; ticketholders arriving while a number is being given will be obliged to wait in the lobby until it is finished.

Season tickets may be procured from any member of the committee—Dr. G. A. Moore, Clifton H. Hobson, Rev. O. S. Raspe, C. H. Chamberlin, Dr. H. C. Cheney, L. E. Chandler—at any time; the prices are $1 without reserved seat and $1.50 with reserved seat.

Night Fight of Forest Fire.

Delay in Notification Responsible For Long Hard Struggle.

Eighteen of the firemen were hustled over to the east side of Palmer, close to the West Warren line, by means of the auto fire truck at 10 o'clock Tuesday night to fight a forest fire which had been known to West Warren residents since 3 in the afternoon. The boys were naturally rather indignant when they learned this fact and asked why they had not been notified before. The reply was, "Well, where are the fire wardens of Palmer?" As there are several ranges of hills between Palmer and the spot where the fire was burning, it is wholly unreasonable of course that they did not know of its existence until told. The boys fought all the way around a 1000-foot elevation, but managed to get the blaze out in good shape. They got back to Palmer at 2 in the morning.

Burglary at North Wilbraham.

The store of F. A. Fuller in North Wilbraham was broken into Thursday night or early Friday morning. Entrance was gained by breaking out a large pane of glass in the door, the intruders going in that way. Rings, canes, watches and gloves were taken.

WANT CLEANER STREET.

Palmer Woman's Club Takes Hold of Problem.

SAYS MAIN STREET IS A DISGRACE.

Committee Will See What Can Be Done Toward Keeping it In Better Condition.

Disgusted with the untidy appearance which the business section of Main street—between Thorndike and Church streets—presents the greater part of the time, the Palmer Woman's club is to make an endeavor to bring about a changed condition, with particular reference to Sunday mornings, and has appointed a committee to consider ways and means.

The matter was brought to the attention of the club at the meeting last Friday by the president, Mrs. Emma L. Chandler, and was discussed at some length. It was agreed that the street presents anything but a pleasing aspect to visitors the major portion of the time. Along the south side of that part between Church and Central streets, by reason of the peculiar eddying of the air currents, quantities of waste paper of almost every kind accumulate and are allowed to remain indefinitely. This condition also prevails in other sections, particularly that between Bridge and Thorndike streets. Since the colder weather has set in the brick paving has been cleaned only at long intervals, with an inevitable accumulation of filth of various classes. A rainy day transforms this into a mass of mud which it was hoped to be rid of when the paving was installed.

But special emphasis was laid on the uncleanly condition of the sidewalks on Sunday mornings, with their accumulation of peanut shells and other kinds of refuse deposited there by the late Saturday night crowds. These are left undisturbed until the wind takes them off the walk into the street, or until Monday morning arrives with the usual week-day sweeping of the walk by storekeepers. It was unanimously agreed that something in the way of improvement is needed, and that the sooner the change is brought about the better. The town is getting an unenviable reputation because of the conditions existing, one member of the club stating that an autoist who travels much for pleasure had said that Palmer's Main street was the most disreputable in appearance of any he had visited.

Just what could be done in the matter was something of a conundrum, but it was suggested that the help of each business man might be enlisted to the extent of having the sidewalk in front of his store swept every Sunday morning, and the refuse on the paving gathered up and deposited in the refuse cans now placed at intervals along the street. The committee in charge is Mrs. H. W. Brainerd, Mrs. F. J. Hamilton, Mrs. G. S. Holden.

Another matter which the club voted to take up was that of the unsightly billboard which has for a long time occupied a place on Central street in front of the opera house. It was blown down in a recent high wind, and the club is to ask Mr. Fillmore, manager of the opera house, to refrain from again installing it.

HOME FOR CHRISTMAS

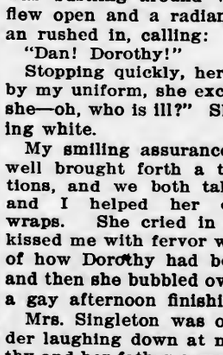
I HAD been west taking a convalescent patient to his home and was returning to New York when a case fell unexpectedly into my hands. The Pullman conductor startled us early one morning by calling out to know if there was a physician in the car. There was no response, so without hesitation I offered my services. He took me at once into the stateroom and introduced me to a worried-looking young man. There was no need to ask his trouble. On the couch tossed a little girl of five or six years, her cheeks and eyes bright with fever.

I had a few simple remedies with me, but the child showed rather alarming symptoms of an aggravated cold. Deciding to take no risk, I sent a telegram ahead, and when we reached Chicago a physician with necessary medicines came aboard and accompanied us to Buffalo.

Dorothy escaped all of the maladies with which she was threatened and by the time we reached New York was very much better. However, Mr Singleton, her father, retained me, and the three of us went to a fashionable hotel.



The little girl continued to improve, but the spontaneous gayety of childhood was lacking.

Christmas was approaching and Dorothy was now able to go about. I was instructed to take her to shops and matinees—in fact, to do everything to afford her amusement. Her father suggested that she give a Christmas tree for twenty less fortunate little girls, and he kept the big limousine car touring the shopping district while we played Santa Claus.

One day we had been out all of the afternoon. Dorothy had selected twenty dolls, and in retrospect I viewed my own meager childhood and fancied what such a glorious afternoon would have meant to me, but the child appeared even more listless than usual. Feeling rather anxious, I took her temperature, gave her some stimulating nourishment and asked her to get into my lap while I read to her.

Dorothy had the beautiful old-young manners in which the little children of the rich are drilled, and always treated me with careful consideration and politeness, regardless of her own wishes. Obediently she climbed into my lap, put her head against my shoulder, and I began to read aloud a wonderful Christmas tale. We are all of us children at Christmas and I found enjoyment in the story. Dorothy was very quiet, and as I turned a page I looked down to see if she had fallen asleep. To my consternation the wide blue eyes were brimming with tears, fast overflowing and running down the child's white cheeks As I dropped the book and clasped her closely in my arms she gave way to convulsive sobs.

Mr. Singleton came in The opening of the door roused Dorothy, and, seeing her father she stretched eager arms to him and cried out:

"Father, dear I don't want a tree. I just want mother for Christmas."

I placed the child in her father's arms and left the room. An hour passed and then Mr. Singleton rapped on my door. He told me the story.

Mrs. Singleton was not dead, as I had supposed; she was in Paris, and if the separation of which he told me was caused by fault of hers he did not so much as hint at it.

Mr. Singleton cabled at once to Paris. There would just be time.

Christmas Eve came and still no word, and though Mr. Singleton's face looked thin and strained, he started out with Dorothy at noon, telling her they were going to have a grand and glorious time that afternoon.

I was left to attend to the last details of the tree that stood in glittering bravery in the center of the sitting room. There was a lot to do, and I was bustling around when the door flew open and a radiant young woman rushed in, calling:

"Dan! Dorothy!"

Stopping quickly, her look arrested by my uniform, she exclaimed: "He—she—oh, who is ill?" She faltered, going white.

My smiling assurance that all was well brought forth a thousand questions, and we both talked at once, and I helped her off with her wraps. She cried in my arms and kissed me with fervor when I told her of how Dorothy had begged for her, and then she bubbled over and we had a gay afternoon finishing the tree.

Mrs. Singleton was on the stepladder laughing down at me when Dorothy and her father came in. The laugh died on her lips, but I caught his glorified look and heard Dorothy's glad cry. Then I crept silently from the room, feeling the loneliness of spinsterhood as I had never thought to do.

HER SHARE OF THE BUREAU

Girl Visitor's Idea of a Division Seemed to Be to Take All the Space You Could Get.

"A friend came to visit me last week," said the Girl Flapper, "and as there is only one bureau I told her I would have to share it with her. So I pushed my things out of the way and she began to unpack. This is what she put out:

"A bottle of spirits of camphor, a bottle of camphor water and boracic acid that she uses for her eyes, a bottle of witch hazel, another of benzoin, a box of face powder and a tin of talcum powder, a make-up box, sixteen ivory toilet things, four Stevenson texts in frames, an atomizer, a bottle of ammonia, another of oil of pennyroyal for mosquitoes, nine hatpins, a sewing bag, a jewelry box, some perfumery and an alcohol lamp.

"'Now, I'll unpack my bathroom things,' she said, and she took out three sponges, large, medium and small; a rubber bath glove, a bottle of liquid soap and four kinds of tooth powders and mouth washes, a patent exerciser, a bathrobe and slippers, an antiseptic bathbrush, a rubber spray, a thermometer and a whiskbroom.

"Then she borrowed my buttonhook."

WHAT PATTY DID

by CLAUDINE SISSON

(Copyright.)

AND it had come to pass that on this day before Christmas a man not old in years sat in his room at a hotel in a strange town and felt himself of all the world the most lonely. High and low, rich and poor, mingled in the procession of happy shoppers without. He alone had no thought for Santa Claus.

It went back five years. He, the son of a railroad magnate, had dared to fall in love with the blue-eyed daughter of a locomotive driver on his father's road—a man whose face and hands carried grime—who dwelt in a cottage—who had no society outside of daily toilers. And he had dared stand before the father who thought himself specially created and say:

"Father, I going to be married."

"Well?"

"To Gladys Davis."

"Never heard of her."

"The daughter of one of our engineers."

There was a moment of painful suspense and then the storm broke.

"You shall not! You are either a fool or a lunatic to think of it. An engineer's daughter! Think of your mother—of me—of your sister—the disgrace! You must have lost your senses!"

"But I am to marry her," was the steady reply.

"I say no! If the jade has trapped you into an engagement buy her off. The father must use his influence or take his discharge."

"But we love and are promised to each other."

In the next half hour the father stormed and cajoled. If the son insisted on such a marriage he would be cast out by the family; he would be ridiculed even by the common people. And the magnate ended up with:

"Fred, I will have the engineer called up here and give him a check for a thousand dollars and tell him that this nonsense must end."

"We shall be married three days from now," was his answer.

In reply to that the father pointed to the door, and the son bowed and passed out to be son no longer. He had money that had been left him by an aunt, and the father could not threaten him with poverty.

Love may always be right, but it can be so influenced as to be seemingly a mistake. The marriage took place and Fred Dillingham was ostracized. He was not kindly welcomed in the other stratum. If there is a gulf between the rich man and the workingman the latter resents intrusion as much as the former. There was love, but after a few months it was influenced from both sides. Both husband and wife were made to fear that a grave mistake had been made. They fought away the idea and sought to hold their love, but that brought irritations and vexations and culminated in misunderstandings and quarrels. After two years there was a separation. Neither really desired it. It was what the gossips had predicted, and what they strove to bring about.

There was more sorrow than anger when the young husband turned his back on wife and infant a year old and went out into the world as a wanderer The wife went back to her father's cottage, but not to struggle with poverty. The husband been generous to her.

Five long years, and Fred Dillingham had not been heard of. As an outlaw without a family, whom should he write to and why? At three years of age the child, who had been named Patty, wondered in her childish way why she hadn't a papa. At five she demanded to know. At six she stood before the embarrassed mother in indignation and threatened to go out and find one.

And at last the wanderer had recrossed the sea and headed for his home. He was tired and weary and lonely. Home? But he had none! He had left it when he left wife and baby. This struck him like a sudden blow, though he had all along realized it in a general way. No home—no wife—no child! That was why he had left the train and taken lodgings. He had no place to go. With money in his pockets, he was a tramp.

And to know that Christmas was at hand, and to hear the jingle of sleigh-bells and catch the shouts of children on the street—to wonder if his child still lived, and to wonder further what old Santa Claus would bring her—why, the man cursed the fears he could not keep back.

A quarter of an hour later the outlaw was down on the street He would mingle with the throng. He would enter the stores under the evergreen branches and look about him—aye, make a purchase and be Santa Claus to some big-eyed child on the street. He was an outlaw, but the world should not crowd him quite to the edge. He was almost smiling as he crowded his way into a big store, and he was looking about him when a small, warm hand was cuddled into his and a child's voice said:

"Please take care of me 'till mamma finds me—I'm lost!"

It was a little girl, and on her face was both a smile and a look of entreaty.

"Why, of course," replied the outlaw, pressing her hand and drawing her back a little. "So you came here with your mother after Christmas things and got separated?"

"That's it, only I think she ran away from me so that I shouldn't know what Santa Claus was going to bring me tomorrow night."

"I hope it will be something nice."

"Oh, it will be. Are you buying something for your little girl?"

"N-o-o."

"Maybe she's dead?"

"I—I don't know."

The girl looked up and noticed the grave expression on the outlaw's face, and cuddled closer to him and said:

"I'm sorry if I have hurt you. Mamma says I talk too much. I've just thought that maybe you are not married at all?"

"I guess that's pretty near it," replied the outlaw as he tried to laugh but made poor work of it.

"Well, if you haven't got any little girl I haven't got any papa. What you going to buy.

"Why, whatever you say?"

"But not for me?"

"Yes, for you. We'll select something, and then when your mother comes I'll ask her if she'll let you have it."

"I hope she will. You look to be such a nice man that she shouldn't refuse. I picked you out as the very nicest man that came along."

"Thank you," said the outlaw as he felt his heart grow big. "Now, then, about this doll. Real hair, eyes that wink, pink shoes and almost as big as you are. She'll be a sister to you."

"And how much is it?"

"Only ten dollars."

"My, but can you pay that much! If you can you must be rich."

"But you see I have no little girl of my own."

"That's so. Isn't Christmas nice? Do you know—there's mamma over there! Let me run and tell her."

The outlaw turned his back on the crowd and gritted his teeth and winked his eyes. He had been hit hard. Three or four minutes passed and then a hand pulled at his and a voice said:

"Please, Mister nice man, tell me your name, that I may introduce you to mamma. I think she will let me have the doll.'

The outlaw turned and gasped and his face went white.

"Gladys!"

"Fred."

"You here!"

"And you!"

"And this is our daughter?"

"Our Patty. Father was discharged from the road and moved over here to take another run."

It was the next day, and Patty was sitting on her father's knee and the happy mother was wiping tears from her eyes, when the child said:

"Say, mamma, I just picked him out as the very nicest man in all that big crowd, and I didn't make any mistake did I? Don't anybody sit down on my doll and give her a pain!"

Made It Work.

A week before the Christmas holidays an undergraduate wished to start home, thus gaining a week's vacation on the other students. He had, however, used up all the absences from the lectures which are allowed, and any more without good excuse would have meant suspension. In a quandary he hit upon this solution; he telegraphed his father the following message:—

"Shall I come home at my leisure or straight home?"

The answer he received was: "Come straight home."

An exhibition of the telegram to the professors was sufficient.

An Assurance.

"Don't you think a holiday is more cheerful when there is a large family gathered about festive board?"

"I do," answered the sardonic person. "A large family is a glad assurance that there is not going to be enough turkey left to supply the menu for the next few days."

The price of lobsters has gone up, but this is no excuse for being one.

HER CHRISTMAS GIFT

September 17.

WE SAIL tomorrow.

I am devotedly thankful to dad for insisting that mother take me away for a while. Perhaps we will remain a year. I hope it may be ten. I hate America, loathe New York, and want to live the rest of my life in Europe—Asia — Africa — anywhere, as far away from Riverside as possible. Mother says I'm a silly little lovesick girl; but dad thinks I need a change.

I'm not silly—and I'm not lovesick.

Carl has behaved in a most ungentlemanly way.

Just because I motored to Lakewood with Sam Perkins and his sister is no reason why he should get cross and take that actressy-looking person with him everywhere he goes.

Sam's sister says she is a Frenchwoman. I always did hate French, and I'm glad I refused Carl to meet her, glad I snubbed Carl and glad I was out when he called.

Two long, miserable weeks without seeing Carl—and tomorrow we sail. Perhaps I won't see him for months—maybe never again.

I wonder if I care.

October 20.

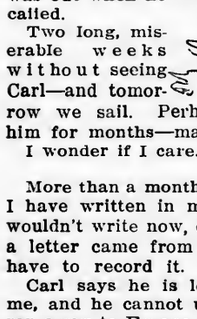
More than a month has passed since I have written in my little diary. I wouldn't write now, only this morning a letter came from Carl, and I just have to record it.

Carl says he is lonely; he misses me, and he cannot understand why I ran away to Europe so suddenly.

The letter is full of reproaches for MY treatment of HIM, when all the time it was HIS meanness to me that made me so ill, so that I had to get away from everybody.

He does not mention one word about that horrid French creature.

I shall not write. Well—perhaps I will.



November 24.

At first I hated Paris.

London was nice, Vienna stupid, but Paris—impossible, until last Sunday, when we met Mrs. Harmon.

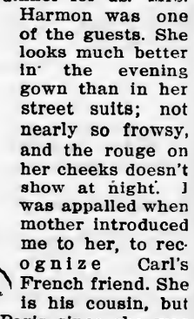
Isn't it strange what a change one day, one hour, can make in a girl's life?

Mr. and Mrs. Field, friends of mother's, gave a dinner for us. Mrs. Harmon was one of the guests. She looks much better in the evening gown than in her street suits; not nearly so frowsy, and the rouge on her cheeks doesn't show at night. I was appalled when mother introduced me to her, to recognize Carl's French friend. She is his cousin, but she has lived in Paris since she was a little girl.

We had a lovely talk. She told me all about her recent visit to America and how good Carl had been in taking her about.

I like her now that I know her.

She says Carl was perfectly miserable over a girl he was in love with, who had gone abroad for the winter. She did not know the girl's name. I blushed furiously when she spoke of it.



That was Sunday. We have seen Mrs. Harmon several times since then

I made mother promise to take me home. She cabled dad, and said she would be thankful to get back to plain home cooking and her own bathroom. Mother is a dear, and so funny.

December 25.

What a happy, happy Christmas day it has been!

The very best I have ever known Once I said I hated America—New York—but I don't.

I love New York and America, Riverside, home, mother, dad and Carl. Oh, I love Carl best of all!

He has been so sweet, so dear and kind, since we came home two weeks ago. He met us at the pier. I was never so glad to see anybody in my life as I was to see dear old Carl. Dad was there, too.

My Christmas gifts are lovely. Best of all is Carl's love and the ring he gave me as a token of his deep, undying love. I think it was sweet of him to give me such a wonderful diamond, besides the candy and books and flowers. It flashes fire as I turn my hand in the light. Daddy says I'm too young to marry, but I shall coax him to let me marry Carl in June. I'm the happiest girl in the world tonight, and Carl is the happiest man. He has told me so himself. I wish everybody in the world were as happy as we this Christmas night.

Look before you leap.

THE CHURCH MOUSE.

THEY stood in the deserted vestry of the church, facing each other angrily for the first time in their lives. Then suddenly Janet swept the diamond from the third finger of her left hand and held it forth. "You will oblige me by taking this back," she said bitingly.

He stood looking into her eyes, growing grayer of face as he saw the stubborn anger that reposed within them. "Which means that our engagement is broken, and that I may not hope for its renewal," he replied very low.

For an instant their gaze met as the glittering thing, lightly held, was passing from hand to hand; then as she released it and before his grip had become secure there was the slip of a nervous finger and with a tinkle the ring fell upon the iron grating of the floor register. Faintly they heard it go bounding far down the metal pipe which led to the furnace below, each supposing it lost forever in the flames and not knowing that in its fall by some strange fate it had bounded through a small hole in the pipe and now lay amidst the rubbish of the church's basement. For an instant the girl's eyes softened, then hardened again and she turned them aside. Upon the floor in a corner of the room the little church mouse was sitting upon its haunches, and she nodded towards him. "To be renewed when the little church mouse brings it back to me," she returned coldly.

They turned their backs upon each other and walked away.

A week passed, and the little church mouse prowling about in the darkness of the basement, saw something through the gloom that glittered even more brightly than did his own eyes Cautiously, hungrily, he approached it, smelt of it, felt of it with his gray whiskers, then stood it up before him Its glitter fascinated him. Surely this glistening thing about the size of a kernel of corn must be good to eat and he tried his sharp teeth upon it Yet gnaw as he would, he could not even scratch it, and at last he decided that it was only good to play with He was a little thing, and half starved as are all church mice, so it came to pass that it was not long before he had worked his head and forelegs through it and was running about with it encircling his middle, a very small creature wearing a diamond saddle with a gold girth. It was fun for a time, but he soon became tired of it and tried to crawl out. He could not. Becoming panic stricken he fled frantically up the stairs.

Janet, alone and very unhappy, sat in her pew at the Christmas morning service. It was rather chilly in the church and she slipped one hand into her muff. Then she gave a start, for within it she felt a small struggling thing with something round and hard about it. Involuntarily she closed her hand and as she did so the little church mouse popped out of the muff and scampered away, leaving the round object in her fingers. She drew it forth. It was her engagement ring.

The last of all to leave her pew Janet stepped into the vestry upon her way out. Dick was standing before a window with head bowed looking older, grayer of face than he had a few weeks ago, and she saw the deep unhappiness that lay in his eyes She approached him, looking up at him with the old expression which he knew so well. Softly she slipped one hand into his own, and as his fingers gently closed about it he felt something hard, round and familiar within his grasp. He raised her hand. The engagement ring—his own—encircled her third left finger.

"The little church mouse brought it back to me. Listen while I tell you," she said, drawing a trifle closer For a moment her voice murmured.

"Is it not wonderful!" she exclaimed, half awed, as she finished. His eyes lightened.

Wonderful, dear! It is far more than that. It is a miracle of His Spirit wrought upon His day—His token of love everlasting and that even we are not forgotten."

Tightly his arms closed about her.

HARRY IRVING GREEN.

A Christmas Time Saver.

To save the minutes on Christmas eve and leave time for the many things that are bound to come up, shut off from the children one room in the house suitable for the tree a couple of weeks before Christmas, and gradually accumulate there all decorations and presents. The tree can be trimmed a day or two before the holiday, and the presents wrapped more quickly and easily because they are all in one place. The children, too, will enjoy the mystery that centers around an inaccessible room.—Housekeeper.

PALMER NEWS.

As a Token of Friendship.

Business Men Banquet H. M. Parsons, Manager of Electric Company.

A company of over 70 business men gathered at the Hotel Burns last evening to give in this way expression of their friendliness for and good will toward Harold M. Parsons, manager of the Central Massachusetts Electric company. The particular reason for the event was Mr. Parsons' marriage in Chicago on Thanksgiving day, and his return to town the first of the week. Mr. Parsons had kept his plans well to himself and only a few knew, when he started on a "business trip," that he was to renounce bachelorhood and return a benedict. Included in the gathering were Ware and Monson business men, as well as those from Palmer. A pleasing feature was the unexpected entrance of Mr. Parsons' father just as the company was sitting down to the tables.

The banquet was served in the dining room of the hotel, the tables being prettily decorated with ferns and cut flowers, and a special corps of waiters being imported for the occasion. The menu served was:

Oysters on Half Shell.
Club Punch.
Consommie American. Bread Sticks.
Broiled Halibut Fillet, Hollandaise Sauce.
Cold Baked Sugar-cured Ham.
Roast Vermont Turkey, Cranberry Sauce.
Sweet Potatoes. Green Peas. Hubbard Squash
Claret Ice.
Baked Bananas, Cherry Wine Sauce.
Lobster Salad.
Celery. Olives. Gherkins.
Frozen Pudding, with Jordanas.
Demi Tasse.

After the eatables had been disposed of Dr. George A. Moore, acting as toastmaster, spoke of the reasons which prompted the gathering, and voiced for all the wish of long life and prosperity for both Mr. Parsons and his bride. He then called on the following for remarks, the most of them responding: Bowen Tufts of Boston, J. H. Schoonmaker of Ware, George Ezekiel, Charles L. Waid, Fred E. Cady, Clifton H. Hobson and George F. Parsons.

At the close of the speaking Mr. Parsons was given a handsome basket of hot-house roses, among which nestled a small box containing a handsome gold bracelet-watch to be taken to Mrs. Parsons with the good wishes of the company assembled. Mr. Parsons responded feelingly in a few words, and the party then broke up.

She married May 16, 1879, Leonard Aldrich, and was for many years matron of town alms institutions in various towns in this state and Connecticut, in all of which positions she served with ability. ## Among the Churches.

The Advent church was reorganized last Sunday afternoon.

Regular services of St. Mary's Mission Sunday afternoon at 3.30 in Masonic hall.

The subject of the sermon at St. Paul's church Sunday will be "The philosiphy of faith." Y. P. C. U. subject, "Seeking Christ;" leader, Miss Marion Andrews.

Sunday school at the Advent chapel Sunday afternoon at 2. Preaching at 3 by the pastor, Rev. J. T. Meehan; subject, "The plumbline of God." Prayer meeting Wednesday evening at 7.30; subject, "Christ is all."

"The true measure of the value of life" will be the theme of the sermon at the Congregational church Sunday morning. Sunday school at 12. Christian Endeavor at 6. Evening worship at 7, when the pastor will continue the serief on the "Coming of Christ;" the theme of the evening being "Nazareth, the place of preparation."

A NEW method of stopping gambling has been adopted by the police of New York. When a man attempts to enter one of the "poker clubs" which flourishes, he is warned by a detective on guard; if he persists in entering he is asked for his name, and if this is refused he is followed to his home when he leaves and his identity learned in this way. It works like a charm. The excuse of having been "detained at the office" doesn't go at home when the officer appears at the door and gives his reason for wanting to know the name of the head of the family.

HAMPDEN.

At the regular meeting of Hampden Grange Friday evening, these officers were elected: Master, Charles Ira Burleigh; overseer, E. Norton Davis; lecturer, Mrs. John J. Flynn; chaplain, Rev. Charles B. Bliss; treasurer, Charles S. Shute; secretary, Mrs. William J. Sessions; lady assistant steward, Mrs. Fred J. Kenworthy; steward, Arthur V. Dean; assistant steward, Harold Ryder; Ceres, Louise Burleigh; Pomona, Gladys Pease; Flora, Mildred Pease; gatekeeper, Neil S. Kibbe; member of the executive committee for three years, Fred J. Kenworthy; pianist, Mrs. Lora Pease. The work of the piano committee was transferred to the executive committee. The old officers will bring in their reports of the year's work at the next meeting and the new officers will be installed at the first meeting in January. E. Norton Davis was received into membership by transfer from the Palmer Grange before the election.

To Illustrate.

Examples as well as precept was furnished to the youthful autograph fiend who wrote to one of the world's richest men, asking for an "autograph sentiment" and inclosing a two-cent stamp for his reply. Over his opulency's signature came the prompt response—on a post card: "A penny saved is a penny earned."—Lippincott's.

BRIMFIELD.

Death of Former Resident.

The body of William A. Butterfield of East Orange, N. J., was brought to Brimfield Monday for burial in the family lot in Brimfield cemetery. Rev. William C. Jennings conducted brief services at the grave. Mr. Butterfield was born in Brimfield, September 22, 1856, the son of William H. and Charlotte (Sherman) Butterfield. He was the grandson of Orson Sherman and a descendant of Capt. John Sherman, a proprietor of Brimfield and its first town clerk, physician and schoolmaster. Mr. Butterfield passed his boyhood in his native town. He attended the Hitchcock Free Academy, being a member of the class of 1874, and was a member of the alumni association of that institution. From Brimfield he went to New York and for a good many years was with A. P. Bruce in the cotton commission business. Later he was in the employ of the Postal telegraph cable company, of which his brother, Edward S. Butterfield, has been until recently for many years cashier and superintendent of the money transfer department. His health began to fail about 11 years ago and though not an invalid all of the time after his breakdown, he was unable to attend to business and spent most of his time at his home in East Orange, N. J. The past year he had spent at the New Jersey state sanitarium for epileptics, where until a week before his death, when he was stricken with his last illness, he was in comfortable health and good spirits. He leaves a widow and two daughters, Mrs. Grace Brown of New York and Miss Florence Butterfield of East Orange. He is also survived by a brother, Edward S. Butterfield, who has recently removed to Brimfield from East Orange.

Was Pleasantly Surprised.

George A. Webster was given a pleasant surprise party Monday evening, the occasion being in honor of his 62d birthday. The party was arranged by Mr. and Mrs. Everett Stowell, with whom Mr. Webster is now boarding, was a complete surprise. The evening was pleasantly spent in sociability of the old fashioned kind and refreshments were served. Mr. Webster is the well known village shoemaker, doing work for people in Springfield and other places, as well as Brimfield. He has been unable to get about the town for some years on account of a form of walking paralysis which effects his walking.

Twelve members of Brimfield Grange visited the State Grange meeting in Springfield this week.

There will be a special address Sunday evening by Rev. W. L. Jennings upon the subject of war.

Rev. J. T. Meehan will give an exposition on the 24th chapter of Matthew Sunday evening at 7.30 in the Methodist church.

The Men's League will meet at the Congregational church Monday evening, with Rev. Frank Brewer as speaker for the evening. Rev. Mr. Brewer will give a travel talk.

Mr. and Mrs. James Stryker of Watertown, N. Y., have been guests of Mrs. S. A. Fisk this week. Mrs. Fisk recently attended their wedding at Watertown, the bride being her niece.

Miss Elizabeth Ringwalt, a member of the junior class of the Academy, entertained the present members of the class of 1912, and members of the faculty and neighborhood friends at a dancing party at the hotel Saturday evening, the occasion being in honor of her sixteenth birthday. There were present from out of town, besides pupils, Miss Mary McFadden and Miss Lombard of Springfield. Many beautiful and useful gifts were received by Miss Ringwalt from her friends. A pleasing feature of the dance was the fact that unintentionally there were sixteen coulpes in the grand march.

WARE.

Death of Mrs. Deborah D. Gates.

Mrs. Deborah D. Gates, 91, died at the home of her son, Simeon E. Gates, on Church street, late Sunday night, of ailments due to old age. Her maiden name was Walker, and she was born in Barnard, Vt., November 16, 1821. She was married to Simeon Gates, who died 40 years ago. The couple had nine children, only two of whom survive, Simeon of Ware and Mrs. R. C. Fairbanks of Springfield. There are also 12 grandchildren and 12 great-grandchildren. Mrs. Gates came to Ware December 9, 1876, thus living in that town 36 years. Mrs. Gates had a keen mind, and remained in full possession of her faculties to the end. She was always fond of riding. She was a member of the Methodist church for 65 years. The funeral was held in the Methodist church Tuesday afternoon at 3, Rev. E. Lutterman officiating. The body was taken to Barnard, Vt., for burial.

Fined for Carrying Revolver.

Bertram H. White of Washington, D. C., was fined $50 in the district court Monday morning, after pleading guilty to carrying a loaded revolver without a license. Mr. White is foreman of a gang of laborers putting in a high tension line in the north part of the town. Saturday Mr. White went to the home of Chief Buckley and complained against members of the gang under him. While he was talking Officer Renaud telephoned Chief Buckley that members of the gang had brought him a revolver, which they claimed they had taken from White. Chief Buckley went to the police station, and after hearing the stories of both the men and the foreman, locked the latter up.

Death of Mrs. Alphonse Grise.

Mrs. Alphonse Grise, 38, died at her home on Castle street Saturday night after a long illness. She leaves, besides her husband, one child five months old. She also leaves one sister, Mrs. Charles Douglas of Waltham, and four brothers, Richard Riley of Waltham, Jeremiah Riley of South Barre, Edward Riley of Concord, N. H., and James Riley of Greenville, N. H. The funeral was held in All Saints' church Tuesday morning, with burial in St. William's cemetery. Mrs. Grise had been a resident of Ware two years, coming here from Three Rivers.

Matthew Gloster, 81, died Tuesday morning at the home of Michael A. Griffin of the Belchertown road. He is survived by four nephews and one niece. The funeral was held yesterday morning.

H., elected the following officers Monday night: President, Miss Margaret Murphy; vice president, Mrs. Cornelius Fitzgerald; treasurer, Miss Mollie Kaveney; recording secretary, Miss Minnie A. Malboeuf; executive committee, three years, Lionel A. Grise; one yeer, Fred A. Johnson.

The house on the farm in Ware Center belonging to Peter Perry of Warren was destroyed by fire Tuesday. Neighbors saved the barn and outbuildings. Peter Goddard was acting as caretaker of the place. The fire is supposed to have been caused by an overheated chimney, as the roof was ablaze before any one knew of the fire. Fire Warden L. N. Charbonneau and a gang of men went to fight the fire, but found it impossible to save the house and had difficulty in preventing the flames from spreading in the neighboring woods.

Destroying Weeds in Ponds.

Copper sulphate is often used for destroying the scum-like weeds in ponds. But precautions must be taken, for unless the right proportion of sulphate is used any fish which may be in the pond will be injured. The proportion of copper sulphate used in the ponds at Kew Gardens is one part to from 750 000 to 1,000,000 parts of water. Sulphate of copper in a pulverized state is placed in a porous bag and dragged through the water until dissolved. The water in St. James's Park, London, it might be mentioned, has for two summers been kept free from scum by this method.—London Mail.

Exciting Runaway.

A pair of horses hitched to a heavy wagon owned by Mr. Ellmore, who resides in the Forest Lake district, took fright Saturday evening and ran from Commercial street on to the Ware River railroad and continued southwesterly down the track until they reached the culvert or underpass in the rear of Nathan Talmadge's home. Here the horses fell through and were unable to extricate themselves. A big crowd soon assembled and worked hard to try and liberate the horses, but to no avail. To make matters more exciting the train from Palmer was heard approaching. Daniel Brosnan, employed at the Boston and Albany station, ran down the track, waving a red lantern and stopped the train. The train crew were soon able to remove the horses from their position, apparently none the worse for their trying experience.

CHRISTMAS ROMANCE

ME a preparing for Christmas—me. Goodness knows I wisht I was, but Christmas doings ain't for me no more. And just because I was a baking something to eat tomorrow, which happens to be Christmas, she thought I was preparing for that day a special."

Betty Green sighed as she placed the pie in the oven, and pulled a kitchen chair up beside the stove The new neighbor, who had but recently moved into the town, and who knew nothing of Betty's history, had just left. With the Christmas spirit everywhere she had thought of course Betty was preparing a feast for the day.

"Now, if Jim hadn't never sailed away on that water-logged old Mary Ann, as he did a-going on four year ago, I guess I could a been preparing for Christmas like other folks. If there hadn't been nobody else, Jim and me could of enjoyed Christmas, and then maybe there'd a been somebody else—somebody what just about now would a been liking dolls or tin cars, and if so Jim and me would a been having a Christmas tree for that somebody, and we'd be a having the best Christmas in all South Cove.

"My, how I did try to keep Jim from sailing in that Mary Ann. Anybody what knew anything about ships knew she wasn't fit to go to sea in, but Jim says it's the only berth he's likely to get, and taking it would our marrying just that much sooner, and the Mary Ann or Jim ain't never been heard of since she left that South America place to go round the Horn on her way to China."

The bright eyes of Betty Green were wet with tears as she opened the oven door to raise the pie to a higher shelf. Ever since Jim Busby failed to return in time for the wedding which Betty had so carefully prepared for four years ago—a wedding which was to be the big event of the Christmas season at South Cove—she had had a lonesome life.

Two months after the Christmas that was to have been Betty's wedding day her aged father had been carried to the village cemetery, leaving her alone in the world. With no other relatives, and with no friends except those at South Cove Betty remained in the little fishing town in which she had been born nearly twenty-seven years ago.

With the baking finished, Betty left the kitchen and went into her bedroom. She wanted nothing so much as to be alone in that room that had been her father's—in that room where she kept carefully preserved the wedding clothes she had lavished so much care upon four years ago. These clothes and the faded photograph of Jim Busby on her bureau were all that were left her of her romance. With these she would spend her Christmas eve, would live over again the courting days. And Jim should be there with her. That would be her Christmas.

With care she took each garment from its wrappings in the bureau drawer and spread them on the bed. The pretty wedding dress which Sarah Glover had helped her make—yes, she would put it on tonight just as she had planned to four years ago. Jim would like her to do that; he had always liked to see her prettily dressed, and maybe Jim might see her from the spirit world tonight.

As she fastened the gown she almost forgot that Jim could not be there, that it was all a make-believe. As she stood before the mirror the smile of four years ago came back again. She noted the color in her cheeks; it was like a bridal blush.

A rap at the door dispelled the illusion she had permitted herself for a few moments. She could not go to the door in that dress. The caller would have to wait, but he did not wait. She heard the door swing, a heavy step on the floor, and a voice—oh! such a familiar voice—calling Betty.

"Jim! My Jim!" she answered, as she pulled open the door of her bedroom and sprang into the arms of a strong, bronzed sailor.

Far into the night she listened to Jim's tale of shipwreck on the Patagonian coast, of the months and years of practical captivity before he could get back to a seaport.

"And now," he said, "I am home to claim my Christmas bride."

"And I have our Christmas baking done," said Betty.

MY CHRISTMAS DREAM

NOW, this was the wonderful dream I had—a dream of the Christmas Tree:
I dreamed that a melody sweet and glad rang out from somewhere to me,
And out of the silvered east they came and out of the rosy west—
More children than ever a man might name or ever a man has guessed;
And going and coming, and coming and going,
With drummers a-drumming and buglers a-blowing,
Were all the children that ever were known since ever there was an earth,
In hundreds, in couples, and all alone, each chanting a song of mirth.

And then in this wonderful dream of mine the children ran to and fro
And marched in a long and winding line as swiftly as they might go;
And each as he passed the Christmas Tree looked up with a radiant face,
And each as he came there bent the knee with curious, childish grace—
And coming and going, and going and coming,
With buglers a-blowing and drummers a-drumming,
Were all of the children that ever have been since there was a world at all
And none was a-hungered or pale or thin, or crippled or like to fall.

And all of them sang in this dream of mine, a song that I wish I knew,
For it had a melody fair and fine and every tone was true;
And all of the children they looked at me in pity—or so it seemed—
While stars in the boughs of the Christmas Tree in marvelous glory gleamed.
And going and coming, and coming and going,
With drummers a-drumming and buglers a-blowing,
Were all of the children that ever have played since ever the world began,
And each little fellow and each little maid delightedly laughed and ran.

And then in this wonderful dream I dreamed, I thought that the Christmas Tree
Grew fairer and fairer until it seemed no fairer a thing could be;
And all of the children they called my name and all of the children smiled.
And suddenly then to my heart there came the faith of a little child
And going and coming and coming and going,
With drummers a-drumming and buglers a-blowing,
I marched with the children of all the lands, of all the years and times,
And laughed as we ran with our close-linked hands and chanted our world-old rhymes.

Valuable Gift.

"Talking about Christmas-boxes," remarked a commercial traveler, "the one I got last year would be hard to beat. Our guv'nor never gave us a Christmas-box, so you can imagine how surprised we were when he told us all to go into his office, where he sat with a pile of envelopes in his hand.

"'Gentlemen,' said he, 'I intend to give each of you a Christmas present this year. These envelopes contain something valuable, which I hope you will make good use of.'

"Of course we thanked him and marched out, thinking that he was a good sort, after all. And what do you think was in the envelopes?"

"A check?"

"No; it was a confounded prescription for the cure of indigestion!"

Whom to Thank.

"I suppose you feel very thankful to Santa Claus for providing you with such a fine turkey?" said the minister to Uncle 'Lijah's little boy.

"Naw, sah," replied the piccaninny. "Uncle tole dis chile ter be than'ful ter Farmer Green fur leavin' his henhouse dore on de jar."

WIDE PLAIN is in Saskatchewan. It was so named because it is so. It is wide. The town does not cover the entire plain. Far be it from me to convey such an impression, inasmuch as the plain extends east, west, north and south ostensibly as far as there is anything.

No doubt somewhere in the distance there are trees, and hills, or something to stop the plain from spreading any further. And some day it is the intention of the Greater Wide Plain association to have real trees growing in their thriving little city. But just at present they are so busy getting the town established that the trees must wait.

George Freeman was one of the most energetic young men in Wide Plain. He was one of the pioneers. He was almost the Oldest Inhabitant, although he was but twenty-five years of age. You see, George located in Wide Plain when it was practically nothing but width and plain. He foresaw a future for the town, and became its leading dealer in agricultural implements and groceries and hardware and so on. He became the leading dealer, because he was the only one.

In a few months Wide Plain had a population of 2,500. And so social life became a feature of existence there.

Social life requires two factors. One of them is women. The other is men. You may have thought that one feature would be sociability and the other would be life, but that would be drawing it a bit fine.

Lucy Cleveland was the belle of Wide Plain. She was not the belle because she was the only young woman there, for there were others. Others—young and beautiful, but while some of the others were as young none of them were as beautiful as Lucy.

Consequently Lucy had suitors aplenty. In fact, she had eight suitors, that being the available unmarried portion of the population that she would consider. And she managed to give the eight the impression that she was not considering them very much.

George Freeman endeavored to induce her to consider him. George's policy in life was to get what he wanted by one of two methods. One was to go where it was and take possession, the other was to ask for it. Inasmuch as Lucy was not a building site nor a quarter section, he could not claim her by right of discovery. So he had asked her. And she had assured him that while she esteemed him highly she did not see her way to be his. George had not asked her if there was some one else to whom she had pledged her affection or plighted her troth. He did not care. He went on selling agricultural implements and striped overalls and brooms and nails and putty and canned goods and other groceries, whistling little melodies to himself and wondering how Lucy would want their house painted when they got married.

Every now and then he would propose again to Lucy. By every now and then I mean that he would propose, say, once a week. Some weeks he proposed twice. He saw that it pleased Lucy to be proposed to and George was a gentleman who believed in making himself agreeable to a young lady when he was fond of her.

So it came along toward Christmas.

"We must have a Christmas tree for the children," Lucy said.

Lucy was teacher in the Wide Plain Sunday School. Her pupils idolized her. George and the other seven suitors had tried to join her class, but she had insisted that they must attend the Bible class for older students, which was presided over by Mrs. Henry Gillup, a most capable married lady, who had brought one husband and six children to help upbuild Wide Plain.

The fact that Lucy had demanded a Christmas tree occasioned many smiles, especially from George's rivals.

"A Christmas tree!" laughed William Skidmore. "There isn't a tree for a hundred miles in any direction."

"Let's get one shipped in by freight, then," suggested Luke Morton.

"No time now," Wesley Perkins pointed out. "It's only two days to Christmas."

The seven rivals were not so particular about the tree. Each of them knew that Lucy would be disappointed a bit, but each of them felt that the gift he had selected for her would help to overcome her disappointment. For, in any event, there was to be a Christmas Eve party at the church.

On the evening of December 23 George called on Lucy. She was still unhappy because the dear children could not have a tree.

"Now, Lucy," he said, "I've arranged it all for you. There'll be a Christmas tree."

"Oh, have you got it? Where is it? I didn't know you could get one."

"It isn't here yet, but there'll be one Christmas eve. Now, don't ask questions. Mrs. Gillup and I will fix it up all right."

"But I must trim it up."

"No. Mrs. Gillup and I have arranged for it all. You are not to worry yourself about anything. Just you gather your class together and be at the church at 8 o'clock that evening, and the tree will be there."

So Lucy, scenting mystery, and too diplomatic to ask anything more, was compelled to content herself with that much information.

Towards dusk of the day before Christmas George was seen carrying several bulky bundles into the church. Mrs. Gillup had spent some time in conference with him that day. The seven rivals had attempted to quiz her, but she would not gratify their curiosity further than to say that there would be a tree. They had asked her—separately—if she would hang their presents for Lucy on the tree, and she had agreed to do so.

She and George, behind the drawn curtains of the church, labored long with curtain poles and string and a profusion of green paper, to say nothing of several bundles of artificial palms and the like, which George had unearthed among his stock.

When the audience was assembled for the Christmas eve exercises Mrs. Gillup slowly drew back a curtain which concealed one corner of the room, and there, with candles glowing and green paper and green palm branches rustling, stood a Christmas tree. It was not an evergreen tree.

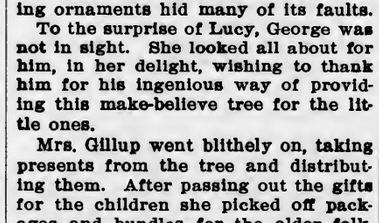
"We Must Have a Christmas Tree."

It was not a genuine fir or cedar, but it looked like a tree. And the candles and the strings of popcorn and glittering ornaments hid many of its faults.

To the surprise of Lucy, George was not in sight. She looked all about for him, in her delight, wishing to thank him for his ingenious way of providing this make-believe tree for the little ones.

Mrs. Gillup went blithely on, taking presents from the tree and distributing them. After passing out the gifts for the children she picked off packages and bundles for the older folk.

It was noted that the tree sort of shook every time she took off one of the gifts which had been provided by the seven rivals for Lucy. But at last the final package had been disposed of. Mrs. Gillup drew the curtain in front of the tree again and the audience filed out, laughing and chatting over the success of the entertainment. Lucy did not hurry away with the rest. She stepped back of the curtain with Mrs. Gillup.



"It was just lovely, Mrs. Gillup!" she exclaimed. 'But why wasn't Mr. Freeman here? After his hard work and cleverness in helping you, I should have thought he would have wanted to see how the tree looked."

"I expect he was pretty busy."

"And—of course, I haven't any right to expect such a thing—but he was such a good friend of mine, Mrs. Gillup—I really thought it a little odd that he didn't make me some kind of a present—just a remembrance, or—"

"I didn't forget you, Lucy," said the tree. "You can have me."

And Mrs. Gillup says that Lucy knew all about it all the time, because she had sharp eyes, and no tree that wore shoes could fool her.

A Costly Gift.

"What makes them so?" inquired the Curious Friend.

"Oh, their parents filled their stockings with eggs."

The Best Gift

Good Every Hour of the Year

A Telephone is an ideal gift—one such as makes the thought of the giver ever present.

Its practical usefulness brings joy, comfort and protection—an ever-living Christmas cheer.

If there is already a telephone in the house an Extension Set will render untold service. There would be no running down from upstairs in the night in cases of important calls, or sickness, or fire or burglars. Those are emergencies when the telephone downstairs is much too far away.

Call the Local Manager for rates. Arrangements can be made with him to announce the gift in your name on Christmas morning. The installation will be made as soon as possible.

Dorcas Society Play.

The walls of the Congregational chapel resounded with merriment Tuesday evening, when the amusing play, "Our Church Fair," was given by twelve ladies from the Dorcas society. The many mirth-provoking characters were delineated with great spontaneity and vivacity by each one of the ladies, to whom the society owes a debt of gratitude for their unremitting zeal and faithfulness in undertaking the play. The chapel was filled with a friendly and appreciative audience. J. S. R. Coy and Ralph Entwistle contributed greatly to the pleasure of the evening by their brilliant rendition of two piano duets. It is pleasant to feel that the Dorcas society has the hearty co-operation of its large circle of members in all its undertakings, for its aim is to be truly helpful, and this season, under the leadership of its able president, Mrs. Robert Cushman, it is accomplishing a great amount of work.

Death of Mrs. S. M. Stebbins.

Mrs. Sherman M. Stebbins, 47, died at her home on North Main street Sunday morning at 1 o'clock of a complication of diseases. Mrs. Stebbins had been in poor health for a year but had only been confined to her bed one month. She was formerly Miss Alfretta Fiske and was born in Stafford Springs, Ct., May 7, 1865. She was married to Mr. Stebbins in East Longmeadow, May 4, 1887, and after a short time they moved to Monson, and she has since made her home here. She was a member of the King's Daughters and Dorcas society and of the Congregational church. Besides her husband, she leaves one daughter, Bertha, and two brothers, Martin W. and George E. Fiske of Springfield. The funeral was held from her late home Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, Rev. G. A. Andrews of the Congregational church officiating; burial was in No. 1 cemetery.

Petition For Electric Road.

There is much local interest regarding the possibility of a street railway line being built between Stafford Springs and Monson, to be known as the Stafford and Monson Street Railway Company. A notice has been given in Stafford that a petition will be presented at the next sitting of the Connecticut Legislature for the incorporation of such a company. The locations asked for are from Haymarket Square, Stafford, through Orcuttville to State Line, north of Evergreen Park; also through Stafford and Staffordville to the State Line so as to connect with Monson, therefore making connections with Springfield and Worcester.

May Establish Board of Trade.

There is much talk among the local business men regarding the establishing of a Monson board of trade. It has long been felt by many of the business men that such an organization is sorely needed to assist in the betterment of Monson from the standpoint of business improvements. Plans for such action have not as yet been perfected, but will be made public at an early date.

To Hold Social.

Different Method of Talking.

Our little boy three years old had been told of the difference between human beings and dumb animals—that we could talk and reason because of our brains and intellect, and that dumb animals could not. Being disobedient one day, I told him that if he would not obey the ruler would talk. He replied, tearfully, "How can a ruler talk, mother? It has no intellect."—Exchange.

A New Back for an Old One. How it Can be Done in Palmer.

The back aches at times with a dull, indescribable feeling, making you weary and restless; piercing pains shoot across the region of the kidneys, and again the loins are so lame that to stoop is agony. No use to rub or apply a plaster to the back if the kidneys are weak. You cannot reach the cause. Palmer residents would do well to profit by the following example.

G. H. Morgan, North Wilbraham, Mass., says: "It is now ten years since I used Doan's Kidney Pills, but I have not forgotten the great relief I obtained from this remedy. I had a severe case of kidney trouble of several years' standing and was unable to find anything that would help me. My back ached constantly and I often felt lame all over. The kidney secretions were irregular in passage and attended by a burning sensation when being voided. Upon a friend's advice, I began taking Doan's Kidney Pills and in a short time they cured me. The cure has proven to be a permanent one and consequently I value Doan's Kidney Pills very highly."

FANELLA'S CHRISTMAS SUPPER

By SUSAN GLENN

(Copyright.)

TO Miss Fanella Fenway the flurry of Christmas snow was not beautifull as she hurried through deepening twilight.

Though possessing a certain distinctive air, her coat was pitifully thin and inadequate. Though neatly blackened, her shoes leaked and she wore no rubbers. It is small wonder that the storm seemed merciless and cold. But when she turned in at the big stone gateway, her shoulders straightened proudly.

"The old Fenway place," she murmured, glancing about the gloomy, unkept grounds, "and I am the last of the Fenways."

"If you were not it would go hard with them," interjected that other half of Miss Fenway's nature that was always ridiculing her Fenway pride "Unless," with malicious emphasis "they chanced to be also impervious to cold and hunger!"

"I Have Dreamed of You Sitting Here."

Miss Fanella's lips trembled as she unlocked the great front door—upon no condition did she ever leave or enter the house by any of its other numerous entrances.

She lighted the small oil lamps that stood on the marble top of the hall buffet, placed her coat and hat on the carved rack, and peered closely into the great mirror.

"Tomorrow is Christmas, and your birthday," she whispered accusingly. "and—no one has remembered it! Not one of your old friends! You are alone."

"Of course, I am alone," spoke the Fenway pride complacently. "Who is there in Whalen that I care for? All the old families with whom we associated are gone. It is my misfortune that I am left alone in the old house."

"Why need you be alone? There are people all about you, common people to be sure, but kindly and good And there is—Nelson Travers!"

"A common farmer!"

Miss Fanella could almost believe she heard a real voice in the old hall with all the Fenway pride and scorn in it, a voice alarmingly like her stately mother's.

"It has been settled these fifteen years," she said, picking up the little lamp wearily. "Why must it be gone over again every Christmas?"

Through the great cold rooms the light moved dimly, until she entered what had been the butler's pantry in the old regime. Here a small stove diffused a half-hearted sort of warmth, and a little table and a leather chair were drawn close.

"Here dwelleth the last of the Fenways," she said derisively. "Yet too aristocratic to associate with ordinary mortals!"

From her worn leather bag she drew a letter she had found awaiting her at the postoffice. There were few persons using such stationery who still remembered to write to her.

"Dear Miss Fenway?" she read, "are you still alone at the old place? If so, why can you not come with me to Japan this winter, and help me with the children? There will be no one in our party but ourselves. Please let me know by the first of January."

There followed a page of details. The letter was signed by an old school friend now the wife of a successful financier.

Miss Fanella's hand trembled, her face was drawn and white.

"A nurse maid," she moaned at last bitterly, "a common nurse maid! She put it kindly, and it is kind of her to think of me in my destitution, but that is what it means. Yet, isn't it better than cold and loneliness and starvation? I'm tired of being different from other people. I'll try being as common as the commonest for a while."

Suddenly the great bell pealed through the resounding old rooms. She lifted the little lamp in wonderment and threaded her way again through the icy gloom. No tradespeople called at the house, and certainly not at the big front door! And generations of superiority had taught the neighbors the futility of calling at the Fenway portals.

Nelson Travers stood in the porch, the big white flakes heaped upon his broad shoulders.

"Good evening, Fanella," he said as if he had parted with her but yesterday. Tomorrow is your birthday, I believe, and Christmas, too. Will you come for a ride with me?"

Miss Fanella gasped, as well she might. This, after fifteen years of silence! Had it taken him so long to recover from the repulse of old Madam Fenway?

"I—what will the neighbors think?" she gasped.

"You are thirty-six tomorrow, are you not, Fanella? Isn't that old enough to act as you please regardless of the neighbors?"

"I suppose it is, Nelson," she admitted with a smile. "But where?"

"Will you trust me this once, Fanella? I promise to bring you back whenever you wish."

Miss Fanella looked into the white night. Was she dreaming, or could this unlikely thing really have happened in the deadening monotony of her life?

What difference did it make, anyway. Henceforth she would be only a nursemaid. She looked back into Nelson Travers' honest eyes pleading with her to trust him. About her the stately old furniture upon which her pride had fed so many years, pleaded in vain.

"Yes," she said, "I'll come. I do not know how far I shall go, though."

The man stepped into the old hall and held her coat. His lips closed over his displeasure when he felt the weight of it.

She did not remember the worn gloves on the hall table, and only thought about locking the door when she saw Travers slip the key into his deep pocket.

Wrapped in robes, she seemed unconscious of the storm, realizing only the pleasant sensation of companionship and warmth.

She was not even surprised when he drew up before a low, ample house and lifted her carefully to the doorstone.

"I'll be in in a minute," he told her. "Take off your wraps and get warm."

Miss Fanella, her heart beating high at her own audacity, opened the broad door.

The wide, low rooms within opened pleasantly together, lighted by candles on the mantels, and by softly shaded lamps.

"How pleasant," said Miss Fanella aloud, going to the open fire, and thinking of her little stove in the butler's pantry.

"I have dreamed of you sitting here," said Travers quietly, coming to her. "And now I am going to ask you to eat supper with me—a Christmas supper, you know."

"I shall be most delighted," answered Miss Fanella with a smile. The Fenway pride was mute for once. It was a quiet supper. Fanella poured the tea, conscious that her companion's eyes were following her, and she enjoyed herself with a fierce, defiant sort of enjoyment.

"Fanella," said the man, leading her back to the fire, "I will bless you forever for coming with me. I wanted you to see my home, to understand just how simple and unpretentious it is. I know I am only a 'common farmer,' but I've always loved you, Fanella. I cannot endure it to see you live as you do, alone in that great house. Won't you let me take care of you, dear? I know I am not good enough for you. I realize what it must seem like to you here, but——"

"It is comfortable and—beautiful, Nelson." Her voice broke over the words. "But I do not deserve it. I was not fair and honest with you—for I cared, always. I let my pride and my family interfere!

"Oh," she cried, shaken by sudden, fierce sobs, "why did you never come back? They always do in stories—I could not believe it was all over when you went away!"

"Do you mean," said Travers, "that you would have given me a different answer if I had come back, Fanella?"

She held out her hands—true Fenway hands. "Don't you know, dear, that all women are privileged to change their minds?" she asked.

"What a fool I've been, Fanella," groaned Travers, holding her close. "Fifteen years! Tell me, when did you repent your coldness?"

"Before you had reached the gate," whispered Fanella, penitently.

For the Old Folks.

Cora (aged ten), to Reggie (aged eleven)—Yes. The games are a wretched bore. But, then, it's Christmas, you know, and the old people do so expect to enjoy themselves.

WANTS PICTURES OF KITCHEN

Present Day Cooks Like to See Future Working Place Before They Engage Themselves.

"A phase of the servant girl question that was new to me was sprung the other day when I called at an employment agency to hire a cook," said the nervous woman. "A prepossessing looking girl was brought forward for an interview. Her first question was: Have you any pictures of your kitchen?'

"I said I had none.

"'It is always best to bring them,' said the girl loftily. 'It saves time and trouble, for with them to look at a cook can see at a glance the position of the sink, the tubs, the range, and the cupboards, and can tell if the place will suit her.'

"While I was adjusting my mind to that phase of the proposition another woman with a wider experience than mine piped up that she had brought views of her kitchen. From that minute I was out of it as far as that particular cook was concerned. The pictures met her approval, and the other woman hired her on the spot. I asked the manager if it was the custom for housekeepers to produce views of their home when hiring servants.

"'The custom is not yet universal,' he said, 'but it is growing. In one sense the girl is right; it does save time and trouble.'"

Abraham Lincoln.

In the language of the shop, the farm, the boat, the street, or the nursery, he told the high truths that reason and religion taught, and took possession of his audience by a storm of speech, pouring upon them all the riches of his brave plebeian soul, baptizing every head anew; a man who with the people seemed more mob than they, and with kings the most imperial.—Theodore Parker.

Japanese Plant Camphor Trees.

In Formosa large areas are to be planted with camphor trees during the next few years. The trees now utilized are five hundred to one thousand years old, and the Japanese wisely intend to conserve the source of supply of one of their important monopolies.

Almost Limit of Foolishnesa.

An old woman named Czabo, who was found dead in Budapest, left a will in which she set forth that all her money, over $5,000, should be given to her dog. The animal was handed over to the relatives, who, it is said, will contest the will. The old woman had set a room apart for her dog. It was furnished with large mirrors and antique furniture upholstered in silk. Only the dog was allowed to enter this room.

Wanted to Live in History.

Some men's idea of fame is certainly a distorted one. A murderer in South Carolina pleaded for the privilege of being the first man to be electrocuted when that new mode of execution was introduced into the state.

HER BEST CHRISTMAS

COME on along, Sandy; I'll treat to dinner at the Metropolitan!"

Sandy, a tall girl who didn't look her thirty years, was busy glancing over a typewritten sheet and for a moment did not answer. Bob stood watching her, taking in the delicate lines of her face and the beauty of the "sandy" hair, which, when he was alone and forgot that Sandy was a newspaper woman and his "pal," he was pleased to call golden.

"Cut that out, Sandy. You'll be back. I have a check and it's Christmas Eve. I'm for a treat. I say—did you hear me ask you to go to the Metropolitan? You take it as calmly as if I had asked you to go around to Otto's lunch counter. Deuce take it! Why can't you be a little enthusiastic?"

Slowly the girl raised her head. More than a sheet of copy had been holding her attention. But she caught Bob's frown and immediately the mother instinct in her was aroused. She broke into her usual comrade laugh.

"All right, Bob. The invitation overwhelmed me. The Metropolitan? But I couldn't, Bobby dear. My shirtwaist is soiled and you yourself said there was a hole in my beautiful brown coat."

"Oh, come along! I was only joking. You'd outshine all the women at the Metropolitan if you went there in a khaki suit. I wish you had a little more vanity. Women are awfuly tame when they haven't."

"Come, now, you know I'm vain of the fact that I haven't any vanity. Don't call me tame. I won't go to the Metropolitan with you if you do. Somehow I feel——"

"Fiddlesticks! Get on your hat. I'm going. The idea of a newspaper woman's feeling! Cut it out!"

---

The Metropolitan was filled with the "vulgar rich" in holiday attire; but Sandy and Bob were happy in true bohemian style as they sat at their little table chatting and joking like two boys. Sandy never would play the woman—that was the only objection Bob had to her.

"I say, Sandy, I bet you've no plans for tomorrow and I'm coming to take you out. I've a great plan. Put on that brown silk and play you're a woman for once."

"Yes, a sweet, young, clinging feminine creature with my heart on my sleeve! 'Twill be charming, of course. Do you really think I could play the part?"

"Stop joking, Sandy. You never will take me seriously. You will go, won't you?"

"I'd like to please you, Bobby, but I really must be home tomorrow. I have work that must be done, and besides I have a feeling that I ought not to go."

"Feeling be darned! If you had fewer 'feelings' and more feeling for a poor fellow— What's the matter, Sandy?"

The girl had cast a glance over the room and had grown suddenly pale. She closed her eyes for a moment. Bob had caught the pallor.

"Oh, nothing. I had a little twinge of that old neuralgia.

Thus the chasm was bridged and the dinner ended happily. If anything, Sandy was gayer than usual.

---

Four o'clock the next day Sandy's heart was beating loud. Her "studio," as she was pleased to call it, wore its very best attire. Even the inevitable typewriter was out of sight.

She was older, older by six years than when he had last seen her, but happiness made her wondrously beautiful. Bobby would have lost his wits.

If he should not come! But he would come. If he should come and the dream could not be realized! But he would not come unless he could.

A rap at the door!

"Miss, there's a shentleman a-askin for ye. Should I send him in?"

"Yes, Mary." The tones were perfectly calm. Six years of patient waiting had not been without their power.

"Margaret!"

"John!"

"I knew you would come. I saw you last evening. I knew you would find me. Oh, John, I am so happy!' She rested her head on his shoulder to hide the tears.

"My Margaret, now and forever!"

"And Constance?"

"Constance is gone—and she wished it to be."

A long silence.

"Sit down, John. There is your chair. How often have I pictured you in it. Let me think. Let me get my breath. I knew you would come. I wonder what Bobby will say! He thinks I have no heart. But—it was to be."—New York Mail.

LETTING THEIR LIGHT SHINE

But College Girls as Expert Laundresses Do Not Appeal to One New York Housewife.

College girls who have studied laundering in their domestic science course may some time find an opportunity to apply their knowledge without inconveniencing anybody, but they have not yet reached that idyllic stage.

"Just at present they are an intolerable nuisance," said a woman who has had indirect dealings with the young graduates. "Since they have undertaken to uplift the world through the medium of the washtub I haven't had a stitch of clothes fit to put on.

"That is because they are trying to teach my laundress how to wash and iron. The poor soul has made a living at the washtub for 13 years and has brought up four children, yet these scientific laundresses have concluded that she doesn't know her business.

"There isn't a laundress in town that is safe from intrusion. Some women with Irish tempers won't be bothered, but my washerwoman is too gentle-mannered to refuse instruction, so for the last month she has been turning out her weekly wash with some sweet thing just out of college pottering around bossing the job.

"The poor woman is nearly crazy, and so are her customers. Maybe if left to themselves the girls can do a decent job at laundering; I know my washerwoman can, but when their methods clash both make a botch of the job and linen comes home buttonless, scorched, and torn."—New York Times.

Wycliffe's Prayers.

Among recent sales of relics and curios in London was that of Wycliffe's "Prayers of the Bible," of the date of 1527 or thereabout. "The rare old black letter of this work puts it," says the noted authority on curios, J. F. Blacker, "at once among the scarcest examples of old 'Flete Strete' printing. The noble old divine died in 1834, shortly after he had completed his translation of the Bible into English. These prayers were 'imprynted' just about the time when the first English Bible was published by Tyndale in the years 1526-1532. The six parts realized £250, though a copy of each of the first four parts sold some time ago for £400."

Spread Information of Death.

In Venice, when anyone dies, it is the custom to fix a placard on the front of the deceased person's house, as well as in the neighboring streets, as a sort of public notice, stating his name, age, place of birth, and the illness of which he died.

How Far Is It to Christmas?

By Wilbur D. Nesbit

How far is it to Christmas? It's across the Land of Dreams, where are the laughing valleys and the ever-singing streams, and up the hill of doubting and along the road of smiles until you reach the border of the land of otherwhiles.

It's far away, and near us; it is there, and close at hand—oh, earnest little fellow, can I make you understand? You lie awake and whisper, you count and count the days, and try to bring it nearer in a hundred varied ways!

Already you have seen it in a gleam of joy afar, have seen its joy approaching in the twinkle of a star; you hear the bells that jingle and the clatter of the hoofs that time a song of gladness as they gallop on the roofs.

How far is it to Christmas? It's not so far away—for all I know, already you have and hold the day; it has no time nor season; it is not set apart, but sends its blessed sunshine to every little heart.

HOBO JIM

BY HARRY IRVING GREENE

COPYRIGHT 1912—WESTERN NEWSPAPER UNION.

DOWN the long, gray country road an automobile came whizzing ahead of a cloud of dust that rolled away behind it like smoke from a bomb. In the middle of the road half a dozen turkeys were congregated, long of neck, long of limb, fat of body, juicy, tempting—basking in the fall sunlight. Suddenly there was a rattling gobble from the horn of the machine, an answering gobble from the throats of the turkeys, a cloud of feathers in the air and the man at the wheel passed on with a backward grin at the fowl as it lay fluttering by the wayside. "One more gobbler gathered to the eternal roost," he chuckled.

From out of the long grass that fringed the wayside a man arose, lean and hungry, and stood looking at the still kicking victim. Then he drew a huge, old-fashioned silver watch from his pocket and glanced at it. "Just dinner time, and I haven't had a taste of a turk in a year. Guess this is my lucky day," he soliloquized. Then he picked up the bird and started for the brook near by.

He seated himself by the bank and commenced dressing his find, tossing handfuls of feathers to the winds, feeling of the plump body with grins of satisfaction. Then all at once he looked up. A sour faced man with a big star on his coat was standing over him. "Come with me," he commanded.

"To where?" grunted Hobo Jim.

"To the place where all turkey thieves should go—to the coop."

"But I didn't steal this bird——" Jim began, then stopped short. He was staring into the open countenance of a disagreeable looking revolver and he dropped his prey. "All right. I'll go," he said, sullenly.

* * * * * * * * *

Night had smothered the countryside and from out of it the snow was

"Come With Me," He Commanded.

coming down in hard, frozen particles like sifted sands. Across the fields the wind came nipping like a sharp toothed terrier, and Hobo Jim glanced anxiously about through the gloom. He had been released from the "coop" only that day after two months of confinement for having been caught with a dead turkey in his possession, and he shivered a bit beneath his thin clothes as he hurried along the lone road. To make matters worse he was hungry, broke and friendless, and to be hungry, broke and friendless upon Christmas eve is hard enough luck for any man. Then as he peered, he saw through the darkness of the roadside a glimmer of light that twinkled before his eyes like a great star of hope and he paused with his gaze fastened wistfully upon it.

With a caution grown of long experience he passed quietly to the back of the building and peered through a window. He could see into the dining room from here, and as he gazed and sniffed at a crack deep within him his stomach began clamoring like a famished wolf pack, for within a dozen feet of him was a table piled high with good things to eat, while about it the gorged family still sat nibbling. "There is enough left for a dozen lunches, and still things to throw away," he muttered as his eyes roved over the board. Much encouraged by the sight he stretched forth his knuckles in a timid tap, then putting on his most woebegone face stood awaiting his fate with a heart that fluttered anxiously.

The door opened and a man stood before it peering into the darkness. And as the lamp light from within fell upon the hobo's cringing form, the face of the one upon the threshold darkened until it matched the night. "So it is you—sneaking around here and looking for more of my turkeys," he said threateningly. "I have a notion to run you in again upon suspicion. Get out of here, thief."

"But I didn't steal that bird——" whined the caller. Then he paused suddenly, for once more he was staring into the mouth of that same unpleasant looking revolver. "Oh, I'll go all right," he added hastily.

Up the road he went hurrying, angry, disappointed, hungrier and colder than ever. In the bottom of a pocket where he had plunged a hand for warmth his big, old-fashioned watch lay ticking and his fingers closed about it fondly. It was his only possession of slightest value. Twenty years ago it had been given to him upon a Christmas eve—twenty years ago in the days of his boyhood, and he had carried it with him incessantly throughout all his wanderings. "I suppose I could get the price of a meal and a bed from that old ticker," he mused, then his jaw set. "But I wouldn't part with it for its weight in greenbacks. It is the last thing she ever gave me, and I'll hang on to it if I hang for doing it. I'll beg, starve —yes, or help myself when nobody is looking before I'll part with it." He shoved it deeper into its place and bent forward against the wind.

Five minutes later he again paused suddenly. By the wayside another light was shining, and with a quick glance up and down the road he stood listening. Nothing came to his ears but the low growl of the wind and he hesitated no longer. Sneaking into the yard with feet that fell as softly as the snowflakes themselves he once more peered through a window. There was no laden table here, but instead he saw a bed upon which lay a white faced boy with a woman close beside him. He put his ear to the pane and listened. It was not long before he learned that the two were alone in the house, and at that good news Hobo Jim smiled approvingly.

He passed quickly to the kitchen door and tried the latch. The door was not locked and he entered with the stealth of a panther. A spare bed room with door ajar was adjoining, and forming his plans as he sneaked along Jim crept within. Here, in the darkness, he would hide beneath the bed, wait until all was still, and then in the early morning hours fill his stomach and pockets from the pantry and silently steal away. Instinct told him that the woman would sleep beside the sick boy and he had little fear of being discovered. And what if he was—with a lone woman and a helpless kid as his only bar to escape! Noiselessly he crept beneath his shelter and lay listening.

Through the stillness their voices came to him in murmurs. It had been a bad year for the two in the next room, a year of privation and want, and the morrow would be the hollowest mockery of any Christmas that had ever come to them; a day when a skeleton would preside at their board and hunger be an unwilled guest. Patiently the woman was explaining to the sufferer, telling him that she feared that this year Santa Claus would pass him by without stopping. But the boy was unbelieving.

"Santa Claus does not forget. Hang up my stocking, please," he told her, and Jim heard her sigh as she crossed the room to obey him. Then as the warmth of the house came stealing softly over him Jim's eyelids fluttered and closed, the last thing he remembered hearing being the woman's voice as it began reading to the sick one.

"More blessed to give than to receive——" But Hobo Jim was now sleeping.

He was awakened and raised his head a trifle as he listened. There had been an accident in the room, a serious accident as he soon gathered, for through some misfortune the clock had been knocked from the mantle and now lay a ruin upon the floor. It was the only timepiece they had, and the woman was worrying over it considerably, for she no longer had the means of telling when it was time to give the boy his medicine, and the proper administration of the medicine was a very important matter to the sick one. "That's kind of tough on the kid," thought the hobo from his hiding place. But it was no fault of his and anyway he had troubles enough of his own.

Midnight came, and for the last hour all had been still as a cavern. Cautiously, silently, Jim backed out of his lair and rising to his feet stood alert. By the dim light from the other room he could see the pantry. Then he gave a snort of disappointment. There was not enough upon the barren shelves to fill one corner of his hollow stomach, and here were a woman and a sick boy to feed off of it. It was disgusting. Slipping merely a crust of bread into his pocket he crept out again.

From where he stood he could see the interior of the dimly lighted room beyond, and curiosity arose within him. With the tread of a prowling fox he stepped to the threshold and peered around the corner. The boy was sleeping now, while beside the bed the woman was sitting with head drooped forward as worn out from her long vigil she had fallen asleep in the midst of her watching. And as he gazed at their tired faces there came to Jim a picture of many long years before, a picture of when he had been a boy and sick as this one now was, when a woman had sat beside him the long nights through giving him his medicine and ministering to him as she read—what was it she had read? Yes, he remembered now. "More blessed to give than to receive." That was it. He had never had a great deal of confidence in these words and had never tried them out, still he had sometimes thought that one day he would put them to the test. But he had never had enough for himself, let alone others, while now—his eyes fell upon the stocking hanging from the mantle and a queer look came creeping over his face. They certainly were in tough luck, tougher luck than he was in himself, and the smashing of the clock had been bad business. For a full minute he stood blinking at them, then for the second time that night he chuckled as his hand wandered into his one good pocket. Then he withdrew it, and stretching forth a long arm slid the big silver watch into the hanging stocking.

Along the black road Jim went hurrying, hunger gnawing at his stomach, the teeth of the wind sharper than ever. In one hand he held the crust of bread and now and then he bit at it savagely. "More blessed to give than to receive." He laughed as he buttoned his coat around his throat and bent further forward against the gale.

"I dunno—I dunno, but anyway I've tried it out at last. Only thing I'm sorry for is that I won't see that sick kid's face when he finds that old ticker in the morning."

No Steel Pens In Tropics.

The ordinary stel pens used in temperate climates, particularly those used in the United States, are not adaptable to the tropics on account of rusting. This is especially true during the rainy season and at seaports. Bronze or brass pens, or those coated with bronze, do not seem to be thus affected. Ink deteriorates very quickly in tropical climates and often has the consistency of gum. On the ordinary steel pens this aids the rust and is hard to wipe off if left for a short time. With the bronze or brass pen or with a pen coated with bronze the coated ink is easily wiped or brushed off.

Boon to Those of Weak Heart.

A German army doctor, M. Schurig, has put on the market an invention which he declares will be the greatest boon of the century to sufferers from heart disease. Those who will be benefited are such as cannot afford a ground floor or a house with an elevator. The invention consists of a slipper that folds into the pocket. The slipper has a very thick and soft sole, and it is maintained that when worn its properties are so wonderful that it is easy to ascend flights of stairs.

CHEER OF THE OLD HOME

Something Which Every Man and Woman Should Be Able to Look Back Upon.

It would be a blessing if we parents could just reflect that it may be that the only cheer in life which our children will get is the cheer of the old home, writes Frank W. Gunsaulus. They are hurrying out into the world which has no time to make them happy. If they are fortunate, as the world says, they will probably have homes, where old-fashioned and romping cheerfulness would skin its shins against the furniture or break the Louis XIV. chair. Blessed old days, and most wholesome to look back upon, are those when the hearty laugh of father would not split the lace curtains, and when mother could have two big, healthy children upon her lap while she was sitting down, with safety to all parties, in her rocker. No coin on earth costs so little to mint and goes so far in paying life's heavy expenses as Good Cheer. Pessimists are made before children are ten years of age, and pessimism comes when a child cannot turn a golden laugh into ready cash for life's poverty and its relief. We talk about the cruelty of a father's depriving a child of sufficient clothing. It is too bad; but a child's toes would better be ruddy and his ears tingle with cold than to have a home with winter in the atmosphere and the smiles all freezing to death.

No child is prepared for the supremely serious things of life who cannot laugh away all the goblins and ghosts and break with the shining wand of Good Cheer the circle drawn around him by any giant.

FOR HOLIDAY SHOPPERS.

What Palmer Merchants Have Provided For Them.

LARGE AND VARIED STOCKS READY.

Utility as Well as Pleasure Borne in Mind. Almost Everything One Can Think Of.

Seekers after just what is right in the way of holiday gifts will find many suggestions in the advertisements in to-night's Journal. There is variety sufficient for the needs of all, and prices to fit the most plethoric or the leanest purse.

To seekers after gifts for men the Toggery shop offers a most attractive display. In addition to the larger articles, such as rain coats, sweaters, bathrobes, etc., there is an endless variety of practical articles, such as shirts, gloves, ties, hosiery, handkerchiefs, garters, pajamas, nightrobes, collars, cuffs, mufflers, cuff and collar buttons, umbrellas, warm slippers, besides underwear and other necessaries, suit-cases, trunks, and almost everything a man needs to dress himself for any occasion.

Stone's general store makes a generous showing of toys for the children, and the variety is almost inconceivable, when the other lines carried by this store are taken into account. Useful articles abound here in great profusion, such as rugs, lamps, numerous articles for ladies' wear, including wrappers, hosiery, etc. There are lace curtains for the parlor, sofa pillows, napkins, dinner sets and other table furnishings. Of small articles for use there is a great variety, among them being pocketbooks, coin purses, hand mirrors, work boxes, shaving sets, etc, etc. As usual, the grocery department contains everything needed for the Christmas feasting.

The stationery store of E. C. Gould offers an unusual variety of dainty things of the smaller sort. Books form an important part of the showing here, and range from Bibles of the finest and most expensive kind all the way down through the list of fiction, history, travel, etc., to lighter literature. Fountain pens of various makes are offered, and box stationery in various sizes and exclusive shades and qualities abound. Lovers of hand-painted china find something to please them, and there are numerous hand-decorated Christmas cards, calendars, etc.

Pero's variety store is a new bidder for patronage, and as it was opened only a few weeks ago there is nothing but new goods on the shelves. The range here is too great to enumerate, but includes, besides a large line of toys, games, mechanical toys, etc., a vast number of articles both useful and ornamental in the home. Some excellent low-priced confectionery is found here, and other good things in the line of eatables.

Furniture of every description is shown at the Walcott-Cameron store, from the finest dining room or parlor suites to the commonest kind for the kitchen—and all grades in between. Fancy rockers, easy chairs of all kinds, tables for all purposes, lamp stands, hall trees, moth-proof boxes for wearing apparel, sectional bookcases, couches, divans, etc., with rugs, dinner sets, lamps and pictures provide a variety from which it should not be hard to choose something acceptable for the Christmas giving. The children are not forgotten, for there are doll carriages, sleds and numerous other things to delight the heart and please the fancy of the younger generation.

Confectionery of various makes, both in bulk and in fancy boxes, is to be found at the Bay State Drug store. Cigars are also much in evidence, the list including many well-known and popular brands, some in fancy boxes especially designed for the holiday trade. There are also many other articles which will appeal both to the seeker after useful gifts and those who desire something to please the eye. A

MONSON CITIZENS KICK.

Object to Big Raise in Electric Co's. Bills.

MASS MEETING DRAWS LARGE CROWD

Boost of 20 to 400 Per Cent Over Last Year's November Bills. No Reason Evident.

The citizens of Monson have for some time been much dissatisfied with the electric service which the Central Massachusetts Electric company has furnished, and on Thursday evening of last week held a mass meeting to voice their protests and take some action in the matter. The meeting was called by A. D. Norcross, O. C. McCray and E. C. Bradway, and was held in the selectmen's room in Memorial Hall.

A. D. Norcross acted as chairman and G. L. Keeney as clerk. The room was well filled with disgruntled electricity users, and numerous of them voiced their discontent with the service. There were many complaints of overcharging, and all were similar, to the effect that the November bills of this year were approximately double those of the same month in previous years, while the quality of the light was substantially the same. The poor quality of the street lights also came in for a share of criticism, and there was much adverse comment on the part of business men that the lights do not come on many nights until 9 or 10 o'clock when, to be of any benefit to the merchants and their customers they should begin to burn much earlier. A committee consisting of A. D. Norcross, O. C. McCray, M. H. Post, H. F. Dewing and E. C. Bradway was appointed to investigate complaints and conditions and report at an adjourned meeting which was held last evening.

This meeting was held in Memorial hall, the selectmen's room being too small to accommodate the crowd. A. D. Norcross presided and reported for the committee. Papers had been circulated among the users of electricity asking the amount of the bills for October and November of the past three years. In nearly all cases they showed an increase; that for November 1912 over 1911 varied from 20 to 400 per cent. Accompanying these letters were many statements stating that the increase was not due to the use of more light; in some instances gas had been used to furnish light in place of that furnished entirely by electricity a year ago.

Mr. Norcross stated that not only were the committee satisfied that there was something radically wrong, but that the reports presented to the meeting showed it; the officials of the electric company also admitted it, but are alleged to be unable to account for it or explain the reason. A rebate, he said, should be received from the company on exorbitant bills, but it was his opinion that the committee should go further into the matter, and if the meeting so decided it would do so. The Warren Power company is desirous of furnishing a service in town, and this will be looked into. The committee could also investigate the purchasing of power in bulk, the town attending to the distribution, as is done in some other places.

The matter of a municipal lighting plant was also touched upon. Mr. Norcross was a member of the committee appointed several years ago to look into this proposition, and the questionable success of the scheme deters the committee from urging it on the town. There is, however, an available water power and the place for a plant, and there are numerous reasons why such a proposition might be advantageous. The public was asked to bear patiently with the committee, as it felt that a satisfactory adjustment would be made before long.

Various phases of the situation were touched on at length by other members of the committee. In reply to a question from Mr. Shaw as to whether or not

Trolley Stafford to Monson.

Incorporation of Company For This Purpose Proposed.

It is announced that a petition is to be presented to the next Connecticut General Assembly asking for the incorporation of a street railway company, to be known as the Stafford and Monson Street Railway company, which plans to construct a line from Stafford Springs to the state line, there to connect with an extension of the line from Palmer to Monson. The proposed line would start at Hayma ket Square in Stafford Springs and run north through Orcutts and Evergreen Park near the state line. The petition will also include a request for a line from Stafford Springs through Stafford Hollow and Staffordville to connect with the Palmer and Worcester line near Brimfield. The New Haven road already has a charter for this line, but it does not appear likely to build and the charter will expire in a short time.

The inhabitants of Wales would be very much gratified if the latter branch is ever built. It is recognized that such a line would mean everything to the town in the way of freight facilities, which it must have if its mills are to compete successfully with those more advantageously situated. The town has long wished that the line already chartered might be constructed, but long ago gave up hope. The Connecticut promotors may not build if the charter is granted, but the new move is sure to revive hopes. The line to Monson would be welcomed by Stafford people who have business in Springfield, as the steam road accommodations are not of the best.

Probate Court Business.

At a session of the probate court in Springfield Wednesday the following local business was among that transacted:

Will proved in estate of—George A. Norton, late of Monson, Mary J. Norton executrix.

Administration granted in the estate of Olia M. Childs, late of Palmer, Elmer G. Childs administrator.

Accounts allowed in estate of Mary Lyons, late of Monson.

The Grand Army Post, Woman's Relief Corps and Sons of Veterans hold a joint installation Tuesday evening, January 7th. Each order has the privilege of inviting its friends.

Turned Down in Chicopee.

Warren Power Company Fails to Get Franchise in That City.

The Warren Power company, which proposes to erect a power plant at West Warren for the production of electricity which it desires to sell in communities west of that point, and which has been granted competitive franchises in Palmer, Ludlow and West Springfield, has run up against a snag in Chicopee, its petition for a franchise in that city being turned down at a meeting of the aldermen this week. At the same time a franchise was granted to the Amherst Power company. The Warren company will make another effort, presenting a new petition to next year's board of aldermen.

More Honors for Palmer Boy.

When the November marks of the students at Holy Cross college were announced last Friday morning and the usual testimonials of merit were presented, the name of Daniel E. Horgan of Three Rivers, a Palmer high school graduate, was again on the list. Mr. Horgan attained high ranking and secured three testimonials.

Striker Goes to Jail.

Three Months For Assault With Dangerous Weapon at Warren.

Three West Warren cases were brought into the district court in East Brookfield Wednesday morning. Waldislaw Welizek was sentenced to the house of correction at Worcester for three months on the charge of assault with a dangerous weapon on Josef Lemanski. These two men are employed in the Warren cotton mills at West Warren, where the weavers are out on a strike. They board at the No. 3 boarding house and they got into an argument at dinner Tuesday and the assault followed. Joseph Miniszewski of Ludlow, organizer of the united textile workers of the United States, was discharged from the complaint of obstructing the sidewalks and the case of Josef Wutowicz of disturbing the peace was placed on file.

Charles W. Chamberlin, manager of the telephone exchange, gave a very interesting talk on "Telephony," illustratiug his remarks with stereopticon, to Quaboag council of the Royal Arcanum Tuesday evening at the regular meeting.

specialty is made of Christmas decorations in a variety of forms.

Hellyar's Bargain Store affords an opportunity to secure a wide variety of articles, both useful and ornamental, including toys for the children, at prices which will appeal to those who have many friends to remember.

Jewelry store stocks have an attraction for every gift buyer, and that in the establishment of E. E. Brooks is no exception. For years this store has held a well-deserved reputation for handling only the best in all lines, and purchasers are sure of the worth of their money. The attractions there this season are more numerous than ever, and apparently include everything which one could desire. Solid and sterling silver is found in a multitude of designs and a wide range of price. Gold articles are by no means lacking, nor is bronze and cut glass, some of the latter being of the most exquisite patterns. Jewel boxes, umbrellas, chafing dishes and hand-painted china are only a few suggestions of the many things suitable for selection by discriminating buyers.

Toilet and manicure sets are a specialty at the Lynde drug store, but these are by no means the only things for Christmas shoppers. Christmas candy and stationery are to be found in great variety, with Christmas cards, booklets, calendars, etc. Smoking and shaving sets, traveling cases, military brushes, mirrors and pocketbooks are only a few of the numerous lines from which selections may be made.

At Gamwell's clothing store are to be found all sorts of things which delight the hearts of men—in the line of wearing apparel and the accessories. Fancy vests are shown in variety, and smoking jackets may be had for users of the weed. Linen handkerchiefs, neckwear and suspenders in Christmas boxes, mufflers, gloves, and a thousand and one things which a man apppreciates and needs are found here.

The hardware store of Whitcomb & Faulkner presents an unusual opportunity for the selection of useful gifts. There are articles suitable for every member of the family, from the youngest to the eldest. Coffee percolators for the breakfast table, meat choppers for the kitchen, flat irons of various kinds for the housewife, bread mixers, baking dishes of guernsey ware, carving sets and cutlery of all kinds, scissors and shears are acceptable to any woman. A thermos bottle makes an agreeable gift, and there are various sizes. Flash lights in a variety of sizes are to be found, with safety razors, shaving mugs, hones, and other articles useful to men. For the youngsters there are skates, sleds, hockey sticks, Ingersoll watches, air and powder rifles, tool chests, pocket knives and an almost endless variety of large and small articles.

Smokers—and those who wish to give smokers' gifts—will find at Gale Bros. about everything to be desired in this line. Special mixtures of tobacco in packages, small and large boxes of cigars, pipes of all kinds and shapes, are in sufficient variety to please all customers—unless they be unusually critical.

TAVERN ALSO A PAWNSHOP

Establishment in the City of London, England, Is in Enjoyment of Unique Privilege.

A time-honored London (Eng.) city tavern, the Castle, at the corner of Cowcross street, facing Farrington street, enjoys the unique distinction of being also a fully licensed pledge shop. Over the door in the bar, which gives access to the landlord's private room, and thrown into bold relief by the official document behind it, the historic three-sphered symbol is discernible. Any one may here negotiate a loan upon his personal belongings without being under the necessity of first calling for refrshment. Formerly the house had a special pledge counter resembling the modern "Bottie and Jug" department, but this is no longer in evidence.

This strange combination of business dates from the reign of George IV., who, after attending a cock fight at Hockley-in-the-Hole, applied to the landlord of the Castle for a temporary accommodation on the security of his watch and chain. By royal warrant a few days later he invested that obliging boniface with the right of advancing money on pledges, and from that time down to the present a pawnbroker's licen e has been annually granted to the Castle. This hostelry is mentioned once or twice by Dickens in his novels.

Poor Spelling as a Lure.

The critical eye of a conscientious orthographer was attracted by the sign above a Third avenue luncheon, and he went in to set the proprietor right. "Yes," said the lunchroom man, "I know 'sandewiches' is wrong, but you see that sign attracts a lot of 'smart Alecks' into the store who want to teach me how to spell and after they come they usually stop long enough to order something. What'll yours be?"—New York Tribune.

Possibly the Reason.

"The trouble is that my boss has favorites. You can't deny it." "I won't deny it. But have you noticed that his favorites do all the hard work about the place?"—Louisville Courier-Journal.

meters were pushed up, Mr. Norcross replied that the manager of the company had informed him that a "booster" had been installed on the Monson line, but he did not know just what that meant. One patron stated that he had had a two-hours' conference with one of the company's officials, who figured out the lights the customer had, voltage, number of possible hours of use, and so on, and arrived at the conclusion that it would not be possible for the customer to use over $2 worth of electricity in a month; the bill presented to him had been $9.

The meeting was adjourned subject to the call of the committee.

Nearly 300 Rugs

A Clean-Up From the Mill of the Hartford Carpet Corporation of Thompsonville, Conn.

HARTFORD SAXONYS, BODY BRUSSELS, WILTONS and VELVETS

Rugs Containing Insignificant Imperfections

At less than wholesale prices

Here is a slight intrusion on the looked-for Holiday advertising, but one you will agree is justified by the importance of the offering.

From the Hartford Carpet Corporation we have bought nearly 300 high-grade Rugs, a clean-up of their mills, including Rugs which have failed to pass the critical inspection to which they are subjected, because of the slight inaccuracies in the shading of the Rugs. In these Rugs the matching of the patterns is all perfect and the imperfections are so slight as to be, in almost every case, practically unnoticeable, and in every case so slight that they do not affect in the least the beauty or practical worth of the Rug.

These Rugs we have been able to buy at less than the cost of production and we have marked them at prices which are less than regular wholesale cost, making what we believe to be the greatest opportunity to buy strictly high-grade Rugs at much less than regular prices that has been offered in Springfield in years.

BEST GAME OF ALL

The Fan—You can talk about baseball, football and basketball, but the mistletoe game is the best of all.

Christmas Plum Pudding.

The Christmas plum pudding is descended from the plum porridge and is a time-honored dish at every Christmas feast. To be properly made, each person in all the household must stir it before it is boiled and the mistress of the house must add the spices "with her own fair hand," and so she favors fortune for a year. If she is an American and mixes her pudding in an ancient china bowl, stirring it with as ancient a spoon, whose handle is adorned with an old English crest, so much the better, for in the new land she is helping to keep alive the customs that made old England merrie.

The pudding should be boiled in a well-floured cloth "six hours upon the day of mixing, six hours upon the day of eating, and the steam should not cease to arise from the pot while the pudding is within it."

Not Knocking.

"Beg pardon," said the agent, as Mr. Grouch opened the door, "but I would like to ask if Mr. Dodger, your next door neighbor, is good pay." "How do I know whether he is good pay or not?" exclaimed Mr. Grouch. "All I know about him is that he has four grandchildren and he still owes for his marriage license."

UNCONDITIONAL SURRENDER OF STUBBORN MILLICENT

By HARMONY WELLER.

Millicent stepped lightly from her limousine and into the foyer of the theater. She was conscious of presenting an unusual picture in her big drooping hat and frock of palest mauve; there was just a suggestion of melancholy about Millicent that only exaggerated her charm. To the man standing near the ticket office she seemed the embodiment of all that was lovely.

Millicent looked up and caught his eyes fixed admiringly upon her and the color flamed into her cheeks. Her fingers trembled slightly as she fumbled for her ticket.

A frown sped swiftly across her face. The ticket that she had taken a month or so ago was not in her bag!

"We have been booked back for the last six weeks," the man told her.

"I did so want to see the play," she informed the man behind the window.

As she turned to leave the foyer her appealing eyes swept across space to the good-looking man whose gaze had brought the color into her cheeks.

"If you care to take this seat—I will be only too happy," he said in a perfectly impersonal tone.

Millicent hesitated a second only then in a hurried voice thanked him.

"And you are not robbing yourself?" she questioned.

"The seat will go begging if you do not use it," the man said and gave her the ticket.

Millicent reached down into the depths of her opera bag and brought forth a two-dollar bill.

"Is that right?" she asked and did not raise her eyes.

A dull red mounted even to the man's temples. He drew back swiftly then as suddenly took the money.

"Thank you, yes." He raised his hat and Millicent went into the well-filled theater.

A moment before the curtain arose she knew that he had come in and that he was sitting beside her. Millicent felt peculiarly aggrieved that he had not so much as looked at her.

She found herself losing interest in the actors and watching every movement of the long, shapely hands of the man. Occasionally she stole a surreptitious glance at his profile.

The success of the play had come, not through any hectic love affairs with another man's wife or any great financial crisis. It was merely a pretty, domestic drama told by well balanced, healthy-minded people. There were no scheming politicians and no wan eyed heroines.

The hero was big and broad-minded and the girl he loved was sweet and she was not jealous nor catty when her handsome lover danced with the dark-eyed Suzette.

Millicent felt suddenly very small and insignificant and unloved.

"It is only play girls who are so simple minded," she argued with herself.

She glanced at the man beside her. His eyes were following the girl on the stage and Millicent fancied there was more than the theater-goer's admiration in his face. She bit her lips to still their trembling and turned again toward the stage.

"Girls are not like that in real life," she told herself vehemently.

The curtain went down on the second act. The man beside Millicent again went out and in her vivid imagination she pictured him as buying great clusters of American beauties and sending them to the stage heroine.

She wished now that she had not seen the play nor the man. Way down in the depths of her nature something had stirred. Was it the play or was it the man beside her whose personality seemed to have overpowered her?

Whatever it was Millicent waited with rapidly beating heart for his return.

The light went down and she began to think he was not coming.

"How perfectly ridiculous and silly of me to feel this way." She laughed scornfully at herself and ended with wistful eyes.

Against her will she turned toward the back of the theater. Yes he was standing there. A moment later he came down and took his seat beside her.

The last act was drawing to a close when resolution suddenly became apparent in Millicent. The color crept slowly up to the shadows beneath her eyes and her lips smiled.

With a very gentle almost unfelt movement she leaned nearer the big man and slipped her hand through his arm. A sudden hungry little jerk was all the reward her efforts brought forth. He did not turn his head but Millicent watched his jaw set. A moment later her fingers closed over the ring that dangled from his watch chain.

Still the man remained as if carved in stone.

Millicent struggled softly with the clasp that held tight to the chain and finally the ring was in her own hands. The big diamond flashed in the semi-darkness of the theater and Millicent drew a long breath of contentment.

She looked lovingly at the ring for a moment then up into the big man's face. Her voice was only a whisper.

"Billy dear—I want my ring back—if you still—love me." In that little eager whisper was all the love that a hungry man longed for and his hand closed swiftly over her own. It was as if he had folded her within his arms.

"I have never ceased to love you, sweetheart of mine," he told her and slipped the ring back on her finger.

"See how completely I surrendered," she said happily. "I had my ticket all the time."

Kind deeds are never lost.

The Night before Christmas

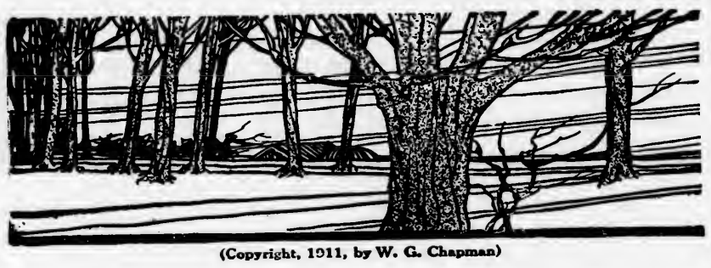
By Wilbur D. Nesbit



"'Tis the night before Christmas"—
I whisper the rhyme
And wander in fancy
To "once on a time."
I see the big fireplace,
The girls and the boys,
The long, heaped-up stockings,
The drums and the toys.

"'Tis the night before Christmas"—
So old, and so new!
With all of its dreamings
So good and so true.
I see all the faces
Forgotten so long,
And out of the twilight
There murmurs a song.

"'Tis the night before Christmas"—
And here, by my grate,
The past rises, glowing;
The years lose their weight,
The boy-days come trooping
At memory's call,
And gleam in the embers
That flicker and fall.

"'Tis the night before Christmas"—
Ah, could I but clutch
The gold of my fancies!
'Twould go at my touch!
The shouts and the laughter
Now sweet to my ear
Would shrink to a silence
Too deep and too drear.

"'Tis the night before Christmas"—
Remembrances stir
As sweet as the cherished
Frankincense and myrrh.
And, hark! As the visions
Grow dim to the sight,
There comes: "Merry Christmas!
And, boy-days, good night!"

(Copyright, 1911, by W. G. Chapman)

A DAILY CONVERSATION.

"Papa?"
"Well?"
"Say, papa, is there a Santa Claus?"
"I reckon so. Don't bother me. I'm reading."
"Willie Smith, he said, there ain't any."
"Is that the kind of grammar you learn at school?"
"But how does Santa Claus get in?"
"He comes down the chimney."
"We ain't got no chimney."
"Ain't got! Where do you learn such talk?"
"Willie Jones, he say—Say papa, is there really a Santa Claus?"
"There used to be one."
"Has he quit?"
"I guess not. If you're a good boy."
"Am I a good boy?"
"Not always."
"How does Santa Claus get in?"
"Oh, he knows how."
"He can't squeeze in the steam pipes, can he?"
"Maybe."
"It would wet his whiskers, wouldn't it?"
"Maybe."
"Say, papa?"
"Uh?"
"Is there a—"
"Now you go to bed and don't ask another question!"

Would Fill the Bill.

Mr. Bigheart—Wiggins, old boy, we've raised $50 to get the boss a Christmas present, and we want something that will make a great show for the money—something that will look big, you know. Can't you suggest something?

Wiggins—Sure. Buy $50 worth of rice and then boil it.

Saves Her Feelings.

Miss Askit—Does your husband smoke those cigars you gave him Christmas?

Mrs. Nuwed—He smoked one and said he would keep the rest to remind him of my kindness.

Now She's Convinced.

Askit—Where is that Miss Oldgirl, who was expressing herself so strongly against foolish Christmas customs the other day?

Tellit—She's laid up with a bad cold—caught it while she was out gathering mistletoe.

STRATEGY.

Mr. Softeigh — Miss Homeleigh seems to have that corner all to herself.

Miss Gabby—Yes, the mistletoe hangs there, and she has spent the evening in that spot.

Preparing for Christmas.

Deacon Goodly—What are you building that addition to your house for, Parson Saintly?

ENTERTAINING THE YULETIDE ANGELS

By PRUDENCE STANDISH.

WHERE are these angels, invisible to mortal eyes, and how may we entertain them? They are in the spirit of Christmas, in that glad feeling in the heart which knows there is reason for joy and which tells us to do all we can for others.

When we transgress against the laws of joy and kindness we are turning the Yuletide from our doors. When we [illegible] hearts fully [illegible] Christmas spirit, in every sense of the word, we are flinging wide the portals to the winged ones and spreading the banquet they love.

To come down to plain, everyday speaking, here are a few of the sins the most well-meaning persons commit against the holiness, love and comfort of the Christmastide.

Everybody knows that year by year the shops make a strenuous effort to encourage the early buying of gifts. Christmas goods are put on sale quite six weeks before they are needed, while many a mercantile advertisement openly pleads the case of the shop people. When we put off our buying until the eleventh hour, men, women and children—all of whom have a right to their own share of Christmas — must work overtime. Nothing is said of the awful heat of the crowded shops, of the exhausted air, of the toiling beings who swelter, stand in icy draughts, who faint and, perhaps, are sometimes discharged for inadequacy with the last hideous battle of buying. But those who are behind the scenes know it all and every heart open to human justice must surely see this side of late Christmas shopping—the bitter side.

How inadequate is the last-moment present bought under such conditions—the usual conditions in cities—to express the rightful Christmas sentiment. Instead of telling of Christmas joy if it could but speak the gift would say:

"I bring you a friend's irritabilities, and a sales-woman's white cheeks, and a little cash girl's sobs, and wish you a miserable Christmas." In short, this belated purchase, obtained with such effort to all concerned, carries with it the unheard tears and sighs of the Yuletide angels, those shining spirits of gladness we turn from our doors. There is a way to escape this very great annoyance to ourselves and injustice to others. The shops are never crowded in the early morning, so do the shopping then with the very first hour. Or if you are a business person and cannot spare the time, write the friend whom you recall at this late hour a nice little note full of Christmas feeling or else run around the corner and buy her a bunch of bright berries from any of the temporary stands, which if not patronized would mean ruin to their owners. At any rate, however, you solve the problem, keep one thought in your heart:

Peace on earth and good will toward all the poor souls hired to sell Christmas presents.

The next sinners against the Yuletide angels are the family ogres who deny the home children their rightful share of Christmas joy, who fret about having the little Christmas tree with its trifling gifts, who shatter infantile idols by revealing the sacred mystery of Santa Claus, and so and so on. Ah, me, ah, me, could I not tell weeping stories myself of the hardness of grown-up hearts at this time—stories of the dark and dreadful day when a silly aunt of seventeen mocked me for my belief in good Kriss Kringle and when, a little later, the edict went forth that I was too old to "think much of Christmas" any more. Is anybody ever "too old" to think of Christmas? Is the heart ever too hardened not to suffer when the dearest of its saints is ruthlessly taken away?

As to this rubbishy talk of the Christmas tree being too much trouble, or too much expense, it only means that the grown-ups are thinking entirely of themselves. There are Christmas trees and Christmas trees, and the cheapest and littlest may bring just as much joy to small hearts as the most expensive ones. In fact, I have seen little Christmas trees burdened with tiny gifts, and gay with candles, that cost no more than a couple of dollars. They were set up with love, and trimmed with love, and revealed with love; and the children and the grown-ups were all as happy as happy could be because they had invited every one of the Yuletide angels to the fun.

So don't rob the children of their good Christmas saint, Santa Claus, but leave them to find out the facts of Christmas giving themselves. And, be your home ever so poor, save something from the housekeeping money to give the children their rightful Christmas joy in another way when the tree cannot be managed. An orange, a big, rosy apple, and a walking stick of striped peppermint candy cost but little. Yet the bunch of cheap things will seem like Christmas, the real true—true Christmas, when it is dumped out of the little stocking.

Concerning more important gifts than these, they also may be of the cheapest sort. All a little child expects is something new, so the trifles bought at a reasonable hour at the ten-cent store, the cheap, home-dressed doll, the nickel watch or fifteen-cent box of paints, are all equally prized. What the kiddies want is to feel their Yuletide angels near them, and a little extra bother, a little extra patience, will achieve this blessing. Remember, too, the child without the gates, for it needs a share of your joy. Sit up a little later for the next six nights and see what you can make out of pretty scraps of stuff on hand, the colored pictures in the old fashion books, etc. Let all the children who cross your way feel some of the gladness that is in your own heart. It is so easy. Don't grumble; do what you can with enthusiasm and give everything with love.

The worst sinners against Christmas peace are those who feel the season is a nuisance and who do their level best to make others feel the same thing. They hate the excitement, the exchange of presents, the letters or cards they must send, the idea of having to give servants money, the dinners they must get up, those which they must attend. And in hating these, and all the dozen and one duties of the Christmastide, they hate everything—the joy that is in the air, the sweet church bells, the cherubim and seraphim of Bethlehem, and even him whose coming the prophet Micah foretold so long before.

CURSORY, AS IT WERE.

The Owl—What do you think of Mr. Robin's new home?

The Sparrow—It looks very nice, but I've only taken a bird's-eye view of it.

True.

PALMER NEWS.

An Interesting Place.

One of the most interesting places at this time of the year is the store in the Holbrook block occupied by the Central Massachusetts Electric company with an exhibition of electrical appliances. It is truly a most fascinating place, equipped with a multitude of things electrical, from hair curlers to electrical cookers which look similar to the familar gas range and do the same work by a different method. Flat irons, toasters, broilers, chafing dishes — are all made to work by the electric current, while there are several makes of vaccuum sweepers, sewing machine motors, and small motors for various uses. The store is most artistically decorated, attendants are present to demonstrate the various appliances and the public is cordially invited to inspect them at all times.

Special Electric Schedule.

Superintendent Sayles of the street railway put a special holiday schedule into effect yesterday on the Springfield line, half-hour time being maintained from 8.45 in the morning until 8.45 in the evening. This will be kept up until next Wednesday, ceasing Tuesday night. The Sunday schedule will be as usual, but trips will be double-headed on this and Christmas day as the travel warrants.

Business Club's Pool Tournament.

The pool tournament of the Palmer Business and Social club does not progress very fast as yet, only two games having been played in the past two weeks. The score now stands:

| C. R. LeGro. | | P. H. McKelligott. | |
|---|---|---|---|
| G. J. Rathbone, | 52 | Dr. J. P. Schneider, | 48 |
| F. A. Smith, | 42 | E. R. Barton, | 58 |

Silver Wedding Anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Buffington were pleasantly surprised by a party of their friends Tuesday evening at their home on Converse street, the occasion being the 25th anniversary of their marriage. The guests brought refreshments and many valuable gifts. The evening was spent in a pleasant social manner.

Mr. and Mrs. William S. Cordner have gone to Iroquois, Ontario, for a visit with her mother, Mrs. Isaac McCaslyn.

A food sale was held at the home of Mrs. L. M. Shaw on Walnut street this afternoon under the auspices of the W. C. T. U.

Warren E. Roper, a teacher in the Maine Wesleyan seminary, Kent's Hill, Me., is at his home on Park street for the holidays.

Frederick Swann has moved his family from the Strong house on Squier street to the Ralton house on South Main street.

A chimney on the Lawrence block caught fire Tuesday, but the blaze was extinguished with chemicals before any damage had been done.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert A. Northrop of Central street have gone to Greenville, S. C., where they will spend the winter with their daughter, Mrs. C. M. Wing.

The weighing of the mails at the passenger station, which has occupied 105 days, was completed with the lot which came in on the 4.01 a. m. train Wednesday. The work has been done by L. A. Fontaine and D. J. Fortier.

Palmer National Bank Distributing Well Prepared Volume—A Library in Itself.

Every man cannot afford to own a library, but every one can procure an almanac from the Palmer National Bank. This almanac, that weighs a few ounces, carries with it a thousand bits of information that are interesting as well as valuable. It does not matter how much you know, you can always find something worth knowing in the pages of this well-prepared almanac. No matter how much you know there is always something you can learn, and some of these things are sure to be found in this almanac. It is a handy volume for the busy merchant, the active farmer, the live dairyman, the school teacher, the student and the woman of the house. If some one is injured or taken ill suddenly the almanac will tell you what to do until the doctor comes. It is a ready reckoner and a dispute settler. It has a place in the house and office that cannot be filled by any other device that has ever been produced by the genius of man. A post card addressed to the bank will bring you a copy by mail.

There was a good attendance at the dance in the opera house hall last Saturday evening. There will be dancing to-morrow night from 8 to 11.

The schools of the town closed this afternoon for a Christmas vacation of one week. Programs appropriate to the season were rendered in the various rooms in the grade buildings.

The employes of the Central Massachusetts Electric company gathered at the office last Saturday evening, sent for Manager H. M. Parsons, and presented him with a purse of $225 in gold as a wedding present.

The boiler in the Masonic building gave out Monday night and the building has since been heated by stoves. As the weather has so far been mild the tenants have not suffered materially, although the lodge room has been rather cool for some of the gatherings there.

Complaint has been made that some person or persons, probably children, have taken up and in some cases destroyed the markers in Palmer Center cemetery recently placed by the town at the graves of the soldiers of the colonial and revolutionary wars. "Autumn Winds."

Murmuring winds from the hilltops descending,
Over the streamlets that flow to the sea:
In thy embrace all nature enfolding,
Have recklessly yielded their glory to thee.

Touches of crimson and gold leaves are fading,
Lingering long where the chilled waters flow:
Softly and gently allured by thy wooing,
They have fallen to sleep, their grave is the snow.

Rest still in thy graves, thy companions are there,
We think of the winter winds changing in spring,
When the birds with their songs and old friends doth appear;
With their cheers and their songs that we all love to sing,
When the days have grown longer and warmer and clear.

From thy slumber awakened in spring time's fair morning,
Thy glory by heaven alone shall surpass;
These scenes then predict that we all may take warning,
From earth's changing scenes to heaven at last.

WARREN.

Employee Stabs Foreman.

There was a stabbing affray in Sayles & Jenks' woolen mill Friday morning about 8 o'clock, when John S. Clancey, boss of the finishing room, was attacked by Mike Mazur. Previous to the affray Mrs. Mazur had been discharged and Mr. Mazur quit work and demanded that both be paid. Mr. Clancey told him that he would have to wait until the paymaster arrived, but he followed the foreman, and as Mr. Clancey stepped on the back steps, Mazur rushed at him with a jackknife. He cut Mr. Clancey on the left side of the head, just below the left collar bone and again on the left left leg. Mr. Clancey was taken to Dr. C. A. De Land's office and the wounds, which were not serious, were dressed. In the meantime Deputy Sheriff Walter Putnam had been notified and he arrested Mazur at his home on Moore avenue, and found a blood-stained jackknife under a bed. Mazur was placed in the lockup and appeared in the district court in East Brookfield Saturday morning.

Surprise Boxes in Shark Stomachs.

Fishermen in the Caribbean sea recently found in the stomach of a shark which they had killed a good sized bottle in which was a half-decipherable letter from a shipwrecked sailor. Many such relics have been found. In one case a lady's bracelet was found in a state of perfect preservation, together with a silver spoon and a thousand Spanish reals in money. The curious feature of the finding of the money was that it was in an official receptacle lost in the city of Spanish Town (Jamaica) during a negro uprising in the seventeenth century. Where had it been meantime? Surely not in the shark's stomach, unless the shark lives a much longer time (or some of them) than science has any reason to suppose possible. On the other hand, if in the sea it would have been rendered unrecognizable in a few weeks. Had it been in the possession of some one shipwrecked, why had it been left intact? The conclusion was inevitable that the shark must have fished it out from a compartment of some long-submerged vessel. — Harper's Weekly.

Blow at Suicides.

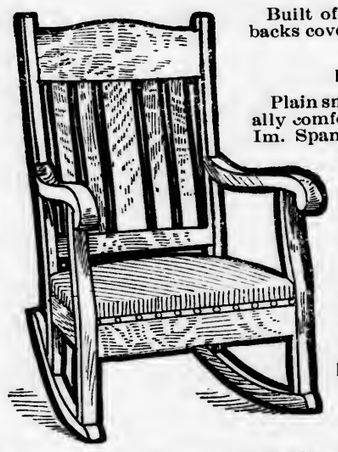
"A pet monkey that I shipped uptown this morning was bound on a most unusual mission for a monkey," said an animal dealer.

"He was bought by a woman who runs a furnished room house in which three persons have killed themselves with gas recently. Those suicides have upset her nerves. Now she is going to try the same preventive means adopted by three of her friends.



"They too, keep roosters. Also they keep monkeys. There have been several attempts at suicide in their houses, but they have always been frustrated by the monkeys, who have smelled gas and set up such a chattering that they woke everybody up.

"Monkeys are extremely sensitive to the odor of gas. This customer of mine hopes to utilize hers as a new kind of life preserver."—Philadelphia Record.

Nothing was missed from the house, and it is thought that Mr. Wheeler's sudden appearance made the intruder cut his intended work short.

Court Hampden, Foresters of America, made choice of these officers at their meeting on Tuesday evening: Chief Ranger, John Brosnan; sub-chief ranger, William Moran; financial secretary, Patrick Ford; treasurer, Ernest Gay; recording secretary, Frank J. ### Death of Jeremiah Sullivan.

Jeremiah Sullivan, 23, youngest son of Mrs. Ellen Sullivan of South Belchertown, died at his home at 5 o'clock Sunday evening, after a long illness. Mr. Sullivan was born in South Belchertown and lived all his life here, except while absent at school. He was educated in the public schools of the town and graduated from the Palmer high school. After leaving the high school he entered Williston Academy of Easthampton, where he remained about a year, preparing to be a physician. While there his health began to fail, and coming home he was employed for a year in the meat market. Mr. Sullivan was well known in all the villages of Palmer and was a member of Palmer council, Knights of Columbus. Besides his mother, he leaves a brother John, in Holyoke, and three sisters, Misses Katherine, Bridget and Nellie, all of this place. The funeral was held Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock in St. Bartholomew's church, Rev. Thomas A. Kennedy officiating. The many beautiful flowers showed the esteem in which Mr. Sullivan was held.

Miss Hester Holdsworth of Palmer was a guest Sunday of Miss Alice E. Banister.

George Moulton Jr. came to-day to spend the Christmas holidays with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Moulton Sr.

Misses Kathleen Quirk, Agnes Sullivan and Agnes Carmody came to-day to spend the holidays at their respective home.

The Ladies' Aid met Wednesday afternoon at the church. The next meeting will be in two weeks, Jan. 1, with Mrs. Ralph Hanscom.

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Austin have moved into one of Lawrence Sullivan's tenements, lately vacated by the family of John Heys.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Waterhouse Jr. and daughter, Miss Violet, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Oxley in Hartford, Ct.

Elwin Hayes, who has been employed for several years at the Boston and Maine station, has taken a position in the office of the Boston Duck Co.

Charles Fauteux, clerk in L. R. Holden's store, has been drawn as a juror for the December criminal sitting of the superior court, which is to be held in Springfield.

Patrick Fitzgerald, of the firm of Hastings & Fitzgerald, who was injured nine weeks ago by being kicked by a horse, was able this week to go to the market for the first time.

Mrs. Vernon Faunce and daughter, Miss Bernice, go to-morrow to New Bedford to spend the holidays with relatives. Mr. Faunce will join them next Tuesday and they will spend Christmas Day with Mr. and Mrs. Charles Faunce.

Mrs. Mary Fauteux and family will entertain the following family gathering on Christmas Day: Mr. and Mrs. John Gowen and two daughters, Helen and Marguerite, of Medway, Mr. and Mrs. Euclid Stone and daughter, Helen of Holyoke, Mr. and Mrs. William Houle and daughter, Madeline of Springfield, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Fauteux and son, Seward of Stafford Springs, and Albert Fauteux of Athol.

A Christmas entertainment and tree will be held in the vestry of the Methodist church next Tuesday at 7 o'clock in the evening. Santa Claus will be present and distribute presents after the entertainment. The committee, consisting of Mrs. George Sutherland, Misses Myrtle McVickar and Irene Marsan have arranged a program that will include singing by the different classes, recitations by Edith McFarlane, Dorothea McVickar, Irene Walder, Homer Odell, Edith Norcross, Pearl Cummings, Emma Lamb, Yoland Marsan and Leslie Gunn, and a play entitled "The Christmas Wish," in which the following will take part: Wesley Magee, Myrtle McVickar, Vertene Marsan Fanny Butterfield, Irene Marsan, and Violet Canterbury.

FIRST CHRISTMAS TREE

THE conflict of Christianity with heathenism produced no more dramatic incidents than those which have come down to us, half-history and half-myth, out of the forests and snows of northern Europe, where the cross confronted and prevailed against the hammer of Thor. Often the crisis came at Christmas, which happened to correspond with the Yuletide festival, at the time of the winter solstice.

Longfellow has used one of these stories in "King Olaf's Christmas." Another, in which real religious fervor and moral heroism play a part, is the story of the first Christmas tree.

There stands at Altenbergen, in northern Germany a statue erected in 1811 in honor of Saint Boniface; and the place of the statue is said to be the site of the first Christian church in north Germany.

Boniface, who must not be confused with any of the nine popes who bore the name, was a Briton by birth, and his name was Wynfrith. Declining high ecclesiastical honor, he chose to oe a missionary to the rude tribes of the German forests. Of these tribes Tacitus tells us; and we know that they were implacable in war and bloody in their worship, but that among their virtues was a marked purity of private life and love of home.

Each year these people sacrificed to their gods. One of their holiest shrines was a great oak at Geismar. There they gathered at midnight at the winter solstice, and offered a fair lad as a sacrifice to call back the retreating sun.

Thus they were assembled at the Yuletide in the year 724. As the midnight approached, an old priest raised the hammer to strike down the child, when Boniface interposed a strong arm and an eager word. He told them of a child who was born seven hundred years before, and how he showed to men that they need offer no more bloody sacrifices. He told them of the love of God and the beauty of his service. The stern men heard and believed. Urged by the heroic missionary, they hewed down the dark thunder-oak, the scene of so many sacrifices.

The legend says that when the tree fell, it left a young fir growing between the shattered branches, and unbroken by their fall. Boniface told them to take that tree to their banqueting hall; to serve God with joy and feasting; and to take for their Yule tree this one, with roots unstained with blood, and with evergreen foliage for a symbol of immortality.

If part of the story is myth, it is not all myth; and it is surely a beautiful way of explaining one of the most beautiful of Christmas customs.—Youth's Companion.

"AS YE DID UNTO THEM"

So he died, and they said unto him: "It is written against you that you heeded not the sorrow and the want of them that were stricken in poverty and suffered in illness and want."

And he said:

"That is unfair, for all my life long I noted especially the suffering and want of the poor, and not a Christmas went by that I did not say over and over that I was sorry for them. No one gave them more sympathy than I, no one showed more commiseration for them. Why, lots of times I thought of them on cold winter nights, and said to my friends that it was too bad they had to endure privations."

"That is correct," they said unto him. "But it is written that you did not materialize your sympathy—you simply sympathized in words, and words are not eaten, nor are they worn, nor are they burned in stoves."

So he was abashed, and stood silent for a space. Then he said meekly:

"And I must not come in?"

As to that, they did not answer, but they said again unto him:

"All those that you sympathized with are here, and now they will sympathize with you."

LAST CHRISTMAS WAS A YEAR AGO

(THE OLD LADY SPEAKS)

By James Whitcomb Riley

Copyright by James Whitcomb Riley

Last Christmas was a year ago,
Says I to David, I—says—I,
"We're goin' to morning service, so
You hitch up right away; I'll try
To tell the girls jes' what to do
Fer dinner. We'll be back by two."
I didn't wait to hear what he
Would more'n like say back to me,
But banged the stable door and flew
Back to the rouse, jes' plumb chilled through.

Cold! Wooh! how cold it was! My—Oh!
Frost flyin', and the air, you know,

"Jes' sharp enough," heerd David swear,
"To shave a man and cut his hair!"
And blow and blow! and snow snow!—
Where it had drifted 'long the fence
And 'crost the road—some places though,
Jes' swep' clean to the gravel, so
The goin' was as bad fer sleighs
As 't was fer wagons—and both ways,
'Twixt snowdrifts and the bare ground, I've
Jes' wundered we got through alive;
I hain't saw nothin', fore er sence,
'At beat it anywheres, I know—
Last Christmas was a year ago.

And David said, as we set out,
'At Christmas services was 'bout
As cold and wuthless kind o' love
To offer up as he know of;
And as fer him, he railly thought
'At the Good Bein' up above
Would think more of us—as he ought—
A-staying' home on sich a day,
And thankin' of him thataway!
And jawed on, in an undertone,
'Bout leavin' Lide and Jane alone
There on the place, and me not there
To oversee 'em and p'pare
The stuffin' fer the turkey and
The sass and all, you understand.

I've allus managed David by
Jes' sayin' nothing. That was why
He's chased Lide's beau away—cause Lide
She'd allus take up Perry's side
When David tackled him; and so,
Last Christmas was a year ago,—
Er ruther, 'bout a week afore,—
David and Perry'd quarr'l'd about
Some tom-fool argyment, you know,
And pap told him to "Jes' git out
O' there, and not to come no more,
And, when he went out, to shet the door."
And as he passed the winder, we Saw Perry, white as white could be
March past, onhitch his hoss, and light
A see-gyar, and lope out o' sight.
Then Lide she come to me and cried!
And I said nothin'—was no need.
And yit, you know, that man jes' got
Right out o' there's ef he'd be'n shot,
P'tendin' he must go and feed
The stock er sompin'. Then I tried
To git the pore gal pacified.

But' gittin' back to—where was we?—
Oh, yes!—where David lectered me

All way to meetin', high and low,
Last Christmas was a year ago:
Fer all the awful cold there was
A fair attendance; mostly, though
The crowd was 'round the stoves, you see,
Thawin' their heels and scrougin' us.
Ef 't 'adn't be'n fer the old squire
Givin' his seat to us, as in
We stomped, a-fairly perishin',
And David could 'a' got no fire,
He'd jes' 'a' dropped there in his tracks:
And squire, as I was tryin' to yit
Make room fer him, says, "No; the fac's
Is, I got to git up and git
'Ithout no preachin'. Jes' got word—
Trial fer life—can't be deferred!"

And out he put! All way through
The sermont—and a long one, too—
I couldn't help but think o' squire
And us changed 'round so, and admire
His gentle ways,—to give his warm
Bench up, and have to face the storm.
And when I noticed David, he
Was needin' jabbin'—I thought best

To kind o' sort o' let him rest:
'Peared like he slep' so peacefully!
And when I thought o' home, and how
And what the gyrls was doin' now,
And kind o' prayed, 'way in my breast,
And breshed away a tear er two
As David waked, and church was through.

By time we'd "howdyed" round and shuck
Hands with the neighbors, must 'a' tuck
A half hour longer: ever' one
A-sayin' "Christmas gift!" afore
David er me—so we got none!
But David warmed up, more and more,
And got so jokey-like, and had
His sperits up, and 'peared so glad,
I whispered to him, "'Spose you ast
A passel of 'em come and eat
Their dinners with us. Gyrls's got
A full-and-plenty fer the lot
And all their kin!" So David passed
The invite round: and ever' seat
In ever' wagon-bed and sleigh
Was jes' packed, as we rode away,—
The young folks, mild er so along,
A-strikin' up a sleighin'-song,
Tel David laughed and yelled, you know,
And jes' whirped up and sent the snow
And gravel flyin' thick and fast—
Last Christmas was a year ago.
W'y, that-air seven-mild jant we come—
Jes' seven mild scant from church to home—
It didn't 'pear, that day, to be Much furder railly 'n' 'bout three!

But I was purty squeamish by
The time home hove in sight and I

See two vehickles standin' there
All to myse'f. And presently
David he sobered; and says he,
"Hain't that-air Squire Hanch's old Buggy," says he, "and claybank mare?"
Says I, "Le's git out the cold—
Your company's nigh 'bout froze!" He says,
"Whose sleigh 's that-air, a-standin there?"
Says I, "It's no odds whose—you jes'
Drive to the house and let us out,
'Cause we 're jes' freezin', nigh about!"
Well, David swung up to the door,
And out we piled. And first I heerd
Jane's voice, then Lide's—I thought afore
I reached that gyrl I'd jes' die shore;
And when I reached her, wouldn't keered
Much if I had, I was so glad,
A-kissin' her through my green veil,
And jes' excitin' her so bad,
'At she broke down herself—and Jane
She cried—and we all hugged again.
And David? David jes' turned pale—
Looked at the gyrls, and then at me,
Then at the open door—and then—

'Is old Squire Hanch there?" says he.
The old Squire suddenly stood in
The doorway, with a sneakin' grin.
"Is Perry Anders in there too?"
Says David, limberin' all through,
As Lide and me both grabbed him, and
Perry stepped out and waved his hand
And says, "Yes, Pap." And David jes'
Stooped and kissed Lide, and says, "I guess
Yer mother's much to blame as you.
Ef she kin resk him, I kin too!"

The dinner we had then hain't no
Bit better'n the one today
'At we'll have fer 'em. Hear some sleigh
A-jinglin' now. David, fer me,
I wish you'd jes' go out and see
Ef they're in sight yit. It jes' does
Me good to think, in times like these,
Lide's done so well. And David, he's
More tractabler'n what he was—
Last Christmas was a year ago.

Mistletoe and the Druids.

The custom of decorating strategic points in the household with sprigs of mistletoe at Christmas dates far back to the time of the Druids, who held the little plant in great veneration. At the approach of their winter festival, twigs of it were placed above the doors of their houses to serve as talismans and signs to the sylvan deities that shelter and comfort awaited them within.

Present-day customs relating to mistletoe represent the evolution of the Druidical legend.

Just What He Meant.

"Your toys are very pretty, but the prices are too high," objected the customer.

"Why, look at that drum for $6.48. You can't beat it at the price," protested the dealer.

"I believe that is what I intimated in my remark," said the customer.

Too Many Babies Born?

Can [illegible] right here in our own surroundings that altogether too many babies are born now? Better by far fewer babies, and these well fed, well clothed, well cared for physically, morally and mentally—if we would expect a strong, hardy race. If race suicide is ever checked it will not be by bringing into the world ill-fed, poorly clothed, worse fathered children, but rather by well-directed efforts to save the children who die unnecesarily.—Dr. George T. Finch, in Leslie's.

THE REMODELING OF MISS BETTIE BROWN

By HARVEY PEAKE.

Bettie Brown was sitting in the porch swing doing nothing when the postman brought the letter. These were Bettie's two greatest occupations; sitting and doing nothing. She usually combined the two.

Her pretty face resolved itself into a veritable interrogation mark, when she saw that the handwriting was Bob Taylor's.

"Why, I haven't heard from him for five years," she exclaimed, "not since he went to the Philippines after our quarrel; What can he have to say?" Tearing open the envelope she read:

"Manila, May 25th.

"My Dear Bettie:

"I am writing to say that I am going back to the United States on purpose to see you. I shall arrive in Brewster about the first of July. I hope that you will be glad to see me, for I can scarcely wait until I can see you.

"The silly misunderstanding we had has been wiped entirely out of my mind, and my greatest desire is to return and plead in person for your forgiveness, and also to ask you something more.

"I can see in my mind's eye your slim, willowy form in its sailor dress of blue. And I trust, dear Bettie, that you still have this identical dress, and will wear it to welcome me back. I think it was the prettiest dress I ever saw. If you will don it for this occasion it will make our meeting so much easier, for I shall know at a glance that I am forgiven if you have it on.

"Should there be any change in my plans I shall communicate with you at once. Do not make an effort to answer this letter for I shall be en route.

"Yours sincerely,
"Robert Taylor."

After Bettie had read the letter twice she fell into a reminiscent mood.

"Dear old Bob," she soliloquized, "how good it is to hear from you! And so you have something to say to me! I was ready to forgive and forget the next day, if you had only asked, for I loved you and still do. What girl could help it?

"Of course I shall wear the blue dress. I'll—no, I can't either—I haven't had it on since he left! I began to take on flesh that same year. I weighed a hundred and ten when he saw me last and now—well, I know those last scales must have been wrong, for they made it a hundred and forty-eight!

"Goodness gracious, what shall I do? I can't begin to get it on and—my slim, willowy figure! That's what I get for sitting around so much and taking no exercise. And I remember that he hated fat girls! I will wear that dress!"

Immediately she constituted herself a committee of ways and means.

"Just five weeks in which to take off thirty-eight pounds!" she said.

The next morning at breakfast Bettie's father was full of trouble.

"I thought when I built this house, that I was putting up one of the most substantial residences in the town," he complained; "but last night, whenever a car passed, I distinctly felt it tremble, sometimes for as long as two minutes. And once it was shaken to its very foundations! I'm going to get the builder to come over, as soon as he can, to make an examination."

Even Bobby was disturbed. He came running down stairs one morning a few days later, exclaiming:

"Mom, this house is hounted. I know it is, 'cause last night I heard the awfullest groans and moans after I went to bed, an' the house jest shook like it wus tremblin' with terror! I was afraid to git up an' I've been awake all night!"

One evening at tea, Mrs. Brown laid down her knife and fork and looking at her daughter, remarked:

"Now Bettie, I want to know what the matter is with you. You refuse preserves and cake, you won't take sugar in your tea, and you don't eat enough to keep a bird alive. You're actually getting thin and peaked! Why girl, you don't look like yourself; you've fallen away so much that your clothes are ever so much too big for you.. Now what is it?"

"Oh nothing," answered Bettie.

"Yes there is. There's something wrong with you," replied her mother. "You needn't try to conceal it any longer. Either you are sick or in love."

"Well, if you are determined to pry into your daughter's private affairs, mother dear, I'll have to confess that I am reducing my flesh by the rolling process. You select a long floor space, you see, and roll back and forth twenty-five times without stopping. Then you kick up your heels——"

"Bettie Brown, are you crazy?"

"No, but I believe being in love is pretty nearly as bad as being crazy."

"Well, now I begin to see daylight," declared Mrs. Brown. "So you are in love, are you? I thought as much."

"It's Bob Taylor!" And then the whole story came out.

* * * * * * * * *

After Bob had arrived, duly engaged himself to the willing Bettie, and taken his departure, the young woman in the case was in her room taking down her hair for the night, and recounting to herself the experiences of the past five weeks.

"I shouldn't have done it for anybody in the world but Bob," she declared; "but I don't intend that he shall ever know that I was so much in love with him that I bruised myself black and blue, from my shoulders to my heels, beside entirely upsetting the family calm, that he might be pleased with me. And as for the dress. I don't think he noticed the difference between the old and the new one even if there were two sizes difference!"

Death of General S. Lockwood Brown.

General S. Lockwood Brown, 87, died last Friday night at the Tucker Forge farm on East Hill. He was born in Hamilton, Ohio, August 23, 1825. The greatest part of his life was spent in Chicago, Ill., where he carried on an extensive real estate business. He was a former member and worker in the Presbyterian church and for 67 years was at the head of the Sunday school department in J. B. Shaw's church in Chicago. He was also interested in negro missions, having established several schools for the colored children in the Southern states. In April, 1861, at the outbreak of the Civil war, he entered the commissary department of the Union Army and was appointed by President Lincoln a captain in the commissary department. He was from time to time promoted, and at the close of the war was honorably discharged with the rank of brigadier-general. For the past three years he has made his home at the Tucker Forge farm, coming here from Chicago. He is survived by a widow. The funeral was held from his late home Monday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock. Rev. Dr T. Clark Seelye of Northampton conducted the services. The body was taken to Springfield for cremation and burial will be in Graveland cemetery in Chicago, Ill.

Her Grace Effective.

An English woman of rank, a duchess, was very apt to forget to pay her bills. A milliner, whose large bill had been repeatedly ignored by the duchess, at last determined to send her little girl, a pretty child of ten years, for the money which was so much needed.

"Be sure to say 'your grace,' to the duchess," said the anxious mother; and the child gravely promised to remember.

When, after long waiting, she was ushered into the presence of her grace, the little girl dropped her a bow of courtesy, and then, folding her hands and closing her eyes, she said, softly:

"For what I am about to receive may the Lord make me truly thankful."

As she opened her eyes and turned her wistful gaze on the duchess, that person turned very red, and without delay, made out a check for the amount due her milliner.

During the services Miss Blanche Upham sang "Jesus, Lover of My Soul," and "Rock of Ages." The pastor in his remarks referred to the life of Mrs. Triekett in part as follows: The life of our sister is well known to most of us, and she certainly exemplified the life mentioned in St. Matthew's Gospel, which reads: "Then shall the King say unto them on his right hand, Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world. For I was hungered and ye gave me meat; I was thirsty, and ye gave me drink; I was a stranger, and ye took me in; naked and ye clothed me; I was siek and ye visited me; I was in prison, and ye eame unto me. Then shall the righteous answer him, saying, Lord, when we saw thee an hungered, and fed thee? or thirsty, and gave thee drink? When saw we thee a stranger, and took thee in? or naked, and clothed thee? Or when saw we thee sick, or in prison and came unto thee? And the King shall answer and say unto them, Verily I say unto you, Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethern, ye have done it unto me."

Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

Doctors Use This for Eczema

Dr. Evans, Ex-Commissioner of Health, says: "There is almost no relation between skin diseases and the blood." The skin must be cured through the skin. The germs must be washed out, and so salves have long ago been found worthless. The most advanced physicians of this country are now agreed on this, and are prescribing a wash of wintergreen, thymol and other ingredients for eczema and all other skin diseases. This compound is known as D.D.D. Prescription for Eczema.

Dr. Holmes, the well known skin specialist writes: "I am convinced that the D.D.D. Prescription is as much a specific for eczema as quinine for malaria. I have been prescribing the D.D.D. remedy for years." It will take away the itch the instant you apply it.

PARCELS POST SYSTEM.

New Departure Will be Started Next Wednesday.

LOCAL POST OFFICE IS ALL READY.

Parcels Weighing Eleven Pounds and Not Over Six Feet in Girth May be Mailed.

Next Wednesday morning will go into effect the much-talked-of parcels post system of the United States government. For years there has been a demand for an inexpensive system of transmitting packages, and the government will go into the business experimentally. The law under which the system is to be operated, and the rates of postage established, are as follows:

"That hereafter fourth-class mail matter shall embrace all other matter, including farm and factory products, not now embraced by law in either of the first, second or third-class, not exceeding eleven pounds in weight, nor greater in size than seventy-two inches in length and girth combined, nor in form or kind likely to injure the person of any postal employe or damage the mail equipment or other mail matter and not of a character perishable within a period reasonably required for transportation and delivery."

For the purpose of carrying this law into effect the United States is divided into zones with different rates of postage applicable to each, as follows:

| Weight | Local rate | 50 miles | 50 to 150 miles | 150 to 300 miles | 300 to 600 miles | 600 to 1000 miles | 1000 to 1400 miles | 1400 to 1800 miles | All Over 1800 miles |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| 1 pound | $0.05 | $0.05 | $0.06 | $0.07 | $0.08 | $0.09 | $0.10 | $0.11 | $0.12 |
| 2 pounds | .06 | .08 | .10 | .12 | .14 | .16 | .19 | .21 | .24 |
| 3 pounds | .07 | .11 | .14 | .17 | .20 | .23 | .28 | .31 | .36 |
| 4 pounds | .08 | .14 | .18 | .22 | .26 | .30 | .37 | .41 | .48 |
| 5 pounds | .09 | .17 | .22 | .27 | .32 | .37 | .46 | .51 | .60 |
| 6 pounds | .10 | .20 | .26 | .32 | .38 | .44 | .55 | .61 | .72 |
| 7 pounds | .11 | .23 | .30 | .37 | .44 | .51 | .64 | .71 | .84 |
| 8 pounds | .12 | .26 | .34 | .42 | .50 | .58 | .73 | .81 | .96 |
| 9 pounds | .13 | .29 | .38 | .47 | .56 | .65 | .82 | .91 | 1.08 |
| 10 pounds | .14 | .32 | .42 | .52 | .62 | .72 | .91 | 1.01 | 1.20 |
| 11 pounds | .15 | .35 | .46 | .57 | .68 | .79 | 1.00 | 1.11 | 1-32 |

The local rate is applicable to parcels intended for delivery at the office of mailing or on a rural route starting therefrom.

The arrangement of the zones which determine the rate at which the pareels shall pay postage is an ingenious one. The entire country is divided into units about 30 miles square, and from each unit as a center are drawn circles of varying diameter, each circle representing a zone. Then from that office a package may be sent to any post office within the first zone line—whether east, west, north or south, at the first-zone price for the weight of the package. The same method is used to find the rates within the other zones. The local rate is for delivery in the city or town in which the post office is located, or on rural delivery routes going out from that office.

Each post office is supplied with a map of the United States ruled into squares, and also ruled with circles with that particular office as a center. Every square is numbered and every post office is also numbered. To find the rate to any particular office after the weight is known, the name of the office is looked up in a guide furnished for the purpose, and the number which that office bears indicates the square in which it is to be found on the map; by an ingenious arrangement of numbers along the top of the map the zone in which the office is located is almost instantly shown.

It will be well for those making use of the new parcels post to remember that ordinary postage stamps will not be good for packages. Special stamps must be purchased. The names and address of the sender must also be affixed. Failure to do so will result in the holding up of the package. If ordinary stamps are affixed the package will also be held at the office of mailing. In case a package is not deliverable at destination it will be returned to the sender. The new series of stamps is one of the most perfect and attractive in design ever issued by the United States or any other country, and were designed, engraved and printed by the most skilled of the expert engravers of the bureau of engraving and printing in Washington, under the personal supervision of Director Ralph of the bureau. Most of the stamps are red in color and range from one cent to $1 in value. There are 12 different designs for the 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 10, 15, 20, 25, 50, 75-cent and $1 stamps, all printed in red ink. Postage due stamps for parcels post are also issued in values of 1, 2, 5, 10 and 25 cents, and are printed in green ink. They are attractive in appearance, but not so elaborate as the stamps for prepayment of packages. The stamps measure 1 by 1½ inches.

The designs are also attractive. The post office clerk familiar in every city appears on the one-cent stamp, while the tireless letter carrier, known to every householder, is pictured on the two-cent stamp, as he appears in his regular round of delivering letters. The three-cent stamp shows the railway mail service, the four-cent stamp the rural free delivery clerk, and the five-cent stamp a fast mail train under full headway. One of the big ocean steamships that connects us with foreign countries is shown by the 10-cent stamp. On the 15-cent variety is an automobile, as now used in delivering and collecting mail, while the 20-cent stamp offers a prophecy of future mail service in the picture of an aeroplane. On the other stamps are represented the big industries which are expected to contribute to the parcels post mail. Manufacturing is represented on the 25-cent stamp by a steel plant. Dairying is shown in the 50-cent and agriculture on the 75-cent stamps. Perhaps the finest engraving is reserved for the $1 stamp, a really beautiful achievement of the stamp engravers' art, which presents the growing of fruit. It is predicted that the stamps will be much in demand by stamp collectors on account of their beauty.

It is expected that the parcels post will do much for the rural resident and the farmer. Under its provisions he will be enabled to be served with many things in a much shorter time than before. Articles formerly unavailable for days because of lack of means of transportation, he will now be able to secure in 24 hours or less provided he has a telephone, or in 48 hours if he has no such service. A telephone order to places of business on one day will bring the desired article to his door by parcels post the next day; if he has no phone a letter given to the rural mail carrier one morning will bring what he desires the second day after, and in many instances on his call the next day. There is of course a limit to the size and weight of package. They must not weigh over 11 pounds, and in size must not be over six feet in circumference, measuring both ways. There are no restrictions as to what may and may not be mailed, any article calculated to damage other mail or prove obnoxious before reaching destination being barred. The packages may be insured against loss up to $50 on the payment of 10 cents.

From the Palmer office the first zone extends to Worcester on the east, Northfield on the north, Chester on the west and Willimantic, Ct., on the south. The second zone extends to the east a considerable distance beyond Cape Cod, and to the north well toward the upper ends of Vermont and New Hampshire. It takes in Delhi, N. Y. on the west and New York city on the south. This will give some idea of the extent of the other zones, which extend in larger circles beyond these points.

Firemen Have Evening Run.

Called Out Monday For Window Curtain Fire on South Main Street.

An alarm from box 64 called the firemen to South Main street in hot haste about 6.45 Monday evening. The auto made the trip "on the jump," the men not even stopping to light the lamps on the machine. They were at the box in about six minutes after the alarm was pulled in, but found nothing to do, as the blaze was out. The trouble was in the two-tenement house on the corner of South Main and Fox streets, owned by F. B. Ramsden of Thorndike and occupied downstairs by Stephen Kenyon and up stairs by Daniel Connors. The trouble was in the front room of Connors' part, where a couple of lace curtains had caught fire and blazed up merrily. The fire had also communicated to the furniture and bid fair to make things lively if it had gone undiscovered a few moments longer. First Assistant Charles E. Fuller of the fire department, who lives near, had the blaze out with a hand chemical when the firemen arrived. The loss is estimated as $50 on the furniture and $25 on the building. The blaze is supposed to have started from a spark from a match which had been used a moment before to light a lamp.

DETHRONED by Time the old Year dies,
Whose life was filled with many deeds,
Some noble, grand, some ill; he lies
In history with other years of creeds
And wars and men of fame; we know
Him only by the things that passed
Within his time. Time measured slow
But found the old Year's doom at last.

New Year with youthful smile steps in
With scepter in his hand and claims
The Earth as his domain. Within
His days great men may write their names;
Nations may rise, may fall and die;
Mysteries their secrets may unfold,
But ere he knows shall come the cry
"New Year, thou art among the old!"

Palmer Seventh Grade Still at the Head.

Has Perfect Record Attendance For Four Months. Grade Nine in Second Place, Palmer Center Third. Tardiness Decreasing.

For the school term, sixteen weeks in length, which ended December 20, the Palmer grammar school led in the matter of attendance with 97.43 per cent. Next in line was the Palmer high school with 96.96 per cent, followed by Bondsville with 96.75 per cent. The number of tardy cases recorded against these schools was 33, 12, and 7 respectively.

With the exception of the district schools, the high school and Thorndike grammar school made the greatest reduction in the number of tardy cases. For the same term last year, 97 cases of tardiness occurred in the district schools, while only 7 have occurred this year. This is a fine record. The names of those perfect in attendance since the beginning of school in September will be printed next week.

The rooms having the best attendance for this term are grade 7, Palmer, with 100 per cent; grade 9, Palmer, with 99.23 per cent; and Palmer Center, with 98.98. There are several other rooms that had very fine attendance, too. It is to be regretted that grade 7, with its remarkably fine record of 100 per cent for four months, had the misfortune of having one tardy mark. Grade 9 had none, and Palmer Center had two.

The record for the month in detail is as follows:

Married Twenty-five Years.

Wilbraham Couple Celebrate Silver Wedding Last Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Perkins Bolles of Wilbraham observed the 25th anniversary of their marriage at their home last Friday evening. Over 100 relatives and friends were present, including guests from Springfield, Sunderland, Agawam, Uxbridge, Longmeadow and Chicopee. The house was prettily decorated for the occasion, Mr. and Mrs. Bolles receiving their friends under a bower of evergreen. The couple were the recipients of many beautiful and valuable presents.. Among them was a purse containing $52 in silver from their friends in Wilbraham, $10 in gold, silver teaspoons from the Neighborhood club and flowers from the Study club. Music was rendered during the evening by Misses Gebo, Wade and Newton and refreshments were served. Clarence P. Bolles was born in Vernon, Ct., the son of Henry T. and Laura Perkins Bolles. Mrs. Bolles, who was Nellie M. Atchinson, was born in Wilbraham, the daughter of D. Austin and Carrie Clark Atchinson. They were married in the Atchinson home on Maple street December 20, 1887, by Rev. M. S. Howard, pastor of the Congregational church. Mr. Howard was among those to congratulate Mr. and Mrs. Bolles Friday evening. Their married life has been spent in Wilbraham at their home, Wigwam Hill stock farm. Mr. and Mrs. Bolles have always taken an active interest in the welfare of the town. Mr. Bolles was representative in 1909 from the 2d Hampden district and is a member of the Wilbraham school committee. The children are Hazel M., who is teaching in the Conway high school, Marjorie E., a student at Sargent's school of physical culture in Cambridge, and Harold A. Bolles.

First Train Over New Bridge.

A. R. Ketchen of Belchertown, who is employed by the Hampden railroad, was honored by the superintendent of the work in being allowed to run the first train on the new bridge which spans the Swift river between Belchertown and Bondsville. Mrs. Jennie Carpenter and son of Worcester were guests a part of the week of Mr. and Mrs. F. N. Carpenter of Thorndike street.

MELLEN IS INDICTED.

By Federal Grand Jury Under Anti-trust Act.

SO ARE CHAMBERLIN AND SMITHERS.

Charged With Being Responsible For Grand Trunk Holdup. Plea of Not Guilty Entered.

The federal grand jury at New York, which has been investigating the Grand Trunk-New Haven railroad scandal, on Monday jointly indicted Charles S. Mellen, president of the New Haven lines, Edson J. Chamberlin, president of the Grand Trunk, and Alfred W. Smithers of London, chairman of the board of directors of the Grand Trunk, under the Sherman anti-trust law, with conspiring to restrain trade in connection with "a memorandum of agreement" between the two roads under which, it is alleged the Grand Trunk proposed to abandon the extension of its railroad lines to Providence, R. I., together with a steamship line between Providence and New York. The penalty for the crime charged is one year in jail, a fine of $5000, or both. Mr. Smithers is a British subject and resides in London; unless he voluntarily surrenders himself there is no way of reaching him.

The indictment charges that "But for the commission of the crime set forth" the Grand Trunk system would have actively competed with the New Haven system for the carriage of interstate and foreign commeree between southern New England cities and the West. Through their connections, it is cited, both systems reached the same cities in the West, both in the United States and Canada.

A "quiet meeting" between Chamberlin, Mellen and Smithers in New York on August 5, 1912, is named in the indictment as the time and place at which the defendants first "engaged in an unlawful combination and conspiracy to prevent the construction and completion" of the proposed extension of the Grand Trunk railway system in New England and the operation of the Grand Trunk steamships between Providence and New York. Two other meetings, it is alleged, were afterward held, also in New York, one on September 20, 1912, and the other on October 1, 1912, for the purpose of completing the alleged conspiracy.

Mellen and Chamberlin entered pleas of not guilty Tuesday and were released in bail of $10,000 each; they have until January 6 in which to change their pleas if desired. While it was believed that Smithers would sail at once for this country on notification of his indictment, no word has been received from him as yet regarding his attitude in the matter.

The department of justice at Washington is considering the bringing of a civil suit under the Sherman law against the two roads to enjoin them from continuing the alleged combination. The grand jury will convene again January 7, when further interesting developments are expected. From Washington comes word that there is a disposition to widen the scope of the Grand Trunk probe, and to take up matters not heretofore considered.

Town Sued For Damages.

Two Actions Brought Because of Alleged Defective Highway.

The town of Palmer was named as defendant in two suits for damages alleged to have been caused by a defective highway which were filed on Monday of this week. The particular piece of road which is said to have been responsible for the trouble is that connecting the villages of West Warren and Ware. A small portion of this road runs through the town of Palmer, and this section is alleged to have been the cause of the damages.

Complaint of the poor condition of this road—which had become notorious in this section—was made some time ago to the selectmen. They have no authority in the matter however, as the highways are in care of a highway surveyor elected annually, who is answerable to no one. The selectmen reported this to the complainants. The road is at some distance from the village of Palmer, but is much traveled and quite hilly. It is claimed to have been in worse condition this year than ever before.

BELCHERTOWN.

Charles Pratt, 53, died Tuesday morning of double pneumonia after a short illness. He is survived by a sister, Mrs. Levi Moulton of Amherst and a brother in Fitchburg.

NORTH WILBRAHAM.

Death of Walter M. Green.

Walter M. Green, 76, died Saturday night after about a six months' illness with heart trouble. He was born in Palmer, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Green, being one of four children. He lived in Palmer Center for about 25 years, when he moved to Chester, where he lived for two years, after which he moved on to the large stock farm in East Wilbraham which is now owned and conducted by his son, Henry. About 14 years ago he moved to the place where he died. April 15, 1858, he was married to Julia E. Butler. Six children were born to them, all of whom are living, Fred W. of Wilbraham, Benjamin B. and Henry M. of East Wilbraham, Ella A. Warner, Julia M. Lyman and Lydia A. Sikes, all of Springfield. Mr. Green served the town of Wilbraham as tax collector for many years. For ten years he was employed by the Boston and Albany railroad where he had charge of the wood business along the line from Worcester to Albany in the days when wood was used as fuel for their engines. His duties were to hire the wood cut and drawn to the railroad, to measure and pay for the same. He married Jennie C. Boss, October 28, 1903, the ceremony being performed by Rev. John Cotton Brooks of Springfield. Mr. Green was a member of Christ church in Springfield, where his wife was also a member, he having joined the church recently. He leaves, besides his widow and own children, three stepchildren, Howard D. Boss of New York, Mrs. R. H. Calkins of East Wilbraham and Mrs. Branch P. Woodruff of Springfield, and a large number of grandchildren. Mr. Green was a Mason, having joined Thomas lodge of Palmer, and was a member of the Royal Arch Chapter. Some time ago he took a demit from Thomas lodge, and did not affiliate with another lodge, but retained his membership in the chapter. The funeral was held in East Wilbraham chapel Tuesday afternoon at 2. Burial was in East Wilbraham cemetery.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Stacy and son spent part of the week in Vermont.

Milo Green has been spending the week with his uncle, Dr. Milo P. Rindge in Madison, Ct.

The treasurer's report showed all bills paid and a balance of 53 cents on hand, with the understanding that there was $50 still due on the piano account to be paid to W. J. Sessions, who presented a receipt in full from the piano company. The secretary read her report, after which W. J. ## BRIMFIELD.

Christmas Entertainment.

A very interesting and successful Christmas entertainment was held at the church Tuesday evening. There was a Christmas concert by the Sunday school at 7.30, under the direction of Mrs. F. Edgar Brown, superintendent of the intermediate and primary department. The program consisted of recitations, chorus singing and solos. Mrs. Brown presided at the organ. Great credit is due to the training given by her both in speaking and singing, and the music by the litttle ones showed much individual talent. After the exercises a bontiful supper was served to old and young by the ladies of the church and Sunday school. The distribution of gifts from a well-laden tree followed. Among the gifts was that of a music roll presented to Rev. William Jennings by his class of boys in the Sunday school. The decorations of the church auditorium, which had been arrayed for Sunday as well as Christmas Eve, were unusually beautiful and effective. They were carried out by the class of Mr. Jennings under his direction.

Dr. and Mrs. S. A. Fish spent Christmas in Royalston.

Rev. J. I. Meehan will preach in the Advent chapel Sunday evening at 7.30; subject "The love that never fails."

Robert Streeter, a teacher in the Quincy high school, is able to be out after being confined to the house for about three weeks by illness.

January Suburban Life.

Suburban Life for January opens with a valuable contribution to the literature of period furniture, entitled "How to Know Period Furniture," by Harold Donaldson Eberlein. Mary Rankin Cranston has a fascinating story, "Fourteen Acres and Freedom," which describes her success with a small farm in New Jersey, to which she turned after spending many years in professional work in New York city. A very clever story of an inexpensive garden is told in "At the Sign of the Empty Purse," by Gertrude Goldsmith. J. Mace Andress describes "An Open-Front Poultry for a Small Lot." An interesting serial story, "The Story of an American Farm," commences in this issue. It describes the farming operations of a retired city physician, who operated his farm as a modern manufacturer would his factory—on scientific principles. Other interesting things in this attractive issue are "My Friend in Gray," "Plan Your Garden Now," "Some Good Garden Blues," "The Truth About Squab Culture," "Conservatory, Aviary and Swimming Pool," "The Lordly Light Brahma," "Shall Our Boys and Girls Go to College?" "Walking Trips in Winter," "Our Little Flower Garden," "An Attractive Square House of Brick," "Pleasure and Profit in a Propagating Bench," "Kill the Scale in Winter," "Utilizing the Cellar Windows," and "A Practical Hopper for Feeding Dry Mash."

Medical Examiner W. W. Miner pronounced death due to heart failure. The body was taken to the undertaking rooms of L. S. Charbonneau.

How Empress Punished.

"The first person I saw punished in the palace at Peking was a servant girl: she had made a mistake about her majesty's rooms and had brought two which were not mates. Her majesty finding the error, ordered another servant girl to slap her five ten times on each cheek. This girl did not slap hard enough to her majesty told the one who had been slapped to slap the other. I thought that was too funny for anything and wanted to laugh the worst way but did not dare."—Two Years in the Forbidden City, by the Princess Der Ling.

Affection.

It is sublime to feel and say of another, I need never meet, speak or write to him; we need not reinforce ourselves or send tokens of remembrance.—Emerson.

House Boss in Egypt.

Old Mr. Egyptian carried a stick or a small club about the house with him and laid it upon his women like a thousand of brick whenever they disobeyed or displeased him. In the graves the mummies show that nearly every woman had a forearm fracture. When Mr. Egyptian came home in a bad humor he would sail into her with a stiff stick, and as the arm was thrown to protect the face it was generally broken while warding off the blow.

Chinese Advertising.

In their native land Chinese have their own peculiar way of advertising. The biscuits bear the imprint of the baker, and ducks bought in the Celestial markets frequently show on their backs a big red stamp bearing the name of the seller.

Men Need Help—Not Charity.

There is a higher duty than to build almshouses for the poor, and that is to save men from being degraded to the blighting influence of an almshouse. Man has a right to something more than bread to keep him from starving. He has a right to the aids and encouragements and culture, by which he may fulfill the destiny of a man, and until society is brought to recognize and reverence this it will continue to groan under its present miseries.—Channing.

Women Rigidly Excluded.

Malwatchin, on the borders of Russia in Asia, is the only city in the world peopled by men only. Chinese women are not only forbidden to live in this territory, but even to pass the great wall of Kalkan and enter into Mongolia.

"LET'S SEE WHAT'S IN IT"

OLDFISH ON NEW YEAR'S

"ANOTHER year!" exclaimed Dr. Oldfish. "Tomorrow and tomorrow come and pass away, gathered to their ancestral yesterdays." A tone of sadness, like the bite of frost on the persimmon, mellowed the voice of the doctor even as he stood at the threshold of the glad New Year But this was only for a moment. His usual good nature bubbled over again. He shook hands all round and most cheerily gave the greetings incidental to the season.

"Ah," said the doctor, "what a world it is. You remember the lines of the old song? I don't quite, but the sentiment is one to give us confidence, 'So let the wide world wag as it will, I'll be gay and happy still.' Yet there are some things which call for the work of the reformer. Perhaps the hour is not yet come to amend the long established impersonations of the seasons. Then, too we must continue to endure the signs of the zodiac, cut rather low in the neck as they are for modest kitchens, while nudity continues to revel unabashed on the parlor walls and behind the counters of hotel barrooms. Neither may one stand forth with the abandon of a martyr and declare against the shamelessness of the clotheslessness of the New Year, that absurd cold storage variety of Cupid. Such a toilette or lack of toilette should suggest his translation to a home for the feeble-minded.

"Would it not be more reasonable to suppose Time, now moving into new premises (not into a flat—but to be a home for a year at least) must needs have a blithe, buxom, rosy-cheeked maid of all work to make the place bright, cheerful and hospitable, for there will be many guests to entertain three of the seasons at least—spring, summer, autumn—as unmarried female persons. Let us picture Time with this maid, who, coming at the beginning of leap year, boldly pops the question and marries out of hand. taking the place of that grouchy Dame December, who is dismissed somewhat summarily and sent packing over the hills.

"As for Father Time, he never becomes old, 'his acts being seven ages.' 'Filled with wise saws and modern instances,' he nobly plays his part; never falls 'into the lean and slippered pantaloon,' never requires patching by the bushelman or cobbler, or repairs at the dentist's or wigmaker's.

"There never was but one mortal that seriously tried to stay in the prolonged Marathon race with Time That was the grand old man, Methuselah, and he had to give up beaten at 969 years—a foolish contest, as Time, rare old athlete that he is, not only knows all the rubs, but is the sole patentee and possessor of the vainly sought elixir of life.

"It is well there never was but one human being who carried the burden of mortality such a preposterous number of years, until it became an irradicate habit. Imagine how two or three Methuselahs in this age would disarrange the expectancy of life and disturb the most carefully and adroitly arranged mortuary tables. Think what a continuing affront a terrestial lingerer like that would be even to the most patient and conservative funeral director and to the old sexton as he mumbles his deep bass song 'I Gather Them In, Gather Them In.' What a relief it was at last when the grand old man was gathered to his fathers and ceased to be the pioneer settler and oldest inhabitant, the last authority on the coldest winter and the hottest summer of whom all stood in awe, who knew everything that had ever happened in Mesopotamia and who if he were alive today would probably be able to give the names of all the vice presidents of the United States!

"And yet how brief is the record of this modest man, this first conservative citizen of the world—Methuselah—the son of Enoch, sixth in descent from Seth and the father of Lamech. It is all given in three verses in the fifth chapter of Genesis. He undoubtedly was a man of substance. One may be permitted to wonder how many attempts were made to 'interest' him in various 'enterprises' framed in the bluest of turquoise, with a view of separating him from his money or its equivalent in cattle, or sheep or the fruits of the field. For in that day as in this there doubtless were admirable tellers of short stories, horse traders with a wonderful gift of language, real estate men who could paint a landscape of bewitching beauty—but, alas, we have no account of them and as there are no precedents, when Sinbad the Sailor and Baron Munchausen propose to let us in on a good thing, why, we have to look out for ourselves, that is all. It is at this season of the year that the wicked magician that gave Aladdin all his fortune and all his misfortune may be expected to appear either by prospectus through the mail or in the person of an agent.

"Oh," said the doctor.

"The 'new lamps for old ones' offered by the magician is by no means as seducing a bargain as these modern magicians will offer you. It may be an orange grove in Florida or California, a fig farm in Arizona, a date palm enterprise in Texas, a cranberry patch in New Jersey, mining stock almost anywhere or shares—and how magnificent the prospectus—in something quite as good as those two famous companies written about by Charles Dickens—"The Anglo-Bengalee Disinterested Loan and Life Insurance Company' and 'The United Metropolitan Hot Muffin and Crumpet Baking and Punctual Delivery Company.' So when we turn over the new leaf this first day of January, 1913, after turning it over and carefully reading the prospectus, let us warily turn back and when we go forward let us go in the old way to which we have become accustomed."

ROYAL BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure

[From a series of elaborate chemical tests.]

Comparative digestibility of food made with different baking powders.

An equal quantity of bread (biscuit) was made with each of two kinds of baking powder—cream of tartar and alum—and submitted separately to the action of the digestive fluid, each for the same length of time.

The percentage of the food digested is shown as follows:

Bread made with Royal Cream of Tartar Powder:

99 Per Cent. Digested

Bread made with alum powder:

67 Per Cent. Digested

Royal Baking Powder raised food is shown to be of greatly superior digestibility and healthfulness.

Song for the Year's End

By Wilbur D. Nesbit.

The sands that count the year are low wit! in the upper glass,
They slip away, these little years, so swiftly
do they pass;
They flit like shadows to and fro the longer
we may live—
But, ah, they take no more from us than they may freely give!
They take the song, mayhap, but leave the echoes sweet that hum—
The year is dying, but there is another year
to come.

Then why gaze at the trickling sand with heavy sigh and frown?
Turn it down! Turn it down!
There are smiles and laughter waiting where
the other joys came from.
Turn it down! Turn it down!
There's another year to come.

Another year is coming—now its hailing call we hear—
With golden smiles to pay us for each jewel of a tear,
With clover nodding in the rain and dew upon
the rose,
With silver store of moonlight, and with
ivory of snows,
With lilting laughter for the lips that long time have been dumb—
The year is dying, but there is another year
to come.

Why hold the glass and watch the sand with gloomy sigh and frown?
Turn it down! Turn it down!
The melodies of joys to be already throb and thrum—
Turn it down! Turn it down!
There's another year to come.

It is the twilight of the year—the sands are almost gone;
But turn the glass and wait to see the glory
of the dawn,
And wait to hear the mellow chord that
pulses with each word
That will build up the coming song—the song
you've never heard.
Why brood above the days now gone, and seek to find the sum
Of bitterness and happiness? Another year's
to come.

So turn the glass and start anew the current golden brown—
Turn it down! Turn it down!
There are light and laughter lurking where
the other joys came from.
Turn it down! Turn it down!
There's another year to come.

NEW YEAR CARDS AND CALENDARS

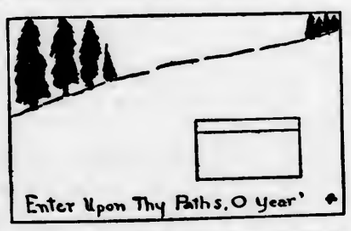
WITH the New Year gradually dawning we must not be caught unprepared to greet it. Good wishes for the welfare of our friends during the coming year must be conveyed by some means or other. Very few people are fortunate enough to have their friends living near, that they may extend verbally their wishes for the new year. The next best medium for this purpose is the New Year's card. Of course these cards may be purchased at the shops, but it is very much nicer to be original.

It is rather an expensive proposition to buy these cards from artists if the friends happen to be numerous. Why not make them yourself?

Here are given a few designs to be used for New Year's calendars. They are pretty and dainty, much more attractive than postcards. Not much time is required to make them and scarcely any expense besides the paper and water colors.

Have a piece of carbon paper, some smooth water color paper and the box of water colors. Place the carbon paper between the design and the paper and carefully trace the outline. A replica of the design will be transferred ready for tinting.



The snow scene would be effective tinted in tones of brown or gray. Make the path a dull lead color, the tall poplar trees dark gray, almost black, and the sky a bluish gray. The lettering could be of brown or gold.

The small calendar pads can be bought for two or three cents. These are fastened to the pictures with mucilage.

January's emblem is the snowdrop The next design introduces that white, delicate blossom. Any subdued color may be used for the background against which the flowers are thrown out in relief. The blossoms are a pure blue white and the stems a dark green. The lettering may be black or any dark, neutral color.

The sun-dial design is most appropriate and suggests much. We want it to mark off only happy hours. You desire to be a friend as sincere and true as the angle cast by the shadow of the sun. The climbing ivy is evergreen and clings always to the trellis unless torn away by some outside force. There is unlimited depth of meaning connected with the sun dial.

The pedestal should be colored white. to represent marble; the metal angle of the sun dial yellow or bronze color, the ivy a dark, rich green. The background and numerals may be tinted any color to suit the personal taste.

These little calendars are sure to be liked and admired by all who receive them. Take advantage of this novel manner to express your New Year's greetings.

PALMER NEWS.

Death of Henry L. Gray.

Well-known Resident Passes Away at Advanced Age of 81.

Henry L. Gray, 81, died about 8 o'clock Tuesday evening at the home of his daughter, Mrs. G. A. Rice with whom he had lived for some time. Death was due to Bright's disease, from which he had suffered for some time.

Mr. Gray was born in Unity, N. H., in 1831. Later he lived in Rutland, Vt., for seven years and came to Palmer in 1872. For a number of years he conducted the eating house in the station of the New London Northern railroad, all trains on that line at that time stopping at Palmer "30 minutes for lunch." When the station was abolished to make room for the union passenger station of the Boston and Albany and the New London Northern roads he moved his business to Bridge street, where he continued it for some time but finally disposed of it. Mr. Gray was for 17 years the janitor of the Palmer high school, and served the Congregational church 13 years in the same capacity; he was also for several years janitor of the Palmer grammar school. He had been retired for several years.

Mr. Gray was twice married, his first wife being Sophia Nichols of Unity, N. H.; she died in 1868. In 1870 he married Sarah A. Pierson of Acworth, N. H., who died in 1889. He leaves, besides his daughter, a twin sister, Mrs. O. L. Slader of Providence, R. I., and three grandchildren, Sophia, Edward and Clarence Rice of Palmer.

The funeral was held yesterday afternoon at 3 at the home of his daughter, Rev. F. S. Brewer officiating. Mrs. A. D. Norcross of Monson sang three selections. The body will be taken to Unity, N. H., to-morrow morning for burial.

Most Enjoyable Entertainment.

First in Lyceum Course Given Friday Evening in Opera House.

The first entertainment in the Palmer lyceum course—Miss Katherine Ridgeway, reader—was given in the opera house last Friday evening. A large audience was present and listened to a rare treat. Miss Ridgeway fully justified all the good things which the press and the few who had previously heard her had to say of her abilities as an entertainer. She gave a varied program, ranging from the serious to the humerous and pathetic, and drew tears to the eyes of a large portion of the audience by her exquisite rendering of a Christmas story which, while not in the least a sad story, taught a moral and touched the hearts of all who heard it. In addition to being a reader of unusual quality Miss Ridgeway is a most accomplished actress, and added to several of her pieces little touches without which they would have fallen flat indeed. An unusual tribute paid to her ability was the fact that—noted by those who were in a position to see—that during the rendition of her numbers there was not the slightest inattention or any conversation among her hearers; everyone seemed afraid lest they lose some word which she might speak. With Miss Ridgeway as pianist was Miss Agnsta Gautsch of Boston, who was obliged to change her whole program on account of the condition of the piano given her. It was a rank injustice to Miss Gautsch, as her performance on the opera house instrument gave an indication of her capabilities under agreeable conditions. Word that a piano was required was received by the committee too late to replace the one in the house.

Post Office Christmas Rush.

Biggest in Its History, But Handled in Expeditious Manner.

The clerks at the post office are glad that the 1912 Christmas mail wasn't any heavier than it was; the carriers are rejoiced to think it will be twelve months before they have to go through with the stunt of delivering Christmas mail again. The rush at the post office—both incoming and outgoing—was the largest in the history of the office.

Evidently the "Shop early" slogan had been heeded to a large extent, for the outgoing rush began last week, gradually increasing in volume until the flood was reached on Monday and Tuesday. Monday was the big day, and when the windows were closed at night the force was fairly buried in Christmas packages of all sizes, shapes and kinds. It was all cleaned out before the force left the building however. Tuesday was another big day, and Tuesday and Wednesday brought the heaviest of the incoming mail. An extra force of clerks was put on in the office, and the carriers were reinforced by a man and team the first three days of the week to deliver packages; the combination was worked hard all the time. There were a few thousands of Christmas cards to handle, and the registry business was also unusually large.

Miss Marion Holdsworth of Framingham normal school and Miss Marcia Holdsworth of Turners Falls have been guests of their grandmother, Mrs. Emily M. Holdsworth of Park street.

Testimony of the Blind.

Before the trial was half ended it was apparent that most credence was placed in the testimony for the defendant.

"That is because he has two blind men testifying for him," said a man who has served on many juries. "When it comes to a question of memory the word of a blind man goes further in a courtroom than that of a person with good eyes. It is with the jurymen that his testimony really counts, but the judge and lawyers are also impressed. This is taking into consideration, of course, that the blind man has a reputation for veracity. We assume that with the loss of one faculty others have developed. What a man cannot see he hears, and his mind stores up. Our faith in the retentiveness of a blind man's memory has been frequently justified. Where a person with all his senses would become confused and testify vaguely, the blind man can repeat a conversation verbatim."

For Psychical Research.

One of the most remarkable London clubs is the International Club of Psychical Research, in Regent street. It has no concern with merely earthly things. Although the club has only been founded a few months, it has already over 500 members. Every possible "ist" is represented. There are theosophists, spiritists, phrenologists, psychologists, spiritualists, mesmerists, and so on.

Didn't Seem to Suit Him.

Bobbie, aged four, had always played with older boys and consequently had picked up much slang. Recently his mother had punished him by giving him a spanking. A little later, still weeping, he came to his mother and said: "Mother, don't you love me at all any more?" "Why, yes, Bobby, why?" "Well, I don't think that 'stunt' you pulled off just now looks much like it."

Among the Churches.

Services at the Congregational church Sunday will be as usual, with preaching by the pastor morning and evening; Sunday school at 12; Christian Endeavor meeting at 6; in the evening at 7 the pastor continues his series of sermons on sacred places, "Jordan, the place of consecration."

Sunday school at the Advent chapel Sunday afternoon at 2. Preaching at 3 by the pastor, Rev. J. T. Mechan subject, "Those who are called, according to God's purpose." Prayer meeting Wednesday evening at 8.30; subject, "The faithful past and the important future."

Woman's Sense of Honor.

On this point women are still not entirely in agreement. "Sense of honor?" said one young woman to whom the question was brought up; "Women's sense of honor? They haven't any." On the other hand, an older lady—one who is wise through long and sweet living—answered, "Sense of honor? Of course women have it—as high as any man's. Only—I should want to choose my woman." Where, then, does the truth lie?—Atlantic.

Comfort in the Thought.

Patricia possesses the four-year-old's usual aversion to water for cleansing purposes and is most sparing of its application to her small face. The other evening before going to bed she gave her reflection in the mirror a careful scrutiny and remarked: "Well, my face is pretty clean. I b'lieve it'll do for tomorrow."

May Call Sympathetic Strike.

Mass Meeting Held in Thorndike Last Evening.

A mass meeting of the help employed in the mills operated by the Thorndike Company in Thorndike, the Palmer Mill in Three Rivers and the Boston Duck Company in Bondsville, all of whom are members of the Federation of Labor, was held in St. Joseph's hall in Thorndike last evening. The meeting was called to see what action the local union would take regarding the present trouble at the mills of the Thorndike Company in West Warren. The speakers were principally from the organization at West Warren. The object of the meeting was to induce the local union to strike in sympathy with the West Warren employes, who have been out of work for several weeks owing to some local grievance. It is understood that there is considerable opposition to a strike by the members of the union in Palmer, and that they admit they have no wage grievance. However, the officers of the Palmer union have telegraphed to the head officials of the order, asking their advice as to whether the local union would be justified in calling a sympathetic strike, and until word has been received no further action will be taken here. The majority of the members of the union are Polish people.

Head Pounded With Rock.

Foreman on Hampden Railroad Badly Hurt Monday by Employe.

James Walsh, a foreman employed on the Hampden railroad construction, is at his home in New Haven nursing a badly battered head, the result of an assault Monday night by one of the employes under him. What the cause was is not known, but there had been some trouble between the men. Monday night matters culminated in the assailant picking up a large stone and striking Walsh several blows on the head before he could be stopped. The men were finally separated and the fellow who did the assaulting skipped. Walsh did not appear to be seriously injured, but the next morning his head began to swell and there were indications of a fractured skull. As his home was in New Haven he was sent there by his friends, since which time nothing has been heard from him.

Damages in Runaway Case.

Plaintiff and Defendant Both of Palmer. Award of $358.

In the jury-waived sitting of the superior court in Springfield last Friday Judge Richard W. Irwin gave his decision in the case of Mrs. Ellen L. Twiss of Three Rivers against Charles W. Darling of Bondsville, awarding the plaintiff $358.50 for damages done to her carriage by that of the defendant. The horse of the latter ran away on July 25, 1911, colliding with the carriage of the plaintiff and damaging it materially. Suit for $500 was instituted and the case was heard last week Wednesday.

Mr. Burleigh was a son of the late Benjamin A. Burleigh and formerly lived at the Burleigh homestead on the Three Rivers road.

There has been a touch of real winter this week. Snow began to fall Monday night, and when it ceased Tuesday afternoon there was from three to four inches. A few sleighs were out on Christmas day. Tuesday night the mercury dropped suddenly and registered 6 degrees below Christmas morning. The weather moderated during the day however, and continued warmer yesterday, terminating in rain which began late in the night last night, this changing to snow again this afternoon.

The many baseball fan friends of Mr. Mullen will of course remember this famous team. He will return in ten days and take up his duties again as manager of Kinsman's Under-Price Basement.

Aid to the Unlovely.

"I try to be an efficient city directory," said the hotel clerk, "but balk of recommending a beauty doctor to women guests.

"That is one of the first things they want to know. Churches, theaters, even dressmakers can wait a few days, but the beauty doctor is an immediate necessity. Unfortunately, they do not get much satisfaction out of me. Any number of beauty specialists leave cards for distribution, but so many of them have been mixed up in lawsuits that I feel squeamish about delivering their cards. To satisfy my own conscience and the women at the same time I hand out a bunch of advertisements with the remark that I guess they are about all alike.

'Then they can pay their money and take their choice, and if they lose their hair and complexion they can't come back on me for damages."

"Bear Talk" Efficacious.

"Bear talk" was always considered "good medicine" by the Indians. If a bear blocked their path, they addressed him politely, reminding him of their common brotherhood, praising his nobility and requesting him kindly to allow them an unmolested passage. This, it is said, he frequently did, for, being by nature inoffensive, the soft accents did not disturb him, and so he would go on his way.

THORNDIKE.

Death of Mrs. Eliza J. Clark.

Mrs. Eliza J. Clark, 78, wife of Benjamin F. Clark, died at her home on Saturday after several weeks' illness. Mrs. Clark was an old resident of this place, was favorably known and had many friends. Mrs. Clark was the daughter of Oliver and Sally H. Shaw, and was born in Ware May 2, 1834. She was married to Benjamin F. Clark in 1857, and since their marriage has resided in Thorndike with the exception of a few years spent in Chicopee. She leaves, besides a husband, two daughters, Mrs. W. F. Fillmore of Palmer and Miss Cora B. Clark, at home. The funeral was held Tuesday afternoon from her late home on Commercial street, Rev. Frank S. Brewer of Palmer officiating; Miss Blanche Upham of Three Rivers sang "The Sweet Bye and Bye" and "Rock of Ages"; burial was in the family lot at Four Corners. The bearers were Joseph A. Davis, Martin M. Thomas, Thomas A. McCrea and Rupert V. Carter.

Christmas Celebration.

There was a very pleasant Christmas gathering on Christmas Eve at the home of Mrs. Edward Ogle in Palmer Center where a Christmas tree well laden with gifts was a part of the evening's program. A fine supper with all the "fixin's" was also served. The affair was given under the auspices of the Old Center Village Improvement society. The guests were members of the society, their families and invited guests. A general good time prevailed.

There was a large attendance at Union hall to hear the speakers from Springfield who are endeavoring to organize a social council of the Loyal Order of Moose. Joe Lamery rendered vocal selections.

The cold weather of the past week has made it possible to enjoy skating on some of the nearby ponds, but not with absolute safety however. Some venturesome skaters went into the ice at Forest Lake and had a narrow escape from drowning.

The Christmas tree exercises at the Congregational church, which were held Christmas Eve were largely attended and very much enjoyed. A musical and literary entertainment was given by the children of the Sabbath school. Santa Claus was present and distributed many gifts to the young and old.

Christmas was very generally observed in town, and in a pleasing manner. There were many trees among the families, while numerous other houses were illuminated with candles. A company went from house to house singing Christmas carols. The attendance at the churches was large. The day was an ideal one and reminded the older residents of the Christmas days of long ago.

The various grades in the grammar school building united Friday afternoon in their Christmas exercises and held them in the hall. The programme was a varied and enjoyable one and reflected much credit on teachers and pupils who had put much time into the preparations. The programme was a lengthy one, consisting of recitations, songs and dialogues. After the exercises presents were distributed from a well laden tree.

There were large congregations present Christmas Day at the three masses, celebrated at 7, 8 and 10 o'clock by Rev. P. J. Griffin, pastor of St. Mary's church, and the Christmas offerings were very generous. The church was decorated with evergreens, holly and ferns. A representation of the stable at Bethelhem was erected on the Epistle side of the sanctuary. The Christmas music was well rendered by the choir. Repairs are still in progress on the interior of the church and will not be completed for several weeks to come.

SOME QUAINT NEW YEAR OBSERVANCES

It has always been customary for the civilized races to see the Old Year out and the New Year in with demonstrations of merriment and conviviality. Schemes of all kinds are introduced by wealthy Londoners for welcoming the New Year at banquets on the night of December 31.

In many parts of Britain there are dozens of singular and attractive ways of celebrating the commencement of another year, the quaint ceremonies, as a rule, being carried out in the same manner they were observed generations ago.

An old custom which has a good deal to recommend it takes place at Holmes chapel, Middlewich, Cheshire For many years past the bell-ringers of the parish have rung in the New Year and then made their way to a couple of local hostelries, there to be entertained by the landlords free of expense.

A quaint custom takes place at Sunderland on January 1st. Early on New Year's morning the mayor of the borough, accompanied by the mayoress, pays a visit to the town workhouse, and performs the ceremony of "crowning" the oldest inmates. The crown used is a five-shilling piece, the coin being placed on the head of each of the inmates selected for the honor. The money they receive in this way may be spent by them in any manner they think proper.

At Coventry it is the custom to eat "God-cakes" on New Year's eve, and on December 30 and 21 the bakers of that city are busy turning out the delicacies by the hundredweight. A "God-cake" is triangular in shape, about half an inch thick, and filled with a kind of mince-meat; in fact, it is a glorified mince-pie.

There are scores of superstitions associated with the beginning of a New Year which the average person knows nothing about.

It is considered unlucky for the male inhabitants of the little island in the North Sea to be visited by a member of the fair sex on New Year's day, while fires must not be put out on that day in the south of England, or the luck of the year will be exceptionally bad.

On the continent, especially in out-of-the-way villages, it is customary for food and drink to be put on a table outside the houses on New Year's eve. This is not to feed the hungry, but to keep goblins from forcing their way within. But why goblins should be afraid of food cannot be explained.

"Happy New Year!"

"We are on the threshold of a new year. We do not know what the year holds for us, but we are not afraid of it. We have learned to look for kindness and goodness in all our paths, and so we go forward with glad hope and expectation."—J. R. Miller.

Easy Explanation.

"'Why, Giorgio, there is ten minutes difference between my watch and the hall clock since Sunday! Which is wrong of the two? Is my watch ten minutes too slow or the clock ten minutes too fast?' 'Your watch is all right, sir,' said he grimly, 'because he very warm in your pocket; click stand out in cold hall, he go faster to warm himself.'"—The Later Letters of Edward Lear.

Conscience Inspires Aid.

A Yonkers clergyman, whose name was not made public, advertised for the owner of a man's watch lost and found in North Broadway three years ago. The minister said a recent convert of his church found the timepiece and his conscience was pricking him.

IT'S A MISTAKE

Made By Many Palmer Residents.

Many people in a misguided effort to get rid of kidney backache, rely on plasters, liniments and other makeshifts. The right treatment is kidney treatment, and a remarkably recommended kidney medicine is Doan's Kidney Pills. Palmer is no exception.

The proof is at your very door. The following is an experience typical of the work of Doan's Kidney Pills in Palmer.

Mrs. William H. King, 406 Main St., Palmer, Mass., says: "I had kidney complaint for years and was steadily growing worse. I was rarely free from a dull, bearing-down pain in my back and the kidney secretions bothered me. My head also ached and I had dizzy spells. Finally my husband obtained a box of Doan's Kidney Pills for me at Lynde & Gould's Drug Store (now J. P. Lynde's Drug Store) and I began their use. They restored me to good health and at that time I gave a public statement, telling of my experience. It is a pleasure for me to confirm all I have previously said in praise of this remedy."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States

Kept Track of Food Consumed.

It is, of course, not easy to estimate the amount of food consumed by each of us in a year, but one dietetic expert who kept a record of his meals during twelve months declares that he ate 180 loaves of bread, 180 pounds of meat, drank 61 gallons of milk, and ate no fewer than 300 eggs, in addition to other things.—London Tit-Bits.

Cats Killed for Pelts?

Thirty cats, kept by the Paris custom house authorities to destroy the rats, which do great damage to the goods, disappeared mysteriously a few nights ago. It is thought they were killed for their pelts on account of the great rise in the market price of skins which are used in the manufacture of fashionable furs.

Only Country Without Typewriters.

Typewriters are now made for use in nearly a hundred different languages, and they are sold all over the world; but there is still one great nation which, for a very simple reason, has no typewriters that write its tongue. That nation is China.

Aerial Photographs Next.

The inventor of a special aero-camera, says that among other uses for photography from the sky view point, land companies will be able to display aerial photographs of suburban development, merchants to advertise their location in a city. He says genuine motion pictures of journeys through cloudland will some day be as common as present day snapshots.

Peculiar Inscription.

Not many years ago, in the Temple Court, London, was a sun dial with the motto: "Be gone about your business." This unusual inscription arose from the "builder's man" calling to receive orders about it, when the bencher in charge was so busy that he did not listen, but said: "Be gone about your business," which the man took as his answer and forthwith engraved.

Must Be Pretty Bad.

Guayaquil is one of the vilest pestholes in the world, surpassing even Suez, which Kipling has invested with a hideous immortality.—New York Commercial.

Was His Time to Die.

A very strange incident occurred at Vauyert, France, during a recent storm. A man eighty years of age was caught up by a whirlwind and hurled over a hayrick. He came down in safety on the other side, but as his friends were congratulating him on his escape the old man was killed by lightning, which spared the other men who were standing around him.

Away From Dust of Autos.

The increase of motoring and the consequent increase of dust have, to some considerable extent, changed the value of villa and hotel sites in visitors' resorts. The choice, especially in the south of France and Italy, is now much in favor of houses well away from the main road, and even well outside towns.

Cause and Effect.

"Women are not happy because they are good; they are good, capable of expanding to the uttermost, when they are happy."—"Blinds Down," by H. A. Vachell.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

THE PARTING GUEST

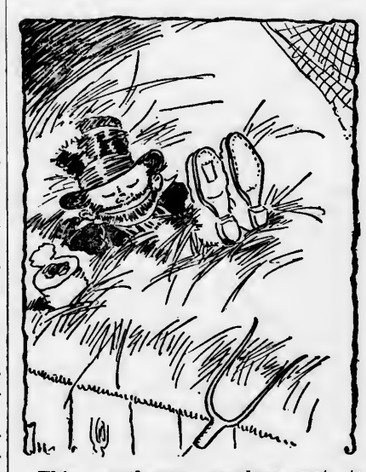
Where are the good things promised me
By the Old Year that is dying?
And what care I how ill he be
Who was so given to lying?
A comely youth, he sought my door
And tarried till his locks were hoar;
A fair and foul, capricious guest,
Who swore to give me of his best;
Who pledged himself a true year;
But he was then—the New Year.

Where are the silver and the gold
Ere now should fill my wallet?
What mean these scanty clothes and old,
This attic room and pallet?
The purse he dangled in my view
Betwixt his juggling hands slipped through.
He found me poor, he left me poorer;
But now a richer friend, and surer,
Awaits me—in the New Year.

Where are the poet's bays he said
My dulcet song should gain me?
The wreath that was to crown my head,
Th' applause that should sustain me?
Alack! round other brows than mine
I see the fresh-won laurels twine!
Still, for the music's sake, I sing;
The world may listen yet, and fling
Its garland—in the New Year.

Where is the one dear face to love
His golden months should bring me,
Whose smile a recompense would prove
For all the ills that sting me?
My heart still beats in loneliness;
There is no darling hand to press;
But, oh, I dream we yet shall meet,
And trust to find her kisses sweet,
And win her—in the New Year.



Where are the works in patience wrought;
The grace to love my neighbor;
The sins left off; the wisdom taught
Of suffering and labor;
The fuller life; the strength to wait;
The equal heart for either fate?
Well may I speed the parting guest,
And take this stranger to my breast!
Be thou, indeed, a true year,
O fair and welcome New Year!

—Edmund Clarence Stedman, in The Century
